—the local Valuer must make two reports, one for the Municipality, and one for the owner of the livestock.

—if either of these is not satisfied with the report, he may appeal to the Minister of Agriculture for another Valuer by depositing $25.00. This money is returned if the appeal is successful but is forfeited if the appeal is lost.

—the award made by the Valuer appointed by the Minister is final.

VOICE of the PRESS

CANADA AND THE EMPIRE

THE WORLD AT LARGE

CANADA

Not Over Yet

When it is found necessary to open a special prison camp in British Columbia to house unemployed disturbers it is idle to talk about the depression being completely over.—Peterborough Examiner.

Tribute to Nurses

It is a tribute to Canadian nurses that their services constantly are being sought in the United States. In fact, Canadians are numerous and highly placed in all the professions across the border. This can have but one meaning; ability and zeal.—Toronto Globe and Mail.

Exemplary Punishment

Last week a man was convicted of manslaughter before Mr. Justice Denis of Joliette, Quebec, in connection with a "hit-and-run" fatality, and Judge Denis sent him to penitentiary for seven years. That, we should say, was an adequate penalty, and more of the kind would have an extremely salutary effect.— Ottawa Journal.

Shin Plasters

What motive inspired the Bank of Canada to abolish the twenty-five-cent note, the shin plaster? Surely no economy was involved. Did anybody find it a nuisance? A good many found it a convenience for small remittances when a postal note or money order seemed hardly worth while. Children loved it.—Saint John Telegraph-Journal.

People Will Demand It

The secretary of the Ontario Medical Association is on safe ground in asserting that state health insurance will come in this country. It will arrive, with or without the assent of the medical profession, because the people at large will demand, as they are already demanding, some relief from the heavy financial burdens accompanying sickness and hospitalization—Brockville Recorder and Times.

Thrill of Plowing

"What was the attraction?" probably the first question many persons asked on reading the news despatch reporting an attendance of 25,000 people on the second day and 45,000 on the third day of the International Plowing Match at Fergus.

Fergus being a town with no great population it would be readily assumed that a large percentage of the people came from outside points. It would be further assumed that only a small percentage of those 45,000 actually took part in the contest.

The answer, of course, would be obvious to anybody who knows anything about plowing. There is nothing like the thrill which accompanies plowing a straight furrow, and when you can't do the plowing yourself the best thing is to watch.—Windsor Star.

Co-ordination Is Necessary

Since unemployment is a most urgent social and economic problem, it is extremely necessary that the Dominion and the provinces should get together on this matter with the least possible delay. There should be a central administration under a highly capable executive head, and the different branches throughout the Dominion should be under able directors. The expenditure on relief continues higher than necessary because of lack of an efficient system for placing the unemployed in jobs. Why should this remain so? The great scarcity of skilled workers in some parts of the country will suggest bringing in immigrants of this class. Why bring in outsiders if there are Canadians who are qualified for the jobs, or can be fitted for them? Unemployment insurance will be adopted in some way before long. Then it will be expedient to keep unemployment at a minimum, and this will require a fully organized and aggressive employment service. There is every reason for abandoning the present policy of drift. For the sake of the taxpayers and also of the unemployed, the Dominion and the provinces should lose no time in establishing an efficient, co-ordinated employment service, which can be modified later if necessary.—Winnipeg Free Press.

THE EMPIRE

Who Will Guarantee?

"The will for peace," President Roosevelt declares, "must express itself to the end that nations attempting to violate agreements and the rights of others will desist from such a course." In that event "the will for peace" takes a curious shape, for what is to be done about the nations which, in the late President Wilson's words, "do not intend peace or justice"? It is easy to say that "injustices and well-founded grievances" should be removed; but who is to be the judge of them, and who is to guarantee that the aggrieved will be satisfied with what others decide to be justice?—Telegraph and Morning Post (London).

Crazy World, Crazy Money

Henry Ford once said: "The yard is always 36 inches, but when is a dollar a dollar?" The man in the street reads of Wall Street slumps in share prices, of the rocketing franc, of the jumpiness of stock exchanges, and the failure of brokers. And the man in the street can be excused for thinking that finance has gone crazy. But the explanation is simple enough—a world nervous and ill at ease, the Mediterranean full of warships, soldiers of four or five nations fighting in Spain. And on top of it Japan's savage war on China. How can trade flourish or the world get on with its job of sharing the abundance that science has made possible? So long as the world is crazy finance will be crazy, too.—London Sunday Chronicle.

War's Horrors Will Increase

Ramsay MacDonald Warns Association For Advancement Of Science

Former Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, addressing the British Association for the Advancement of Science, discussed the effects of modern science on warfare.

He said China and Spain had shown the great advance attributable to science in the destructive forces of so-called civilization. These would be repeated with increased horror wherever war broke out.

Cannot Avoid Worst

"If we cannot avoid war, we cannot avoid the worst that can happen in warfare," he said, in delivering the first Radford Mather lecture to the association. 'But let us not be misled by thinking scientists as such can stop war."

The action of the farmer in growing wheat and food for war, he continued, was akin to the engineer turning out improved flying engines. But it was false judgment and cowardly for one to blame them if peace was not secured.

Wants Practical Democracy

"The plea I make is for practical democracy, but if democracy is to triumph in the attack now being made, it must have method, and I believe the records of the scientific worker and the way he sets about his work will steady and clarify the popular mind not only to complain eloquently, but to conclude wisely," the former Prime Minister declared.

A return to bows and arrows, he added, would not remove the grievances of nations, for which they will fight, or supply the enlightened diplomacy which can keep peace without injury to a nation's sense of injustice.

Romantic Trade of Past Thrives in Far Corners

The Ivory Trade Is Carried On In Africa, Chiefly — Used For Billiard Balls and Piano Keys

Commerce in the days when sailing barques, laden with "strange cargoes of ivory, apes and peacocks," plied the seven seas was invested with a certain glamor. Even today, in this more prosaic industrial age, a few of the romantic trades of the past still flourish in out-of-the-way spots of the earth. One of these is the ivory trade, writes Frank K. Linge in Barron's Financial Weekly.

Africa Chief Source

Africa is now the chief source of the ivory supply. From East Coast Zanzibar and Mombasa, trading centres for British Kenya Colony and Uganda, and Mozambique, port of Portuguese East Africa, regular shipments are made. Supplies are also obtained in the Sudan and Central and West Coast regions, chiefly the Congo, Cameroon and Nigeria. Russia ships annually a small quantity of mammoth tusks unearthed in Siberia, of an age estimated at 1,000 to 50,000 years. Siam provides a small quota obtained from tame elephants who have died of old age.

Shoot Their Ivory

At one time practically all the ivory brought on to the market was found dead in the jungle and collected by native expeditions from "cemeteries" where elephants in that region find their way to die. It is estimated that now about 50 per cent are shot, although slaughtering of the animals is strictly controlled.

Hippos Produce It Too

Besides the elephant, the ivory produced by some other animals is of commercial value and use. For example, the hippopotamus, or seahorse, has two immense canine teeth or tusks, six others which are curved in the upper jaw, and six straight in the lower jaw. Various species of wild-boar— notably the warthog of South Africa—produce quantities of ivory. Among marine animals there is the sperm-whale, which has immense jaws full of unusual looking teeth, and the walrus whose long tusks projecting downwards are in many instances fine quality ivory, and were at one time extensively used.

London Central Market

London is the central market of the world for ivory, although the growth of the Congo trade has resulted in moderate quantities being shiped to Antwerp where sales are also held. Buyers from the United States and the continent, as well as purchasers representing the home trade, regularly attend the quarterly sales, which have been held for many years in the commercial sales rooms in Mincing Lane. All the ivory to be offered is stored and exhibited at the ivory warehouses at the London docks where it is inspected by buyers and valued according to quality.

Old English Estates Coming On Market

Many of Them Have Histories Linking Back to Early Days of England; Some Sold by Auction As Various Factors Enter Into Transactions

Historic British estates which date back several centuries, in some cases even to feudal days, have been coming into the market in large numbers recently.

Changing family fortunes, new designs for living and death have been some of the factors behind the many offerings at auction and private sales of vast holdings once occupied by English nobility.

Many of the time-worn structures figuring in the realty news there lately have in days gone by sheltered members of the royal family or outstanding figures in the literary life of the nation. Their very walls whisper of the colorful past.

Known to Dickens and Scott

One of these interesting places is the Rokeby Castle in Yorkshire, the home of the Morritt family since the early part of the seventeenth century. More than 1,100 acres comprising the eastern portion of this estate is to be auctioned.

Another estate of note which has come into the market is Broughton Place, near Maidstone, in Kent, where Queen Elizabeth once stayed on a visit to that county in the sixteenth century. The man who owned the place at that time was Thomas Wotton, Sheriff of Kent, who enlarged and beautified the house to make it suitable for his distinguished guest.

He is said to have "prayed to be excused" from knighthood and other honors which she offered him. Near the house stands an old yew tree, enclosed by a high ragstone wall. Tradition has it that the Queen planted this tree.

Held for 400 Years

The Wotton family held this estate for more than 400 years, and then it passed by marriage to the "great" Earl of Chesterfield. Later it became a part of the Kent estates of the Cornwallis family.

Just as in Canada and United States the large estates are difficult to sell because of the limited number of persons who can afford them, so in Britain many fine places "go begging." Many need modernization, taxes on them are high and upkeep is costly.

An example of this is found in the recent sale of Rousdon Mansion in East Devon, known as "one of the beauty spots of England." The buyer paid about $150,000, which was only a fraction of what the late Sir Henry Peek paid to erect it.

Oyster Produced Hundred Pearls

But They Were Too Small To Be Put On Sale

A nest of more than 100 pearls was found in a Whitstable native oyster opened at a famous restaurant in Coventry street, London, England, recently.

Robert Butler, one of the firm's eight oystermen, opened the oyster. Scores of pearls rolled on the floor.

Mr. Butler has been an oysterman for more than twenty years. He opens an average of 400 a day, so that oysters have no secrets from Mr. Butler. But he has never met such an oyster before.

Million a Year

In case you are thinking of going to Whitstable and starting the oyster rush of 1937, it should be stated that the pearls were exceedingly small and not of saleable value.

But, nevertheless, the firm, who sell a million oysters a year, cannot recall anything like it before and Mr. Butler says he has found bigger pearls in the past, but only one at a time.

The oyster in question will go down in history and not down someone's throat. It is being exhibited in a window.

It is now a traffic menace in Istanbul to stop a person in the street and ask for a match.

Commentary on the Highlights of the Week's News . . . by Peter Randal

Finance Wizard Resigns

Although Nazi officials dendied that any decision regarding Dr. Hjalmar Horace Greeley Schacht, German Minister of Economics, had been reached, Dr. Schacht considers himself discharged from office. The Minister, whose astounding feats of financial juggling the past few years have kept Germany's economic affairs on a workable basis, has long been at variance with certain of the Nazi leaders. Trouble first came to a head with the institution of the four-year plan sponsored by General Goering, the No. 2 Nazi. Asked about the Government's denial that he was leaving office, Dr. Schacht said: "The official announcement of my resignation will be made yesterday, today or tomorrow." The Minister desires also to withdraw from the presidency of the Reichsbank, the Government agency for the control of German banking. What will Germany do without him?

Ontario Trains Tourist Caterers

One of the newer vocations opening up for the young people of Ontario, especially now that the tourist trade is becoming a major industry, is the tourist-catering profession. Starting later this month or early in December, a course in wayside booth selling, advertising proper cabin accommodation and the care of overnight tourists will be made available to all young people interested, by the Women's Institutes Department of Ontario in connection with the National Employment Commission. Such a training will be of special use to young people in districts well travelled by tourists which are yet poor farming country.

News In Review

Ordered to Stand By

LONDON, Eng. — All British warships within wireless range were asked this week-end, Lloyd's reported, to assist the British steamer Stanray after it was fired on and halted by a Spanish insurgent trawler in the Bay of Biscay.

Prince Michael Honored

BUCHAREST.—His eyes sparkling with joy and pride, King Carol II this week placed on the shoulders of his son, Crown Prince Michael, who reached his 16th birthday, the stripe of a second lieutenant in the Rumanian army. A salute of 21 guns marked the occasion, considered here the most important event in the Rumanian Royal Family since the enthronement of Carol in 1930.

The King Opens Parliament

LONDON.—King George, addressing his Parliament for the first time in a Speech from the Throne, pledged his Government to work unceasingly for peace in Spain and in the Far East.

But he pledged the Government also to maintain the racing pace of its rearmament program—with special attention to anti-aircraft defence — so that if war comes, the country will be ready for it.

Robed in a mantle of red and black, collared with ermine, the King addressed members of the Houses of Lords and Commons, the Peers gorgeously attired in their robes of state, from his throne in the Lord's Chamber.

New Skyway

WASHINGTON. — Pennsylvania-Central Airlines formally opened a new skyway this week for passenger, mail and express traffic between Washington and Buffalo, a route that is expected to link eventually Ottawa and Washington.

Duce Ready to Plunge

ROME.—Premier Mussolini prepared this week-end, on the eve of the fifteenth anniversary of his "march on Rome, establishing fascism, to plunge into the Spanish civil war on a grand scale if the London non-intervention negotiations collapse, it was learned on excellent authority.

While 100,000 Black Shirts poured into Rome in ninety-three columns that tramped through the streets throughout the night, Il Duce conferred with his subordinates on stern measures to cope with any situation arising from a decision by Russia and France to resume "liberty of action" in Spain.

Revises Margin Requirements

WASHINGTON.—The United States Federal Reserve Board has announced a drastic revision in its stock market margin requirements. The move was expected by many Washington authorities to bolster sagging security prices.

Deprived of Citizenship

BERLIN.—Theodor Wolff, former editor of the Berlin Tageblatt, is on a list of sixty-seven Germans deprived of citizenship, published this week by the official Gazette. Wilhelm Dittmann, former Socialist in the Reichstag and one of the leaders of the revolution of 1918 after the armistice, also is named.

Sabotage In Palestine

JERUSALEM.—Unrest in Palestine was kept smouldering this week by new sabotage attempts against communications, railway staticns and police posts.

An attack was made on the Lydda railway station and a military vehicle en route from Namlus to Tulkarem was fired upon. Twelve telephone wires connecting Palestine with Egypt were cut near Rafa.

The Jerusalem-Hebron road was barricaded near Solomon's Pools and the telephone wires cut. Separate bands fired on the Ramleh and Lydda police stations.

Finance Wizard Resigns

Although Nazi officials dendied that any decision regarding Dr. Hjalmar Horace Greeley Schacht, German Minister of Economics, had been reached, Dr. Schacht considers himself discharged from office. The Minister, whose astounding feats of financial juggling the past few years have kept Germany's economic affairs on a workable basis, has long been at variance with certain of the Nazi leaders. Trouble first came to a head with the institution of the four-year plan sponsored by General Goering, the No. 2 Nazi. Asked about the Government's denial that he was leaving office, Dr. Schacht said: "The official announcement of my resignation will be made yesterday, today or tomorrow." The Minister desires also to withdraw from the presidency of the Reichsbank, the Government agency for the control of German banking. What will Germany do without him?

"By All Honorable Means"

Again the voice from the south heard above the din of European squabbling and preparing for war: "We, as a nation, are at peace with all the world and for that we are thankful. We have no plans for conquest. To keep the peace is a fundamental policy of the United States. War will be avoided by all honorable means." Also in his Navy Day Letter, President Roosevelt warned that the United States will maintain a sea strength sufficient to "ensure a righteous peace."

Relief List Reduced

Latest figures issued by Ottawa show that unemployment and relief have decreased during the past year in the Dominion of Canada. In September, 1937, there were 73,479 fewer people on relief than in September, 1936. Responsible for the drop are better times, provincial and municipal work projects, activities of the National Employment Commission, the land settlement plan under which unemployed are assisted in becoming established on farms.

Belgian Cabinet Crisis

Premier Paul Van Zeeland resigned last week from the leadership of the Belgian Government in order to fight the charges of Rexist (Fascist) opponents that he was mixed up in a "national bank scandal." His cabinet resigned with him as a confidence gesture. The resulting crisis in Belgium forced the postponement of the nine-power conference which was to have met in Brussels Saturday to find an "amicable" solution to the Sino-Jap embroglio.

New Irrigation Projects

At a cost of more than $100,000, two new projects for irrigating areas in the Canadian west have been announced to be carried out under the Prairie Farm Rehabilitation Act. The work will be done in the Brooks, Alberta, irrigation district; and in the Cypress Hills area of Southern Saskatchewan. The Government scheme involves taking over the land at about $10 an acre and reselling it at the same figure. Land will be used for placing farmers from poor lands.

Non-Intervention Accord Remote

Hopeless of agreement, nine European powers delegates to the Spanish Non-Intervention Committee meeting in London which convened over the week-end, sought only to avoid the definite break in relations that might mean the opening of the French frontier to the passage of men and arms into Spain. On the one side were Great Britain, France and Russia, demanding the removal of foreigners from the civil war; on the other side, Germany, Italy and Portugal demanding recognition of the Spanish insurgents as belligerents. The meeting preferred a deadlock to a wide-open split.

King Congratulates a "Queen"

HE WAS ALWAYS TIRED AND ILL

Three Complaints Gave Him A Miserable Time

Suffering from three complaints — disordered kidneys, sciatica, and rheumatism, how could this man be anything else but always tired and ill? This is what he writes:—

"Up to a month or so ago, I had suffered continually from kidney disorder, sciatica, rheumatism, and generally felt off colour. I was constantly tired, and under medical supervision. I tried many remedies, but without effect until I gave Kruschen Salts a trial. In four weeks, Kruschen has brought about a complete transformation. I have a healthy appetite and once more feel that it is good to be alive." — S.V.N.

The kidneys are the filters of the human machine. If they become sluggish, impurities find their way into the blood-stream, and the seed of half-a-dozen common ailments is sown.

The scientific combination of salts in Kruschen quickly coaxes the kidneys back to healthy, normal action. Soon your ailments are relieved and life becomes a joy again.

Another Pig Starts "War" On the Canadian Border

For the second time in eighty-one years a pig was blamed for trouble on the peaceful boundary line between the United States and Canada.

Back in 1856 a British porker crossed an imaginary line west of Bellingham, Wash., rooted up the crops of Lyman E. Cutlar on San Juan Island, and nearly precipitated a war between England and the United States, the famous "54-40 or fight" incident.

Mrs. Zella Minnick, Canadian, charged that her American neightbor, John Scheres, of Bellingham, Wash., struck her with his fists. Scheres said Mrs. Minnick's pigs crossed the boundary line and rooted up his crops.

But this matter was left to a justice of the peace, Scheres submitting to arrest on an assault charge.

Canadian Furs Win "Grand Prix"

The Department of Trade and Commerce announced it had received a communication that the fur exhibit at the Canadian pavilion at the Paris Exposition had been awarded the "Grand Prix d'Honneur," highest prize which can be bestowed on any exhibit.

The Canadian exhibit of furs included pelts of principal fur bearing animals of the Dominion, particular displays being made of silver and other domestically bred foxes.

The award was made by a judging committee, which included official representatives from different countries represented at the exposition.

Cost of Living High in Yukon

Steep Prices Asked For Necessities — Only Rents Low

The cost of living in Dawson City, Yukon, famed for the gold rush of '98, is high but does not seem to worry the hardy inhabitants.

On a 3,000-mile aerial assignment, from Lethbridge, Alta., to Dawson, a Lethbridge Herald reporter, J. St. Claire Rivers, learned what is meant by the "high cost of living."

Canteloupes $1 Each

"Apple Jimmy," a Greek fruit dealer and a famous character during the gold rush days, who sold apples and oranges in the dance halls at $1 each, told of present costs. He still runs a fruit store in Dawson, his wares brought in from Vancouver.

Fruit is the most expensive. Canteloupes today sell for $1 each; oranges and peaches, three for $1; plums, three for 25 cents. Potatoes sell at $14 a sack and meat at 50 cents a pound, regardless of the cuts.

House rents are cheap, $10.00 a month, but water is costly, $10 a house a month and electricity is 25 cents a kilowatt. Telephones come high, too. A party line costs $10.00 a month; a private line $20 a month.

Cigarettes are sold in packages of 50. The cost is 75 cents a package.

There is no draught beer in Dawson and no permits are needed to purchase liquor. Beer sells at 50 cents a pint and $1 a quart.

Soviet Gets Air Record

The International Aeronautical Federation has formally recognized the Soviet claim to the world's long-distance air record, set last July 18 when the Soviet flyers Mikhail M. Gromov, Andrei Yumashev and Sergei Danilin flew from Moscow to San Jacinto, Calif., a distance of 6,305.7 miles, in 62 hours 7 minutes.

The previous record was held by the French flyers Maurice Rossi and Paul Codos, who flew 5,657 miles from New York to Syria in 1935.

American banks hold forgotten deposits worth altogether nearly $190,000,000. Of these 65 are worth more than $50,000 each.

New Campus Slang Compiled by Paper

"B.M.O.C.", "Ding", "Fruit Fly" Etc., Are Explained at the University of New Mexico

Some of the slang current on a modern campus has been compiled by the Lobo, student paper of the University of New Mexico. Here are samples:

B. M. O. C.—Big man on the campus.

Ding—To blackball a candidate for fraternity.

Fruit Fly—Those who study in the campus candy shop.

Goon—A silly or boring person.

In the Swish—To be in the know.

Hardware—Fraternity jewelry.

Jam Sessions—A good, noisy free-for-all.

Dig—Get-acquainted dance.

Kee Wee—Good, swell, or almost anything.

Nub—An unattractive person.

Hang the Hardware or Plant a Pin—Put a fraternity pin on a girl.

Quilling—Make up to your professor.

Skiooking — Unromantic term for the romantic urge to make love.

T. P. or Table Party—Informals.

The Morgue—Hall where all examination marks are posted.

To Jelly—Soda and cigarette date.

Wheel a Sled—To drive an automobile.

Wolfing—Snaking other girls' dates.

A list of 88 persons who have been deprived of their German nationality because their attitude is "in conflict with the duty of loyalty towards Reich and people," includes two babies of 1 year old, a child of two and one of 3 years.

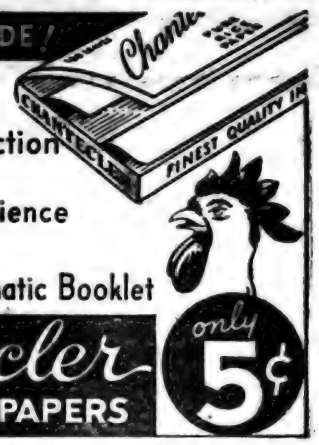
Indoors 5 months with RHEUMATIC PAINS
Now walks 3 miles a day

Everyone who suffers the sharp agony of Rheumatic pains should read how Mrs. S. P. made a remarkable recovery from this crippling pain.

"I was so ill with Rheumatism in my knees," she writes, "that I was not out of the house for five months last winter. I tried about everything, then I happened to meet a friend who told me about Pyrazon Salt. I have taken it regularly and am so much better that I can walk 3 to 4 miles and am getting better every day."

Doesn't that experience mean something to you? You, too, can look forward to quick, lasting relief from rheumatic pain if only you take Pyrazon Salt. This is why. Those sharp, jagged crystals in the blood that cause Rheumatic pains are due to an excess of uric acid in your system. Pyrazon Salt, the proven British remedy, neutralizes this uric acid by using Nature's own weapons — the mineral salts of the earth. A half teaspoonful of Pyrazon Salt in water equals in medicinal effect three large glasses of natural mineral waters. So start now using Pyrazon Salt. Take it every day. Large packages cost only 75c at all drug stores. If you have any difficulty getting supplies, write: Lanrentian Agencies, St. Gabriel Street, Montreal.

Science Links Fish to Sirens



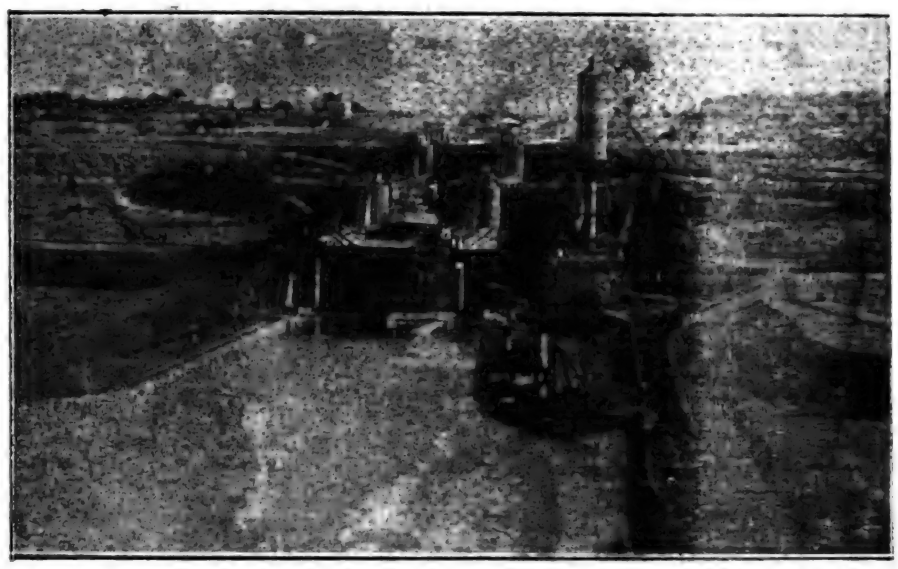
Aquarium Authority States That Fishes Make Sounds

There may be a slight basis in fact for the stories that have come down to us from antiquity about the sirens who by their songs lured sailors to their death. Fishes make sounds, declares Dr. C. H. Townsend, of the N.Y. Aquarium, and it is possible, he states, that the myths in the works by Homer and other classical writers were dramatization of the stories told by fishermen, with their usual decorations added to the facts, about the sounds they heard fishes make. Dr. Townsend, in an article on the swim bladder in fishes, in the current issue of the bulletin of the New York Zoological Society, describes his experience in listening to the sounds made by fishes while he was aboard a small schooner lying in a shallow Central American harbor.

Swim Bladder Accomplishes It

The swim bladder, he states, is a saclike organ in the abdominal cavity of many vertebrate fishes. The principal use is to enable the fish to adjust itself so that it can swim at desired depths, but it is used for other purposes as well, among them the making of sounds, some fishes having muscles that can be vibrated against the air sac. In other fishes it functions as an organ of hearing.

One hundred years ago there was not a block of chocolate made in England.



Labrador Imports Ice

BATTLE HARBOR, Labrador. — Labrador, usually pictured as a land of perpetual ice and snow, is now importing ice.

A scarcity of icebergs in the Strait of Belle Isle has forced fishermen to import ice from Canada to pack salmon catches.

Where the Steamships Climb the Mountain

At Thorold, Ontario, are located those wonderful examples of engineering, the Great Twin Flight Locks on the Welland Ship Canal. Reading from the fore-ground are Numbers 4, 5, 6, with single lock Number 7 in the background. This construction enables boats up to 800 feet long to pass up and down the escarpment at the same time, with a minimum delay to navigation. Each lock raises or lowers a boat 46½ feet. It is interesting to compare these locks with those of the first canal built in 1829. The latter had 40 locks 110 feet long by 22 feet wide and with a depth of 8 feet. The present canal has only 8 locks but each is 820 feet long by 80 feet wide with a depth of 30 feet.

HAVE YOU HEARD

OWL LAFFS

Christian Science Monitor gives this as an example of truthful advertising. Let us hope the owner sold the property.

Advertisement in New York newspaper:—

Tumbledown house on hilltop for sale in Litchfield Hills, Connecticut; two miles from town. No babbling brook. Extensive grounds for pushing lawn mower. Bad golf, fishing, etc. Twelve acres inclosed by horse fence adjoining hunt club. Dump near house. Approximately 30 apple trees. Domestic problems terrible. Price, $29,000.

Merchant—Everything that college men endorse is not necessarily good.

Friend—Why do you take that stand?

Merchant—Because I have a check from one of them.

Marrying in haste is all right if you are marrying the right one, but usually the earlier the wedding the greater the gamble.

Mother-in-law—That's a cute little tree on the front lawn, John—I mean the one that's about a foot high.

Son-in-law—Yes, I just planted it. I hope the next time you come, you'll be able to sit in its shade.

Hesitatingly, hardly daring to look, he paused and scanned every inch of the space before him. As far as the eye could see, there was just the same drab barrenness. Nothing. With sinking heart he turned sadly away.

Again and again he had come to search, and had returned despondent. There were days of renewed hope, followed by deeper despair, and as the days passed and there was still no sign, no change, he began to lose faith.

Then, at long last, came the incredible, unforgettable morning when they finally appeared—the first two shoots from the four seeds he had planted in his bed-sitting room window box.

Troubles always seem to learn to add and multiply a lot easier than they do subtract.

A financial note that didn't work: The young bride had heard her husband speak of borrowing money on notes. So she took to the bank a few of those he wrote her before their marriage. The cashier read each one with great care and evidently wth much pleasure, but the mean thing wouldn't lend her a cent on them.

Jake—Howsabout joining me in a cup of tea, old boy?

Mike—Oke, m'lad. You crawl in first, and then we'll see if there's any room for me.

One need not be a criminal to catch the force of this:

Daughter looking up from her novel)— Papa, in time of trial, what do you suppose brings the most comfort to a man?

Papa (who is a newly appointed magistrate) —An acquittal, I should think.

Teacher—Who said: "I come to bury Caesar"?

Nervous Youngster — P-p-please, teacher, the undertaker.

NO TERRIBLE HEADACHE NOW
Found Quick, Sure Way to End Them

It's fortunate that a great Canadian doctor made the famous fruit, herb and tonic remedy, Fruit-a-tives. Mr. C.D., Toronto, writes, "I was bothered with very severe headaches. Pain on top of head and in forehead was more than I could bear. My doctor advised me to take Fruit-a-tives. Since then I have not had any trouble with headaches." When you take Fruit-a-tives, your liver is cleansed. Stomach, kidneys and intestines work naturally. Poisons and wastes go. Food nourishes. Health comes. 25c. and 50c. All druggists.

CARRY YOUR ALKALIZER WITH YOU

The fastest way to "alkalize" is to carry your alkalizer with you. That's what thousands do now that genuine Phillips' comes in tiny, peppermint flavored tablets—in a flat tin for pocket or purse. Then you are always ready.

Use it this way. Take 2 Phillips' tablets—equal in "alkalizing" effect to 2 teaspoonfuls of liquid Phillips' from the bottle. At once you feel "gas," nausea, "over-crowding" from hyper-acidity begin to ease. "Acid headaches," "acid breath," over-acid stomach are corrected at the source. This is the quick way to ease your own distress—avoid offense to others.

POULTRY RAISER CONQUERS "ROUP"
Praises Minard's Liniment As Remedy for Roup or Bronchial Flu

Read in this letter from G. Minvielle, Port Carry, how he checked Roup (Bronchial Flu) when it broke out among his young hens. "After trying other remedies and obtaining no results whatever," writes Mr. Minvielle, "I tried Minard's Liniment. Soy 'le-six drops on the tongue and sometimes more, depending on the birds. I am positive that it helped me out a lot." Minard's Liniment is a tried and proved remedy for sprains, burns, bruises and skin diseases, as well as for Bronchial and Rheumatic troubles. For sale by all druggists.

CONTROLLING TUBERCULOSIS

Everyone knows about diseases that at one time caused great loss of life and that have been brought under control in the last thirty or forty years as a result of modern public health methods. Typhoid fever is one illustration. Twenty-five or thirty years ago, it was not uncommon for cities to have death rates from typhoid ranging as high as 60 or 75 deaths out of every 100,000 living persons; to-day, it is almost a disgrace for a city to have a death rate of more than one or two per 100,000, and in many cities rates for typhoid for the last year were less than one.

Yellow fever is another plague of a generation or two ago when whole cities were quarantined because of it.

Diphtheria, the killer of children a few years ago, is to-day becoming a rare disease. Many communities have not had a death or even a case of diphtheria in several years, thanks to modern methods of immunization against this disease.

Smallpox, that scourge and terror of our forefathers, is now seldom heard of. And so it goes, these dread diseases which once decimated the population, are now practically eliminated.

Tuberculosis is still far from being conquered, but it is encouraging to note that more progress has been made in conquering this enemy during the first thirty-five years of this century than in all the centuries that went before. The death rate in Ontario in 1900, shortly after the National Sanitarium Association was organized, was estimated at 160 per 100,000. To-day it is 37.

It is a splendid showing and with the goal in sight we hopefully enter the last lap of the race, but as everyone knows, the last lap calls for the greatest effort and if we are to succeed in gaining the complete mastery over this plague as has been gained over others, we must strive as never before.

Given the necessary financial support, the Muskoka, the Toronto and the Queen Mary Hospitals for Consumptives will continue to lead the way.

Please send your gift to National Sanitarium Association, 223 College St., Toronto.

May take Vote on New School

The High and Public School Boards met at the Public School last week and again discussed with the architect, Mr. Craig of Toronto, the building of a combined school for the village. The first price given by the architects, last summer, was $80,000, which the Boards thought was too high. The architect was asked to show what kind of a school he could build for $60,000, and it was agreed to present the matter to the Village Council and ask them to take a vote on the question at the January elections. A committee was appointed to interview the Council some night this week. The ratepayers may be asked to choose which of the three propositions they are in favor of: 1st a new combined School, a new Public School, or a new High School.

Shriners' Circus

Shriners' Circus Broadcast by Wm. Perkins Bull, K.C., at Maple Leaf Gardens on Friday evening, 29th October, 1937.

"Ladies and Gentlemen—

"On behalf of Post Illustrious Potentate Morley Mackenzie who represents Canada on the Imperial Council of the Shrine, and on behalf of Illustrious Potentate Dr. Porter and the Nobles of Rameses Temple, let me greet you and thank you for your patronage.

"We have seen and enjoyed the 'hippojohnpotomus' and the 'rhinostricus.'

"This is pleasure of the Shiner's type.

"Innocent and with a purpose.

"Not aimless nor selfish enjoyment.

"There is nothing either unwholesome or suggestive in the whole show.

"Not one cuss word.

"There are, I am told, roughly, 17,000 here to-night.

"When the circus week is over, five and twenty thousand school children, youngsters from the suburbs and under-privileged tots will have been cheered by it. Before it closes, upwards of ten percent of the total population of the city of Toronto will have been to Rameses Temple Shriners' Circus, and gone home satisfied, after a delightful evening of clean fun.

"Each Toronto patron of our effort will have contributed a bit towards the support and help of crippled children, for which purpose, roughly, twelve or fifteen thousand dollars will have been raised.

"I thank you."

HOUSE BURNT

Tuesday, about noon, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Nunan, Ninth Line, Trafalgar, was totally destroyed by fire. It seems the family were working at the barn and when they returned to the house, it was noticed to be on fire. An alarm was given and although the neighbors responded quickly, nothing was saved. This is a great loss to Mr. Nunan. It was a log house, boarded over, and had been their home for many years. Cause of fire not known.

TRINITY CHURCH NOTES

Trinity Anglican Church celebrated its 96th anniversary on Sunday with good congregations morning and evening. The preacher was the Rector, Rev. E. S. Ottley.

On Monday evening the annual supper was served in the Parish Hall, when a large number were served and enjoyed the good things so amply provided.

Rev. Mr. Ottley was chairman for the program which followed. He introduced Mr. J. C. Hetherington of Toronto, an old Streetsville boy, who kindly provided the movies. Selections were given by Miss Irene Peacock, reader, Brampton, and comical numbers by Mrs. Fred Saxon, Toronto, accompanied by her son, Fred, also by Miss Mary Crozier, at the piano.

The evening was a very successful affair, and enjoyed by all who had the privilege to the present.

COOKSVILLE

Toronto Township Council put in the quietest session of the past five years Monday. The "bright spot" of the day's business was the announcement that the recently enacted by-law governing the licensing of slot machines throughout the township had added $1,200 to the township treasury during the month.

No action was taken regarding the closing of the Fifth Line East across the site of the Malton airport, and the by-law which had been prepared at a meeting of the council two months ago was left tabled. Council made no preparation for increased relief allowances in view of the closing of a number of road programs on which township unemployed men had been given work early in the summer.

TO SECURE YOUTHS FOR FARM TRAINING

500 boys to be placed with selected farmers for winter months as part of Dominion - Provincial Youth Training program—Living allowance for boys paid by Government.

An immediate start on the farm training project for boys under the Dominion-Provincial Youth Training program is being supervised by Alex. Maclaren, fieldman for the program in the counties of Peel, Ontario, York and Halton. Mr. Maclaren has already interviewed some 25 boys in the Toronto district anxious to learn the farming business and at least 10 of these lads will be placed with selected farmers. Ten boys will be placed in each county.

The boys will be paid a living allowance of $10 per month during the training period which ends March 31st next. Boys wishing to become farm helpers should apply at the nearest Government Employment Bureau or see the District Agricultural Representative in their county. Mr. Alex. Maclaren will also welcome enquiries from the boys themselves and may be reached by a letter addressed to him care of the Ontario Dept. of Agriculture, Parliament Buildings, Toronto.

It is expected that by next Spring, the boys will be fully qualified to take over a regular farm position and able to secure jobs at current rates of pay. There will be 500 boys thus trained in the province.

The Open Column

A friend of ours, a rather elderly woman, is, to our way of thinking the perfect Pollyanna. Pollyanna, if you remember, was the girl who was always looking on the bright side. Lately, the name has been used to describe, in rather contemptuous fashion, the person who flits about shedding joy and cheer. We will admit that the shedding of joy and cheer can be overdone, and that some people develope into chronic nuisances if they are encouraged to be little rays of sunshine.

But this friend of ours use the Pollyanna system for her own benefit almost exclusively. She refuses to read the gruesome details of crime and holocaust in the papers, and reads only the brighter and more informative stories. She will not go to the movies to see a morbid picture depicting the so-called "realism" of life. If someone tries to carry on a depressing conversation with her, she sweetly changes the subject.

This lady is well aware that there are a great many unpleasant things happening in the world. She is sorry for people who have misfortunes, or who become involved in crimes. But she knows that she can do nothing about these misfortunes, so, she reasonably asks, why should she sour her own dispositions by brooding over the horrible and tragic occurrences of the world when she might much more easily be cheerful?

If there were a great many more such sensible people, the world would be a much better place. Much of the yellow journalism that is fed to less sound - minded newspaper readers might be eliminated if people made up their minds that there was no point or use in scaring themselves half to death with follies of the world at large. Too many chains of crime have been prolonged because the criminals fancied themselves heroes in the eyes of a cheap press. The mental reactions of such newspaper coverage are sometimes reflected in the actions of a community, to the disgrace of a community and its citizens.

While the robber of two graves at Woodbridge and Streetsville may attempt a third grave robbery, there is little likelihood that he will harm any living person, unless lack of publicity drives him into some spectacular act to keep the case before the public, one eminent authority, who insisted that his name be withheld,

"There is no doubt that these acts were the work of a puerile mind," the informant continued. "The man is a fool. If there are two of them they are both fools. They are satisfied by the publicity they have attracted and the fact that they have terrified the community. Residents of the district naturally are frightened, but have little to fear."

This authority said the ghoul or ghouls likely were perfectly normal in other respects and would not be suspected by their neighbors.

Police authorities point out that they must guard carefully against unjustly charging anyone with the crime. No arrest can be made until definite proof of the guilt of the subject is established.

Such crimes in the past have been committed for various reasons, but cases are lacking where the graves have been robbed for no apparent motive except a craving for publicity.

In the celebrated Birks and Hare case in Scotland, organized grave robberies were carried out to obtain cadavers for medical students. There is no suspicion of such a motive in the present case, as cadavers here are obtained by legal means.

Cases have been reported in the distant past where bodies were exhumed and mutilated and, in others, graves have been robbed for the purpose of stealing jewels or other valuables from the coffins. But none of these parallels the crimes of the Ontario ghouls.

OBITUARY

Isabella Alderson, widow of Joseph Howes, passed away in Trafalgar Township, on Nov. 4th, in her 82nd year. Funeral took place to Bethel Church cemetery, Drumquin.

Andrew Hillis, son of the late Thomas Hills, Randalstown, North Ireland, and Mossie Evelyne Woods, Port Credit, were married by Rev. K. R. Berkeley, quite recently.

Peter Cole passed away on Seventh Line, Esquesing, on Oct. 27th, in his 76th year. He is survived by his widow, who was formerly Margaret Yeman.

George Hindson, Hornby passed away at Mount Charles on Oct 27, at the age of 74. He spent all his life on the same farm. Funeral took place to Bethany cemetery.

Mrs. James Kirkwood

Mrs. James Kirkwood, pioneer citizen of North Peel, died on Saturday at the family home, Lot 5, 4th Line, West Caledon, in her 91st year. Mrs. Kirkwood spent her entire life on two adjoining farms. She had vivid memories of the early days in Caledon Township, when many of the township roads were built of corduroy. She is survived by one son, William, of Toronto, and three daughters, Mrs. E. R. K. Huggan, New York, and Misses Winnifred and Lucinda, at home.

Striking Address by W. P. Bull, K. C.

Staff of General Hospital and Friends Hear Striking Address by Perkins Bull

Guest Speaker here—William Perkins Bull, K.C., Toronto lawyer and historian, who addressed the medical staff and friends of the Ottawa General Hospital at the Rideau Street Convent last evening. Mr. Bull was introduced by Dr. R. E. Valin and thanked by Dr. J. H. Lapointe and his topic was "Sisters Are Indispenable."

"Civilization owes much to your religion," said Mr. Williams Perkins Bull, K.C., of Toronto, speaking to the officials, staff and friends of the Ottawa General Hospital last evening in the Rideau Street Convent. The subject of Mr. Bull's address was "Sisters are Indispensable".

In a talk that was interesting and informative. Mr. Bull criticized and advised the members of the nursing staff as to their duties in everyday life. He impressed upon them, that, while he was not belittling their profession, marriage should be their goal, and he assured them they would be following their true destiny, not giving up the greater for the lesser, when this happened.

Development of Nursing

The Encyclopedia Britannica gives religion, war and science, as reasons for the development of nursing, the speaker said. "As far as religion is concerned we have early proof of this. In the first book of the Pentateuch, Moses refers to the skill of the Jewess in midwifery; and his detailed regulations for diet, sanitation and other matters pertaining to health, were far in advance of those of many contemporary nations which considered themselves more civilized," he stated. Some centuries later when Imperial Rome was at the height of its glory, with baths, theatres, market places, aqueducts and temples to hundreds upon hundreds of deities and demi-gods, it had apparently not a hospital, asylum, orphanage or other institution for the care of the unfortunate. Women in the Roman Empire were chattles and could never have played in public life the part of a Miriam or a Deborah. Thus they could not set examples in the use of healing arts.

Christianity, placing emphasis on the value of each individual, however poor and weak, paved the way for modern humanitarian effort. Widows and holy women became the first real nurses. Throughout the Middle Ages care of the sick continued to be in charge of such women.

The speaker remarked that in pioneer days a nurse's prestige increased with age and experience. Her prompt application of homely herbs and other common-sense remedies, her deft hands and soothing words, often brought our forefathers back to health in spite of the medical man's ill-advised bleeding and blistering.

Speaking of the subject of his address Mr. Bull said that there are a number of contrasts between his sisters and those familiarly known as the Grey Nuns. The outstanding difference, he explained, was that when his sisters took the veil they ceased to become sisters and became wives, whereas when members of the nursing staff took the veil, they became sisters twice over.

PERSONALS

Mrs. J. P. Fellowes visited friends at Brooklin, Ontario.

Mr. and Mrs. H. G. S. Jeffry of Weston visited with Mrs. Hicks and Miss Hicks on Sunday.

A daughter was born on Thursday, Nov. 4th, at Peel Memorial Hospital, to Mr. and Mrs. Harry Saul of Streetsville.

Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Gerhart, their two sons, and niece, Miss J. Norman, and Mrs. Gerhart's parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. Charlton, have moved from Streetsville to Clarkson.

Mrs. Wm. Couse entertained a group of friends at a bridge party on Monday evening.

The Mixed Bridge Club met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Bruce on Monday evening.

Snider's

Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Fish and children visited on Sunday at the home of Mrs. Fish's sister, Mrs. Earl Jewitt, Oshawa. Mrs. A. Fish motored with them as far at Whitby and spent the day with her friend, Mrs. Osborne.

The subject of Rev. H. S. Lovering's sermon on Sunday was "Higher Loyalty." The soldiers' memorial hymn, "O Valiant Hearts," was sung.

Mr. F. A. Forster is visiting at the home of his daughter, Mr. E. P. Lunau, Oakville.

At the session of Wesley Sunday School, Tuesday, December 14th, was set as the date for the Christmas entertainment.

Many of our residents attended the funeral of the late Mrs. S. G. South on Tuesday. The late Mrs. South, who was formerly Miss Jane Matthews, passed away on Sunday, Nov. 7th, at her home, sixth line, Trafalgar. The funeral service was held at Britannia Church. Mr. South predeceased her two years ago.

Mr. Wallace Cross gave an illustrated talk on the mining regions of Quebec at the Trafalgar Y.P.U. on Monday evening.

EDEN UNITED CHURCH

If you are one of the many who attended the Eden United Church Supper and entertainment on the evening of Nov. 2nd, you certainly have something to tell your friends as it was an evening well worth remembering.

A delicious supper was served, followed by a very excellent program given by the famous Hillcrest Male Quartette of Toronto, (A. Barron, H. O. Ellis, H. Ellis, J. Nicol), consisting of quartettes, duets, solos and musical numbers. Others taking part were: Miss Dorothy Hoidge, contralto; H. Ellis and R. V. Kendell, duets; trio by the Misses Hoidge and H. Ellis; Miss Marjorie Hoidge, accompanist. Several monologues, given by J. Nicol, caused much laughter.

The enthusiastic encores for artists proved how well their numbers were received.

Not forgetting our local talent, Miss Ethel Hyatt, Brampton; Joe Lyons, Eden, who always get a good hearty clap, for which they are well deserving.

A pleasant evening came to a close by singing the National Anthem.

VETERANS REMEMBER COMRADES IN WAR

Sunday afternoon, Streetsville Veterans and Veterans from other towns, gathered at the Hall on Church Street and paraded to the Soldiers' Memorial, where a short service was held. After singing "God Save the King," an address was made by the president, Geo. H. Riches. The flag was lowered and the names of those who had given their lives for the country were read. Rev. F. Vipond offered prayer and the last post was sounded. Wreaths were then placed at the foot of the monument as follows:

Veterans—Geo. H. Riches.
Village—S. H. Foster, Reeve.
Ontario Government—Mrs. R. Edwards.
Eastern Star—S. H. Cordingley.
Lorne Scots—Major Serson.
Masonic Lodge—H. W. Hope.
Oddfellows—G. L. Green.

Corp. Patterson was the bugler who sounded the Last Post.

The parade was led by the Bugle Band of the Lorne Scots Regiment.

The procession was re-formed and the march was continued to the Anglican Church, where service was conducted by the pastor, Rev. E. S. Ottley, who delivered an interesting sermon.

At the close of the service a quartette of boys sang very nicely.

The "last post" was sounded and two minutes' silence observed.

Chief F. J. Elderfield and Mr. James Lacey had charge of the parade.

After leaving the Church, refreshments were served to the soldiers at the Veterans' Hall.

Local News

Peel Chapter, No. 96, Order Eastern Star, Streetsville, will hold its regular meeting next Monday night, Nov. 15th, at 7.30 sharp. All members are requested to be present as it will be Inspection Night.

Lorne Park Brownies, Guides and officers, met at the Community Hall, Sunday morning, and paraded to Lorne Park Baptist Church.

The Georgetown Herald has changed the style of its weekly paper from the old blanket sheet—4 pages—to an up-to-date eight-page paper. It is now as large as The Review, and, no doubt, will be appreciated by its readers and advertisers, in its new form.

Rev. J. N. McFaul, formerly of Milton, was inducted into the pastorate of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Stratford. He succeeds Rev. Dr. G. P. Duncan, Moderator of the London Presbytery, who resigned some weeks ago.

Arthur Oughtred, Clarkson, has been elected a vice-president of the Peel Federation of the Young Canada Conservative Club. Speeches were given at the election of officers, by Gordon Graydon, M.P., and Col. Hon. T. L. Kennedy of Dixie.

Clarkson United Church held anniversary services last Sunday. The evening service was in the form of an Armistic service, at which veterans of the 147th Batt., Toronto, were present.

Dr. Day, Toronto, gave a fine address on "Pathways to Peace" at a meeting of Women's Institute workers, in the Erindale Community Hall tonight. There was a good attendance of women from south Peel.

Members of Clarkson United church choir presented Mr. Frank Taylor with a handsome travelling bag and Mrs. Taylor with a lovely bouquet of flowers, as an appreciation for services rendered. Mr. Taylor has been organist of the church for several years, but had to give it up on account of ill-health.

The following Hornby men were successful at the annual Halton County plowing match held near Milton last Friday: Stanley Fuller, Claude Picket, Len Lister, Arnold Picket, Harry Picket, Clifford May. Arthur Julian of Malton also was among the winners.

Mr. Herman McClintock left Saturday night for Muskoka with a party of men on their annual deer hunt. Herm will likely have a good story for The Review when they return.

Miss Eva Henry, who has been first assistant teacher at our High School since the opening of this term, has resigned. The Board advertised for another teacher. They received about 25 applications, but none were suitable, so they are advertising again.

Several members of River Park Lodge, A.F. & A.M., Streetsville, motored to Cookstown Tuesday night to attend the Masonic Lodge there. Mr. Charles Hersom, a Streetsville boy, was given another degree.

John Hammond was fined $10 and costs on a reckless driving charge, in Brampton Police Court, and given suspended sentence for driving through a red light at Cooksville intersection, when he damaged another car.

Bert Andrews, aged 45 years, was struck by a car driven by Art Wilson of Oakville, at Britannia, and had five ribs broken. Dr. Bartlett took him to Peel Memorial Hospital where he put several stitches in his hip.

WEDDINGS

Charles F. Deinhart, Cooksville, and Edith Maud Kidd, Inglewood, were married Oct. 30th, by Rev. J. A. H. Hodgins. They will live at Cooksville.

PERSONALS

"SALADA"

GREEN TEA

HOSTAGE HEIRESS

By DAVID DRESSER

Janet Duane, millionaire's daughter, gives a party one night aboard her father's palatial yacht, anchored off Miami. Gregory Gason tricks her into being lef behind wih him when the guests are taken ashore. The only other persons aboard are a crippled wtachman and Janet's Negro maid. Meanwhile, "Dusty" Lanion, lawless adventurer, has laid plans to seize the yacht to carry arms and ammunition to Cuban revolutionists. Believing the boat to be deserted, except for the watchman, who has been bribed, Dusty and his mean are about to board her.

CHAPTER X.

Janet breathed a happy sigh as she entered the lounge. Dusty Lanion. She spoke aloud. She was not ashamed to hear her voice caress the syllables.

Twenty-four hours ago, she had not known such a man existed. Those who dwelt outside the borders of her tight little world had not existed for her. But tonight, she felt that she would like to hug the whole world to her bosom!

Love had done that to her. She caught her breath sharply. There! It was out. She did not shrink from the word. "I love Dusty Lanion," she told herself softly. "I love Dusty Lanion." She repeated the refrain over and over again.

The sound of the door stealthily opening aroused her from her happy musing. She turned, then choked back a startled cry at sight of the fiendish countenance framed in the doorway.

Snifter stepped inside the lounge swiftly. His pasty face held a leering smile as he closed the door and peered about the cabin to assure himself he was alone with Janet.

She shrank away from him, and tried to scream, but the sound seemed to stick in her throat and only a little gurgle came out.

Snifter advanced slowly as she backed away from him. Stark terror gripped her.

• • •

Menace of Terror

"Pretty one." He stepped to the centre of the lounge and spoke thickly. "Don't be scared. It's on'y me. Snifter." His face was more horrible as it contorted into a leer which he sought to make reassuring to the frightened girl. "You an' me," he continued, "we gotta get to know each other."

"Stay away from me!" Janet regained her voice with a supreme effort of will.

"We gonna be nice an' frien'ly," Snifter proclaimed. His beady eyes glistened. "Jus' you an' me alone. All nice an' comfy."

He began his slow advance again. Janet stiffened in the farthest corner of the cabin. She felt hypnotized. Unable to move or scream.

Then he was close before her. She closed her eyes and felt she was being carried away on a wave of nothingness as his clammy hands touched her arm.

Strength came to her from some hidden source. She screamed suddenly, and clawed at his contorted face, which she saw through a mist.

Then, the door crashed inward, and Snifter released her as Dusty leaped forward.

Janet saw a tangle of bodies and heard muttered imprecations as she sank to the floor. Then, Dusty lifted Snifter bodily and heaved him through the open door like a sack of meal. There was a dull thud and a groan as the man struck the deck outside.

Then Dusty was on his knees beside the girl, kissing away at her tears....

"So? You are all right now?" Sakara sat back, and regarded Gregory enigmatically.

He struggled to a sitting position and put his hand to his face, rubbing the swelling on his chin as though he could not remember what had happened.

"What?" He looked at Sakara stupidly. This was the first he had known that there was another woman besides Janet aboard the Fleetwing.

"I am Sakara," she told him, with lifted brows. "Dusty's true love," she explained ironically, "until this Duane chit comes along to turn his head."

"She has turned his head all right" Gregory muttered.

"Yes-s. I heard your little plan and how he received it."

"He's out of his head." Gregory muttered. "Gone noble all of a sudden."

"I hate him." Sakara said suddenly. "He is nothing to me. I hate him, do you hear me?"

"That makes two of us," Gregory answered. "But I thought you just said he was your sweetie."

"Bah!" Sakara made a sweeping gesture. "That I should be insulted by such a man!"

"Yeah. I get you." Gregory nodded wisely. Then his eyes narrowed speculatively. "Maybe you and I could get together."

"Why not?" Sakara tensed.

"You heard my plan?"

"Yes." She nodded. "I heard everything."

"It's foolproof if that crazy guy would come in with me. We can't do anything without him."

"Why not?"

"Why.... why.... he holds the winning cards," Gregory granted.

• • •

At the Keyhole

"Bah!" Sakara spat vengefully. "He cast away his winning card when he cast me aside."

"We can't do anything without him. He's in full command of the ship."

"So-o-o? And suppose he were to fall into the ocean. You and I then .... we could do with the girl as we would."

"Good lord! You couldn't do that!"

"Sakara Pitzinoff can do anything." She drew herself up proudly. "Unless you are afraid," she hinted.

"I'm not afraid." Gregory mumbled.

"Very well." Sakara leaned forward dramatically. "He must die. He scorns Sakara. So. Don Martinez knows, of course. We do not need this Dusty Lanion. I will call him to the rail. A sudden lurch. Pouf."

Gregory drew in a quick breath and avoided her eyes. Her cold-blooded plan to do away with Dusty was too much for his weak nerves.

"I.... I don't know ..." He paused irresolutely.

"Shh. Say nothing," Sakara whispered. Her eyes warned him as she tensed.

She arose stealthily and moved to the closed door of the cabin. With a swift motion, she jerked it open. The man who had been listening at the keyhole straightened to face her.

It was Don Martinez.

The Art of Making Tea

To get the utmost in flavour and quality from tea is an art, but it is an art in which anyone can produce a masterpiece by following these simple directions:

Run the 'cold' tap a few seconds before filling your kettle (never use stale water or water from the 'hot' tap). See that the water is boiling furiously and not just steaming. Scald out a crockery tea-pot, measure into it a teaspoonful of good quality tea for each person and one for the pot, add the boiling water and steep for five minutes before serving.

Nothing else soothes our tired bodies or gives us the same comfort and pleasure that we get from a good cup of tea. Surely it is worth our while to make it carefully.

VINTAGE JELLY

Some New Uses

In some households it is absolutely forbidden to touch any of the preserves which the lady of the house has prepared until the weatherman says that winter has actually arrived. In others, the jars have hardly been sealed before they are opened up and used. Whichever course of action your family pursues, you will never regret having put time and energy into the making of jams and jellies. The economy and convenience of having them on hand for use now or later in the season will be a tremendous help in preparing tasty dishes. The usual uses for jams and jellies need hardly be mentioned, since every household practically thinks of toast in terms of the jelly which they like best and some people won't even touch meat without the jelly they love.

Grape jelly, because of its beautiful colour and slightly tart flavour, has many uses and here are a few of them which will brighten your table and add a touch of elegance to your cooking.

Rice Mould With Mauve Cream Sauce

4 tablespoons rice.
1¾ cups hot milk
½ tablespoon salt
6 tablespoons sugar
½ tablespoon granulated gelatin
¼ cup cold milk
½ teaspoon vanilla
Few drops almond extract
½ cup cream, whipped.

Cook rice in large amount of boiling, salted water 10 minutes. Drain. Add to hot milk in double boiler and cook one hour, or until rice is tender. Combine salt and sugar and add to rice. Soak gelatin in cold milk five minutes, and add to hot rice mixture. Stir until gelatin is dissolved. Add flavouring. Chill. When slightly thickened, fold in whipped cream. Turn into ring mold. Chill until firm. Unmold. Fill center of mold with Mauve Cream Sauce. Serves 6.

Chicken Croquettes With Jelly Garnish

4 tablespoons quick-cooking tapioca
½ teaspoon salt
1½ cups hot chicken stock
2 cups cooked chicken, finely chopped.
1 egg, beaten with 3 tablespoons of milk or stock and 1-8 teaspoon salt.
Sifted bread or cracker crumbs.

Add quick-cooking tapioca and salt to stock, and cook in double boiler 15 minutes, or until tapioca is clear, and stirring constantly. Add chicken and cook five minutes longer. Cool. Shape into cones, making a slight depression in top of each croquette. Chill. Dip in egg, roll in crumbs, and fry in deep fat (400 degrees F.) 1 minute, or until golden brown. Drain. Fill each depression with bit of grape jelly. Arrange on platter and garnish with slices of molded jelly and parsley. Makes 10 to 12 croquettes.

Here is a grand dessert served with a tasty grape jelly sauce.

Mauve Cream Sauce

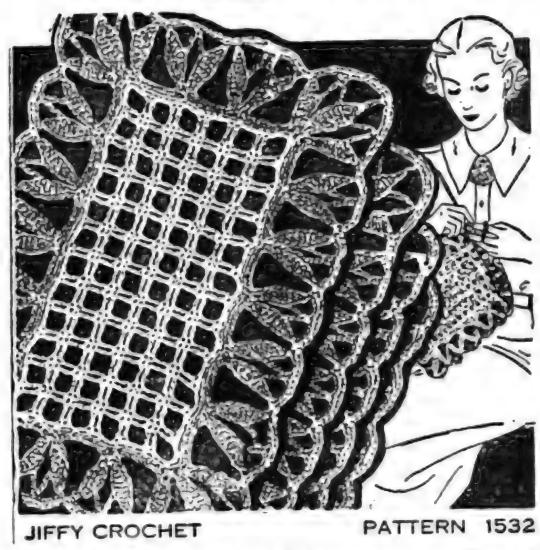
½ cup ripe grape jelly.
1 egg white, unbeaten
1-8 teaspoon salt
½ cup cream, whipped.

Place Jelly in bowl and set over hot water. Add egg white and salt and beat with rotary egg beater until the mixture is smooth and stiff enough to stand in peaks. Cool. Fold in whipped cream. Makes 2 cups sauce.

Jellied Meat Loaf

1 tablespoonful gelatine
½ cupful cold water
2 Oxo cubes
1 cupful boiling water
1 small onion, peeled and sliced
1 stalk celery
½ tablespoon Worcester sauce.
1 cupful diced cooked beef
2 tablespoons pimiento (cut into strips)
1 teaspoon chopped parsley.

Soften the gelatine in the cold water for five minutes. Dissolve the Oxo cubes in the boiling water, add the onion and celery, and simmer for three minutes. Strain over the soaked gelatine and stir until dissolved. Add the Worcestershire sauce and when the mixture begins to thicken, add the beef, pimiento and parsley and turn into cold wet mould. Chill, unmold and serve sliced with lettuce and tomatoes.



FREE for 45 outside red wrappers (or the waxed paper) of OXO CUBES this useful cup will be sent postpaid. Offer closes December 22, 1937. Address OXO, (Canada) Limited — 32 Front St. West, Toronto

Cocoa as a Beverage

The demand for cacao arises principally from the trade in cocoa butter and cocoa powder which are necessary ingredients in the manufacture of chocolate and chocolate confectionery. The largest consumer of cacao is the United States, followed in order by the United Kingdom, Germany, Netherlands, France and Canada as the principal world importers. Europe first came to know cacao through Cortez and the Aztecs of Mexico in the 16th century, but it was not until two centuries later that cocoa as a beverage became popular in Europe and other parts of the old world.

REMEMBRANCE

Ten million spirits — restless and sighing,
Scarce yet their bones are mingled with dust,
"They died for peace" — an all-glorious vision
"To end all wars," their sacred trust.

Little white crosses, what do they stand for?
Naught but an emblem of trust that's betrayed;
The "vision" is blurred, the war clouds have gathered,
And men have forgotten the promises made.

Oh, Man of the Cross, look down now in pity
On a world all bewildered with friction and hate;
Bring back the "vision" that ten million died for,
Raise up the Cross of Peace ere 'tis too late!

Sunday School Lesson

LESSON VII
THE CHRISTIAN MINISTER
2 Timothy, Chap. 4; 2 Timothy 2: 1-4
Printed Text—1 Timothy 4: 6-16;
2 Timothy 2: 1-4

Golden Text—Neglect not the gift that is in thee. 1 Timothy 4: 14.

The Lesson in Its Setting

Time.—The first epistle of Paul to Timothy was probably written A.D. 63-65, and the second epistle about A.D. 67.

Place.—Second Timothy was written from Rome, where Paul was a prisoner.

The first epistle of Paul to Timothy was probably written about A.D. 66, immediately before Paul's second imprisonment, while the second epistle to Timothy was written shortly before martyrdom, while he was a prisoner in Rome, A.D. 67.

Paul could not emphasize the importance of the truth which he unfolds in the first three verses of this chapter more than to say that this matter had been expressly given by the Holy Spirit.

6. If thou put the brethren in mind of these things, thou shalt be a good minister of Christ Jesus. The word here translated "minister" means, literally, "a laborer," "one who serves." Nourished in the words of the faith. These of course, refer to the Holy Scriptures. And of the good doctrine which thou hast followed until now. People are bound to believe something, and, if they are not instructed in divine truth, in the truth as God has given it to us, then they inevitably will receive error, the false teachings of men, partial truths which can never satisfy, and which so often lead to tragedy, disaster, and wickedness.

7. But refuse profane and old wives' fables. The fables here spoken of are those childish, silly, impossible myths.

Practise Godliness

And exercise thyself unto godliness. Christian people ought to train their spirits at least as carefully as the athlete does his muscles. The self-denial, and persistence, and concentration which are expended in athletic pursuits put to shame the way in which Christians go about the task of doing their religion.

8. For bodily exercise is profitable for a little; but godliness is profitable for all things, having promise of the life which now is, and of that which is to come.

9. Faithful is the saying, and worthy of all acceptation. What is promised is life, i.e., the very highest blessedness both in this world and the next. St. Paul means exactly what our Lord means when he says, I am come that ye may have life and may have it more abundantly.'

10. For to this end we labor and strive. Because we have our hope set on the living God, who is the Saviour of all men, especially of them that believe. 11. These things command and teach. The great motive power in the life of the Christian minister, that which keeps him from fainting by the way, from giving up in despair, is that he is in fellowship with the living God, with whom some day he will be in glory, who has appointed him to the supreme work of bringing men to know and accept the Lord Jesus Christ as Saviour. God is the Saviour of all men in so far as he sent his only begotten Son into the world that whosoever should believe on him would be saved, and have everlasting life.

12. Let no man despise thy youth. In the early church a bishop was not appointed until he was at least fifty years of age. But be thou an ensample. Here it means that Timothy was to be a model for other Christian believers. To them that believe, in word, in manner of life, in love, in faith, in purity. "The five words describe five stages from the most defined external to the most defined internal characteristics—speech, behavior, love, faith, purity; love, as it were, belonging equally to the inner and the outer self and combining all."

Working Whole-heartedly

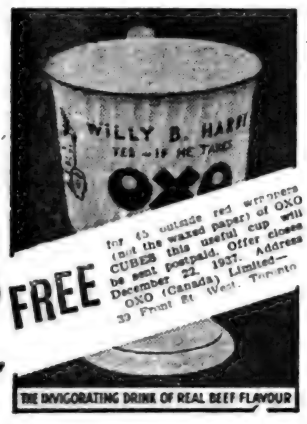
13. Till I come, give heed to reading. This refers not to private reading, but to the public reading of the Scriptures in church services or wherever people are gathered together The early Christians were accustomed to such public reading in the synagogues and availed themselves of it in the work of propagating Christianity. To exhortation, to teaching. The first word refers "to that form of public address which is especially intended to excite the feelings and impel to action; the second to that public instruction, in which the purpose is to enlighten the understanding by reasoning, either in unfolding and establishing truth, or in exposing and refuting error."

14. Neglect not the gift that is in thee, which was given thee by prophecy, with the laying on of the hands of the presbytery. "Three elements in Timothy's consecration to his present office were: (1) certain prophetic utterances similar to that by which St. Paul himself and St. Barnabas had been marked out for their apostolic ministry (Acts 13: 1, 2); (2) the actual ordination by St. Paul; (3) the recognition and testimony of the Ephesian presbyters signified by their taking part in the laying on of hands."

15. Be diligent in these things; give thyself wholly to them; that thy progress may be manifest unto all. Let none of us who are preaching forget that our people will know whether we are really working or not. Our sermons will show it. Our conversation will reveal it. There is no man so speedily discovered as an idle minister, and there is no man who is visited by swifter contempt.

16. Take heed to thyself, and to thy teaching. "Fix thy very best and thy very closest attention on thyself. This is thy main duty as a pastor." Continue in these things; for in doing this thou shalt save both thyself and them that hear thee. Salvation does not depend, of course, upon what one does, but what one does, and thinks, and plans will determine whether that person will waste his life or save it for great and glorious achievements. This likewise applies to the hearers of a gospel preacher—it has been shown in more than one historic incident that a minister whose own life is strong, and holy, and Christlike has been a tower of strength, encouragement, and help to his own people in hours when, otherwise, humanly speaking, they would have gone to pieces.

Soldier of Christ



1. Thou therefore, my child. Timothy was Paul's child by faith, not according to the flesh. Be strengthened in the grace that is in Christ Jesus. "Timothy was to retreat within those concentric circles—grace and Christ—two circles which are, after all, but one, for grace is Christ in action and in presence. It is, after all, himself, as our secret, our refuge, our resource."

2. And the things which thou hast heard from me among many witnesses the same commit thou to faithful men, who shall be able to teach others also. There is hardly anything more important in all the Christian church than the responsibility and the opportunity of older ministers and teachers depositing the riches of their learning, and faith, and experience in the hearts of their younger brethren, that the great treasures that are in the Scriptures and that are available in Christ may never be diminished because a generation arises ignorant of these holy and divine themes.

3. Suffer hardship with me, as a good soldier of Christ Jesus. "The Christian man, above all, the Christian pastor, is to think of himself under this similitude.

4. No soldier on service entangleth himself in the affairs of this life; that he may please him who enrolled him as a soldier. A soldier cannot be at the beck and call of noncombatants; he cannot be called on the telephone and asked to serve on this or that local committee for sponsoring every conceivable movement that has nothing to do with the great war in which he is engaged, or into which he expects soon to be called. So a minister of the gospel must not be so crowded with secular engagements, and civic movements, and certainly not with political causes, that his great task of witnessing for Jesus Christ and doing Christ's work is sadly neglected.

Surgery Makes New Scalps For Victims

Marvels of Medical Science Performed for Unfortunate Accident Sufferers

The Indians have stopped scalping, but machines have taken over where the Red Men left off, the American College of Surgeons, at Chicago was informed.

This fact was brought out by James A. Cahill, M.D., of Georgetown University School of Medicine, in telling how surgeons have devised operations to build new scalps, something which was not done much "in the good old days."

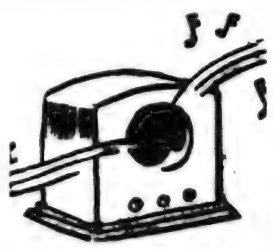
The moderns who lose their scalps to machines are exclusively women and Chinese, acording to Dr. Cahill's records, which cover 96 cases. Long hair catching in wheels or belts is the cause, and since the Chinese cut their queues they have been exempt. But bobbed hair styles have not been a complete protection.

The most recent operation for giving a woman a new scalp was described by Dr. Cahill. The patient was a 25-year-old garment worker whose accident came as she stopped to pick up something under her machine.

A New Ear

The machine did about twice as much scalping in area, as a savage's knife, and it took off the right ear too. Yet today, said Dr. Cahill, the young woman has a new ear and a scalp.

She wears a transformation, said Dr. Cahill and in good looks she "certainly has no reason for any embarrassment."



Grafted Skin

Most of her new scalp and this includes quite a bit of forehead skin, came from the region of her shoulder-blades. The skin there was first detoured to the back of her head by a "pedicle flap" and then moved to cover the areas where scalp and other skin was missing.

The tissues of her new ear were supplied by the skin of her neck, below the ear. The cartilege to stiffen the ear and give it shapeliness was taken from her seventh rib.

RADIO HEADLINERS OF THE WEEK

By FRANK DENNIS

Hello, folks, again we come to give you that little inside gossip about the people you hear through the loud speakers of your radios. Before we go much farther, here is a little note that might interest you. A couple of weeks ago we wrote about a young lady by the name of Pauline Drake, who did a couple of programs while pinch-hitting for another female commentator. To-day we are glad to report that Miss Drake may be heard daily at one p.m. over C K C L, under the sponsorship of the C. E. Fulford Company, makers of Bile Beans. For your information, Miss Drake measures about 5 foot six, very dark hair, and eyes, and not bad to look at. Her age — well, we have been trying to find that out ourselves for some time — but Miss Drake apparently doesn't want to commit herself. Her program is known as 'What's New" and has everything to make the program appealing to all types of listeners.

The Audience Guess

The Pond's program "Ask Another" features a new novelty. At the back of the stage at C F R B a portrait of a famous person is covered. A member of the audience is asked to step forward, and a conversation takes place between Howard Lindsay, conductor of the program and Mr. or Miss Public. Out of the conversation, the rest of the audience are to guess the identity of the hidden one — and the person who does, receives a box of Pond's products — and so does the party who took part in the discussion. Wally Armour and his orchestra are heard on the program together with Rhoda Howe and George, the "Ask Another" boy. Program is heard on Fridays 10 to 10.30 p.m. Write to the station C F R B for tickets.

While rambling through C F R B's Studios, we caught Paul Berg rehearsing his 7.45 to 8.00 p.m. program heard every Monday, Wednesday and Friday. The program consists of the music played by Paul Berg on the Hammond Electric Organ — a bit of new equipment at the studios. The sound is quite a bit different from the regular pipe organ — and the tone is quite pleasing. Peeking through the glass windows we saw Samuel Herenboran and his New World Chamber Orchestra. Included in the many notables playing instruments on this program are Sidney Wells, John Duncan, Roland Todd, Marc Adeney and Harold Sumberg.

8.45 to 9.00 p.m. nightly over CKCL brings to the radio Fireside Pictures, a program featuring El Goodaire at the piano, Frank Gair and his violin and a variety of vocalists. Talking to Al Shea, the man behind the Sunday amateur shows, and he informs me that the final program, the winner of which is due for a trip to Hollywood and an opportunity to appear in pictures, will come off about the end of December. This will certainly give at least one amateur a lot of "Good Humor." There's still room for more — so if you think you have talent — write to Good Humor in care of the stations C F R B, C K C L, C H M L or C F C F.

From "down below the border" the word comes that President Roosevelt will devote his tenth Fireside Chat over the C B S network to a discussion of the government's voluntary unemployment census, Sunday, November 14th from 10.30 to 11.00 p.m.

Family of Nations

The Family of Nations, a trans-Atlantic program will feature famous statesmen and educators from three continents. The program is to be broadcast between 3 and 4 p.m. November 11th, under the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. All stations of the Columbia network will carry this program. Heard on the program will be Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, V. K. Wellington Koo, Ambassador of China to France; for Britain, the Marquess of Lothian, secretary of the Rhodes Trust; For Hungary, Count Paul Teleki, for Italy, Signora Margherita Sarfatti, and William E. Rappard for Switzerland.

Comments From Europe

The radio series "Canada 1937" which scored such success last season, started again this year, on November 5th, and will be heard every Friday evening at 10.00 p.m., E.S.T.

Outstanding commentators under the guidance of Vernon Bartlett are again speaking from Europe—an interviewer in Canada probing for answers to the questions of the "man in the street."

Lionel Shapiro, Canadian correspondent in New York, will speak from N.B.C. Studios, relaying such latest happenings of the Gay White Way as are of interest to Canadian listeners.

A new technique will be introduced in the talks on Canada to make the very pulse of the nation audible to listeners throughout the country. Mr. Walter Bowles will broadcast from a different locality each week, telling of viewing "nation builders" who make that progress possible.

Yet another outstanding feature of the program will be the music — every selection will be specially arranged for the large orchestra and choir that is now in rehearsal.

In sponsoring these broadcasts — to be again produced by Victor George — Imperial Tobacco Company of Canada, Limited, is bringing a new experience to Canadian listeners. These Friday evening programs are live demonstration of the fact that the Canadian broadcasting is equal to the challenge for something new and spectacular.

Form 500

Cooksville L.O.L. held a very successful dinner last Friday night with such good speakers as Gordon Graydon; Col. Tom Kennedy, Reeve Ed Maguire, E. Westlake, County Master, and Albert Grice W.M. 300 people were present.

Students' Column

Through the daily press you have been informed that the writing of some of the Ghoulish notes that have terrorized Streetsville and surrounding localities seem to have originated in the High School. These papers also suggest that the notes were written by a maniac. Streetsville High School is not an institution where such people are educated, but a place where the prominent men and women of to-morrow are prepared for his or her post in life.

There is no doubt that the odd note has been imitated from one of the daily newspapers and passed in a "Latin" or "History" period to break its dull monotony.

By the machinations of the police we have realized that (it) (writing of notes) may develop into more than a practical joke.

One cannot imagne that anyone would suspect that one of the pupils would stoop to such ghoulish tricks as robbing graves or writing threatening letters to residents of the village of Streetsville to gratify a fiendish desire to see villagers terrified or our detectives running up blind allies. We had expected better things, we had hoped that there would have been more faith shown in us and a stronger stand taken in our defence. We are at a loss to understand why the fair name of Streetsville High School should be dragged through the mire and the police called in in an attempt to place the blame on one of the pupils of the school.

We hope that the delivery of a similar note last Friday will eliminate the suspicions that Streetsville High School was the origination of the Ghoulish notes.

The statements to the effect "we are nearing the end" and that it seems as if some of the adolescent High School boys of the local High School are responsible for the crime, ought to be changed as the incident of the robbing of a grave in Streetsville cemetery on Oct. 11 was repeated at Woodbridge on or about the night of Nov. 4.

The pupils of Streetsville High School are of a higher calibre and look for the better things of life and have no time to indulge in molesting graves or writing and delivering threatening letters.

The police can look forward to the undivided co-operation of the pupils of Streetsville High School. We, as pupils wish greatest success to the men in charge and may they soon bring in the one, or ones, who are responsible for these incidences that are causing untold uneasiness among the people of the district.

We hope that in the sight of the public, the Streetsville High School, which is given to us by you, is not a place where they produce young criminals, but the men of to-morrow. We will, as students, endeavour to live up to our standard to the highest degree.

Esse Quam Videri (to be rather than to seem).

Our New School

The question of a new school for Streetsville is still worrying the members of the Public and High School Boards. The two Boards have met many times. An architect gave them plans of a combined School to cost $81,000. This was considered too high a price for the village, so the architect was called in again, and advised to make some changes in the plans so as to reduce the cost to about $60,000. The two Boards met again Monday night of this week and decided to petition the Village Council to supply about $65,000 for the purpose, or to take a vote of the ratepayers on the same at the next Municipal elections in January. A deputation from the School Boards are expected to interview the Council next Monday night on the matter. It is the feeling of many people that we must do something to improve our educational facilities.

COMMUNITY CLUB

The Community Club met at the home of Mrs. W. Leslie, Thursday, Nov. 4th. President in the chair. The minutes were read and business arising out of them discussed. As this was our Hallowe'en meeting, Mrs. Atkinson took charge. The roll call was answered by each one doing whatever they were asked to do, Mrs. Hensley winning the prize.

We were then divided in groups, Mrs. Atkinson, Mrs. Lee, Mrs. McCracken and Mrs. Steen acting as captains. Th first group finished in each contest won a prize. Mrs. Lee gave a reading, Mrs. McCracken told a ghost story, and Mrs. Steen gave a reading.

Mrs. Campbell was dressed as a witch, wearing a skirt belonging to her grandmother.

The hostess served a dainty lunch.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. McCracken, Wednesday, Nov. 17th. Roll call to be answered by telling what qualities you think are best in a woman.

A miscellaneous shower was given at the home of Mrs. Cliff May on Monday afternoon for the Nunan family, who so unfortunately lost their home by fire recently.

UNITED CHURCH NEWS

The Young People of the United Church met Tuesday evening. A radio was installed, from which three United Church ministers gave half hour addresses on Home & Foreign Missions. Rev. Peter Bryce, Moderator, spoke on Missionary Maintenance and World Peace. President Herb Hersom was in the chair and conducted the general business, after which Jim Steen, leader of Christian Fellowship Dept., took the meeting. He had four different topics, choosing four leaders: Leona Durie, Edna Stephens, Omar Turney and Herb Hersom. Each leader formed a group taking a question and discussing it for a few minutes, after which they gave their reports for the benefit of all present

Musical selections were given by Miss Pauline Groves of Ingersoll.

Dear Acquaintances:

I do not know whether it is customary to express one's private feelings to the public in this way or not, but I would like to. Certain persons in Streetsville and vicinity are regarding me as a criminal of the worst kind Some even refuse to say "Hello" to me on the street, because I have been suspected of being mixed up in this terrible crime of robbing a grave and writing notes. I must admit that there was some circumstantial evidence against me but that was all. I would like to say this to you on my word of honor "I did not write any of the notes which have been sent, including the one signed by "Streetsville High School Boy," nor do I know who wrote them. I am in no way connected with the case and hope you will discontinue regarding me as if I had had something to do with it."

Yours truly
HUGH LAMB

Streetsville, Nov. 9, 1937

Another Note

Still another note has been found in connection with the Streetsville and Woodbridge grave robberies. This time it was at Holland Landing many miles away. Probably it was written by some fool and thrown on the street where some child would pick it up. It eventually got into the hands of the daily newspapers which published columns about it for the morbid minded to read. This thing is not doing these villages any good, and the sooner the police get the matter straightened up, and the maniac behind the bars, the better. Many women are scared to venture out after dark—and the merchants say its hard on business

Orange Supper

Last Friday evening Streetsville Orangemen and Orange Women held their annual supper in memory of Guy Fawkes Day. There was a good turnout and a splendid supper was served. Then followed a short program, with Gordon Graydon M P as the guest speaker of the evening. Dancing was indulged in until a late hour, with Ed. Lowden's Orchestra supplying the music. Everybody had a good time, as they always do on Orange nights.

Malton United Church celebrated its 50th anniversary on Sunday Nov. 7th, with special services and special preachers from Toronto.

North May Still Secede

A report that the move to have Toronto Township divided into two sections had collapsed was denied by Omar Turney, leader of the movement yesterday. The agitation for secession was started by a group composed mainly of farmers in the north end of the township, over a year ago.

"We have no idea of allowing the matter to 'fall through'," Mr. Turney stated. "The movement, which has gained wide support among the farmers of the north, is still very much alive. Our activities have been confined to consulting the Department of Municipal Affairs. In our attempt to bring the matter to completion we were delayed to a certain extent by the recent election, but now this is over, and we are expecting some action. Within a few days we expect to send a deputation to wait upon the head of the department to obtain further information and instructions."

The movement toward secession is the result of the "lack of common interests" between the north and south sections of the township. The north, extending beyond the Dundas Highway, is composed mainly of farmers, while the south tends toward industrialism, he pointed out. The difference between the two areas "had been brought to a head" by the fact that the farmers of the north were forced to share the heavy liabilities of the south, in relief and other matters, he said.

John William Bessey passed away at Georgetown on Nov. 8th, and the funeral took place to Georgetown cemetery. He is survived by his widow, formerly Annie Taylor.

The funeral of the late Mrs. John McLaren of Toronto, took place to Brampton cemetery yesterday. Besides her husband, she leaves one daughter and two sons.

Tree Forms Its New Buds Before It Sheds Leaves

The growing periods of trees usually are the same as the periods when the leaves are green. In winter they rest and live economically on what they have laid away, waiting for the return of spring to continue their growth, observes a writer in the Missouri Farmer. It is in this way that the "growth rings" are formed, and when a tree is cut, these rings show the periods of growth and of rest which the tree has lived through.

The buds are inactive during the winter. Most of them were formed before the leaves were shed in the fall. They are protected by cork-like scales, sometimes covered with a wax secreted by the tree. In this way they pass the cold days in snug comfort, resting till the warm days shall lure them to burst from their little houses and spring out as new green leaves.

The roots continue to absorb water unless the ground is frozen all about them. However, they usually have many roots which go down far below the frost line, and are always able to search for water. Since the whole tree is very inactive, it requires very little water compared with the active summer months. The tree is constantly losing water by evaporation, and if the roots are not able to secure as much water as is evaporated from the limbs and twigs, death is likely to result. In summer, one tree may lose nearly a thousand gallons of water in a single day by evaporation. In winter this amount may be reduced to a few pints or less.

Shakers, Serious People, in Sober Gray and White

The Shakers went about the world in sober gray and white, says the Boston Transcript.

Their woolens and upholster's plushes glow with rich color. So, too, with the furniture. Simple in line and mass, it is rich with the warm texture of wood worn smooth by diligent hands.

Just the names show what a rigorously functional culture was the Shakers. A tailoresses' counter, a towel rack, a sewing cabinet, a wood box, wall cupboards, trustees' desk, a mirror and rack (touch of vanity), an infirmary three-drawer washstand, a blanket chest, a dairy counter, a wall clock, a trestle table, a weave chest, a loom board, a loom stool—here are the objects revealing more than words can of the daily existence of the Shakers. It was a life built around the crafts, around agriculture and artisanship. And the craftsmen used the materials of daily life, the native pine, maple, birch and cherry, sometimes staining the wood deeper tones.

Yugoslav Theater Is 324

One of the oldest known theaters in Europe and a relic of the Italian Renaissance influence, which swept Dalmatia in the Sixteenth century, is the National Theater in Hvar island, which ranks, also, as the first Yugoslav theater. Built in 1612, to the order of Pietro Semitelco, Duke of Hvar, it bears a marble plate commemorating the "Second Year of Peace, 1612," referring to the restored peace after a century of civil warfare between Hvar citizens and nobles. Two other theaters were built before it, according to an authority. They are the theater at Venice, built in 1565, and the theater at Vicenza, built in 1585.

Hawaii Got Turkeys in 1815

America is the home of the turkey but Hawaii never saw a turkey until more than 100 years ago. In 1815 Queen Kaahumanu went aboard a trading schooner and saw turkeys Capt. John Meek had obtained in Chile. Never had she seen such large birds before. Upon going ashore she told the king. The king went to the vessel and asked for the birds. Upon refusal he seized the turkeys and went ashore. The birds later escaped. On the slopes of the island's volcanoes and even in the United States national park wild turkeys are fairly numerous, believed to be descendants of those brought to the islands by Captain Meek.

Cannot Live Without Salt

Neither man nor beast can live without salt. It is essential to the health of all living things. The Romans paid wages in salt—whence the word "salary;" "True to his salt" meant loyal to his employer, who paid him his wage. "To spill the salt"—i. e., to lose hard-earned cash—was a bit of bad luck; so grew the superstition that it is unlucky to spill salt. The Jews used salt in sacrifices, and spilling the salt after it had been placed on the victim's head was held to be a bad omen.

Bassoon Reaches Deep Tones

The bassoon is the low voice of the wood-wind group and great skill is required to make it deliver the effects of which it is capable. It has possibilities as an orchestral clown, but is also capable of warm and passionate expression. It is valuable in the orchestra to increase the body of tone and infuse it with warmth. The contrabassoon is a larger instrument with still deeper notes. About sixteen feet long, it is folded six times upon itself.

THE DOG TAX AND LIVE STOCK PROTECTION ACT

This legislation protects live stock owners against the ravages of dogs

This Act requires:—

The taxing of dogs and the issuing of dog tags.

—where live stock (Cattle and Sheep) are injured, the owner shall notify the local Valuer or the Reeve of the Municipality within forty-eight hours after discovery of the damage.

—the local Valuer must make two reports, one for the Municipality, and one for the owner of the livestock.

—if either of these is not satisfied with the report, he may appeal to the Minister of Agriculture for another Valuer by depositing $25.00. This money is returned if the appeal is successful but is forfeited if the appeal is lost.

—the award made by the Valuer appointed by the Minister is final.

TELEPHONE TALKS IN THE WATSON FAMILY

"Yes, Mary ... and Tom's fine, too."

Old Mrs. Watson lives with her son Tom. Yet her only daughter Mary, miles away, is with her too, for Mary, though old-fashioned in many ways, is definitely telephone minded and never fails to call her Mother on Long Distance at least once a week — an inexpensive and supreme pleasure for both of them. As Tom Watson puts it, "though our family's scattered, we're never really far apart — with the telephone."

Getting Along Without

The Welland Tribune advocates the abolishing of nuisances at weddings. Is it possible they are going to dispense with grooms?—Chatham News.

Was There An Election?

The Ontario election passed so abruptly into history that already we're beginning to doubt if there was an election after all. Perhaps we're right.—Toronto Saturday Night.

Slaughter of the Innocents

Late figures show that 1,300,000 persons have been killed in the Spanish war. It would not be so bad if they were all soldiers, but the greatest slaughter has been created among innocent civilians.—Chatham News.

Parole System a Menace

The parole system is supported by sentimentalists as a means of reclaiming convicted criminals. Actually, the parole system is a trusted ally of crime when applied to criminals of the violent type. It loads the dice in favor of outlaws, and exposes society to the risks created by the theory that a thug who has served a term may be reformed.—Toronto Telegram.

A Burden On Property

. . . Municipalities in Canada must be relieved of their share of unemployment relief. The burden of taxation on real estate in this country is too heavy. Increased taxation arising out of relief expenditures has been destroying property values throughout the entire Dominion and many property owners have found it necessary to forfeit their property for unpaid taxes.—Toronto Financial Post.

"Humane Hunting"

"Fishing for pheasants," as it is called, is about the lowest imitation of sportsmanship to come to light in this age and generation. Small fish hooks, baited with raisins and wet grain, are suspended on wire fences surrounding wooded sections of the country where pheasants are known to be. Impaled on the cruel barbs of these hooks, the trapped pheasants hang in misery for hours before dying. If that's humane hunting, the whole business should be squelched by law.—Stratford Beacon-Herald.

Behind the Times

In the county of Waterloo is a religious sect whose members still cling to the quaint old beliefs that a man's word is as good as his contract, that one should not borrow more than he intends to repay, and that the simple things of life are the best.

Queer, these people are so far behind the times. They know not the joy of instalment purchases, double dealing, onerous debt. Their beliefs set them entirely apart.

Yet they live in peace and contentment, in fellowship and friendship with their neighbors, unworried by tomorrow's reckoning. And the hurrying, biased world might find the utopia it seeks in the life of these fortunate, carefree farmers. — Guelph Mercury.

Canadian Unity

Everyone must understand that the provinces of Canada will gain nothing by being jealous of one another or, again, by showing indifference to all activity outside their own boundaries. While if we draw closer together, if we decide to join our talents and our energies—ah! then what we have accomplished up to now in the national domain, however proud we may be of it, will be insignificant beside the marvels that it will be possible for us to attain. The true prosperity of Canada, the secret of its prestige, is in the good will of its inhabitants. Consummation of national union is a work of major importance, as Sir Herbert Marler has reminded us. We must all co-operate in it. — La Presse (Montreal).

THE EMPIRE

Immigration and Peace

As one way to peace, Sir Edward Beatty, chairman of the Canadian Pacific Railway, recommends the adoption of "saner economic policies and the resumption of immigration." His prescription is a wise one, for there can be no doubt that international friction has been increased by the rising of national barriers against trade and the closing of national frontiers against immigration. Many of these restrictions on the free movement of goods and persons are reactions from the last war. It fomented the passions of narrow nationalism and these are bearing shrivelled and barren fruit in many lands today. Thus the War has poisoned the peace; the Armistice ended the military war, but the economic war was intensified, producing the conditions leading on to further military hostilities. — Auckland News.

Anglo-American Agreement

It is clear . . . that by the continued delay we are running grave risks of losing the agreement, or at least an agreement that would be worth while. Mr. Cordell Hull's programme of tariff reductions and freer trade is not altogether enthusiastically received in the United States. The longer mutual concessions between this country and the United States are postponed the more time will be given for American traditional Protectionism to reassert itself. There is already serious disappointment in Washington at the half-heartedness of the British response. We are in danger of missing our chance altogether. An early declaration by the British Government is much to be desired. The country has a right to know whether it is true that an agreement of such vital importance to British industry is being held up because one or two of the Dominions are making unreasonable use of their position under the Ottawa agreements. —Manchester Guardian.

Sporting Comment

By KEN EDWARDS

Heilo, Gang! This article starts us off on a series of informative official boxing rules which will not hurt to study, even though you may not be a boxing fan. You will find below a list of the weights and classes of boxers:—

	Pounds
Flyweight	112
Bantamweight	118
Featherweight	126
Lightweight	135
Welterweight	147
Middleweight	160
Light Heavyweight	175
Heavyweight	all over

At 2 o'clock of the day of the contest, unless otherwise ordered, the contestants shall be weighed on the commission scales and medically examined. In the event of a 24-hour postponement, weights and physical examination of original date of contest are to hold. In the event of a postponement, requiring the show to be held later than 24 hours after the original date, new weights and physical examinations are required.

The gloves are to be new ones for all events, and should not weigh less than five ounces each, and are to be furnished by the club management.

Each boxer must be equipped with two pairs of trunks of the following colors:

(a) Blue waist band with purple body.
(b) Red waistband, two-inch red side-stripe and black body.
(c) An abdominal guard approved by the commission.
(d) Bandages should be restricted to soft cloth, not more than six feet in length and one and one-half inches in width, held in place by not more than two feet of surgeon's tape, for each hand. An official shall watch the adjustment of these bandages in the dressing room.

Watch for the continuation of these rules next week.

So-long!

Champion Plowman

Fred Timbers, of Ringwood, Ontario, was judged the Grand Champion of the recent International Plowing Match held at Fergus, Ontario. For three years in succession, Timbers and his tractor, equipped with Firestone Ground Grip Tractor Tires, have won the championship and now retain permanent custody of the Championship cup. Attended by 115,000 farmers, over seventy tractors competed in the field at one time during the International Plowing Match held at Fergus, Ontario, from October 12th to 15th. Only six tractors were on steel-lugged wheels, the remainder being rubber-tired, which reflects the tremendous growth of pneumatic tires for tractors since they were introduced at the Ottawa Match in 1930.

Actor Advises Future Doctors

Sir Seymour Hicks Says "Beware Of the Bedside Manner"

LONDON.—Sir Seymour Hicks, who has played almost every possible type of part in half a century on the stage, filled a new role when he gave advice to young medical students.

He was inaugurating a new school year of the Westminster Hospital Medical School at the Caxton Hall, London, England.

His speech was filled with anecdotes, many of them, he claimed, "very nearly true," and all designed to give point to sound advice from "just an ordinary fellow who paints his nose for a living."

Eliminate Fear

Advice which he offered included: "It is a doctor's duty to eliminate fear. Fear is the usher who brings us to your waiting-room. A good doctor who is also a good actor can inspire confidence.

"Of all the difficult people with whom you have to contend the worst are artists. They are nervous people who live on their nerves—or other people's—and have to be treated as with a silken thread.

"Always beware of the man who 'wants to know the truth.' Believe me, that is the last thing he wants.

Cheerful Expression

"See that you have a cheerful maid to open the door. Too often the door is opened by a maid whose face seems to say: 'This way to the morgue.'

'Beware of the bedside manner. Carried to excess it makes one wonder whether to be up and about or to invite the undertaker to lunch."

"Give Snobs a Kick"

"Never let anyone talk scandal to you. Always bet 10 to 1 against anything you are told, and you will make money. Forget luck in life; make everyone you meet an opportunity. Never quarrel with anyone, and if you are annoyed go to your room and bite the wardrobe—it will relieve you.

"Fifty per cent. of us are natural, 30 per cent. are shy, 10 per cent. are snobs, and 10 per cent. idiots. Be nice to the natural people, tolerant to the shy, give the snobs a kick, and thank God for the idiots, for they will never find you out."

New Control Discovered Over Processes of Life

Science Gains Secret of Controlling Inheritance In Living Cells by Chemical—Discoverer Believes Man Likely to Direct Own Future Evolution

Discovery of a new control over fundamental processes of life in plants and animals—which may even give man power to direct the course of his own future evolution—was announced last week before the U.S. National Academy of Sciences.

Juggles "Life Threads"

This newest advance of science toward understanding and control of life is a method of juggling chromosomes, the "threads of life" which control inheritance, in living cells.

Dr. Albert F. Blakeslee, geneticist of the Carnegie Institute of Washington's laboratory at Woods Hole, Mass., told members of the Academy, meeting at Rochester, N.Y., that he can change the number of them at will in plants with a chemical called colchicine.

By simply spraying the plants, or dipping them into a solution of the chemical the number of chromosomes in thousands of cells is doubled and the plants become entirely different in appearance and behavior. Fruits and vegetables are made larger and better.

New Flowers, Fruits

New forms of plants never seen in nature have been created by this method, Dr. Blakeslee declared. New kinds of vegetables, flowers and fruits can and will be created, he added.

This method apparently has been nature's method of evolution for centuries, the Carnegie Institution scientist said, but now man can improve on nature.

Whether the same method can be used on the chromosomes of animals, including man, is not yet known since it has not been tried. However, these threads of life, each of which carries many genes, or inheritance factors, are similar in all plants and animals and the method may prove workable, possibly even to the extent of creating new and improved forms of animals, geneticists familiar with Dr. Blakeslee's work say.

Super-Race Possible

It is not likely that a race of "supermen" will be created in the near future, they added, but it has been found that the reproductive cells of animals can be manipulated in many other ways, they may also respond to the chromosome-doubling treatment.

Dr. Blakeslee has already proposed that the United States Department of Agriculture co-operate with the Carnegie Institution to use the method in developing new and better agricultural products.

The effects of colchicine in doubling the number of chromosomes may also prove to be a new clue in solving the mystery of life itself, scientists attending the meeting pointed out, because it is a close chemical relative of such diverse compounds as the sex hormones; vitamins; the coal tar substances which brought out some forms of cancer; digitalis, used as a heart stimulant; ergosterol, which prevents rickets; toad poisons; and morphine and codeine.

The relationship of these chemicals and their widely diverse effects on the human body is a baffling puzzle to science.

Royal Entertains Young Farmers

Boy and Girl Finalists Will Meet At The Winter Fair, Toronto, In Judging Competitions.

Sixty-two boys and girls, members of local clubs all over Canada, are to meet at the Royal Winter Fair at midmonth in judging competitions covering dairy and beef cattle, swine, poultry, grain and potatoes. These are the finalists chosen at preliminary contests which have been held in the provinces at various dates since September 1 under projects arranged by the Canadian Council on Boys' and Girls' Club Work, a body with Ottawa headquarters sponsored by a number of agricultural interests, and having in the nine provinces a total membership of over 35,000 boys and girls.

Club teams of two members each arriving in Toronto on Sunday, November 14, as guests of the Council will be educationally entertained while in the city and taken for inspection tours of several industrial plants. These competitions on the day preceding the Royal Winter Fair opening have for some years been a popular feature of its junior agricultural work.

News Parade

Commentary on the Highlights of the Week's News . . . by Peter Randal

TRIPLE ALLIANCE: The Soviet Government newspaper, Izvestia, intimates that the three countries of the world most definitely Fascist (Italy, Japan and Germany), are preparing to join in a triple alliance against Communism, and that "the agreement among the aggressors means a program of war." A program of war, in other words, in which capitalism will fight communism, and belief be pitted against belief. As George Bernard Shaw expressed it this week, "What is threatening us today is a war like the wars of religion in the seventeenth century."

DOMINION STATUS: As soon as Newfoundland can manage to pull herself out of financial difficulties, the island will return to Dominion status, Dominions Secretary, Malcolm MacDonald assured the British House last week. It will be remembered that Newfoundland has been under a Commission Government since the depression more or less wrecked its industries. But during the past summer, paper, logging and mining have picked up there and a general quickening of economic activity is reflected in the latest figures released. It may not be long, then, before Newfoundland once more becomes a Dominion.

COMMERCIAL RECOGNITION: — Britain has concluded a trade agreement with insurgent Spain. Although such a move is "purely a commercial affair" and does not involve diplomatic recognition, it cannot be denied that Britain has at least admitted the existence of General Franco's Government. "Diplomatic recognition" and the exchange of ambassadors will no doubt follow fast. The British Government has never actually championed the cause of the Spanish Loyalists, hence this latest move is a consequence of no sudden reversal of policy.

PALESTINE PERIL: Stories about the terror in Palestine may not occupy as much front page space these days as the Sino-Jap War or the Spanish conflict, but the importance is there just the same. If you want to put your finger on Britain's chief worry at the moment . . . . Mussolini is styling himself the protector of Islam and is originating a vast amount of anti-British propaganda which charges that Arab revolts in Palestine have been put down in a most cruel fashion and that the populace of Palestine have been accorded vile treatment at the hands of the British. Meanwhile terrorism continues, the civil death list from fire and the sword mounts daily. Last week floods took an additional toll.

BIBLES UP: Due to the rising costs of paper and other materials the price of Bibles printed in England has gone up sixteen per cent.

SLUM CLEARANCE: On the sixth of December all Toronto property owners will have a chance to vote on a $2,000,000 debenture issue to be used in the demolition of the city's slums and in the construction of low-cost housing for lower-bracket wage groups. Dr. Bruce's agitation for slum clearance a year or so past, is now getting things done. That is if the electors can see their way clear.

Improved housing does not altogether solve the problem of the rehabilitation of the poor. It is a step in the right direction but a great many other steps will have to be taken too before beneficial results begin to be felt. A survey made in Great Britain shows that better housing actually impaired the health of tenants in a great many cases, since a rise in rents, however slight, meant less money for food.

That is one side of the question. If, however, the City of Toronto is willing not to stop at slum clearance but to go further and help the worker obtain a decent living wage, it will be cause for greatest rejoicing.

A BREAK FOR OLD ONTARIO:— The departure of many farmers in the West from drought-stricken areas is expected to result in a boom for Old Ontario farmlands. Some of these men with their families are the cream of the country, of solid character, progressive outlook. Those who have come through the lean years with a whole skin, a few cattle and a little money are prepared to dig in and make a success of farming down here. Others whom crop failures have made penniless are being helped to settle in Ontario, with rent paid a year in advance by their respective governments.

HEALTH INSURANCE: Back from an extended visit abroad where he made a thorough study of Europe's health insurance schemes, Dr. Clarence Routley, secretary of the Canadian Medical Association, says that Canadian doctors and hospitals must prepare for the coming of health insurance in this country. Dr. Routley liked the British system best.

News In Review

Terrorism In Transjordan

BEIRUT, Lebanon, Troops of Saudi Arabia were reported concentrating this week-end on the southern border of Transjordan, where widespread disorders occurred after a pro-British speech by King Abdullah in the Transjordan Parliament.

Dispatches reaching Beirut said the King told his parliament that while he sympathized with the Arab cause, he reaffirmed his country's friendship with Great Britain.

Shortly after his speech, an unexploded bomb was found in the office of the King. Similar bombs were said to have been found in several of the Transjordan towns, and Nationalists circulated pamphlets in Amman urging a revolution.

Fishing Rights Jeopardized

MOSCOW.—Blunt warning was given to Japan this week that any extension of the German-Japanese anti-Comintern pact to include Italy would imperil Japan's fishing rights in Siberian waters.

The warning was issued by Izvestia, Government organ, on the eve of a reported discussion of an agreement with Italy by the Japanese Privy Council and after the Tokio Government had already taken up with the Narkomindel (Foreign Commissariat) the question of renewing its fishing leases.

"Good Government" Returned

NEW YORK, — Old Tammany took its second successive beating when New York voters re-elected Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia by a record-breaking total, and selected racket-smashing Thomas E. Dewey for District Attorney of New York County. LaGuardia received 1,344,016 votes — a margin of 454,425 over Jeremiah T. Mahoney, Democrat. Both support President Roosevelt policies

Wins Acquittal

BARRIE, — Supreme Court Assize jury here this week-end acquitted Alan Brown, 27, Orillia, charged with manslaughter in connection with the death of Stanley Clendenning, 23-year-old Orillia youth, February 7th.

Clendenning died as a result of an accident in which an automobile driven west by Brown, between Atherley and Orillia, struck Clendenning, who was walking east with three other youths.

Luncheon Guests

PARIS, — The Duke and Duchess of Windsor were luncheon guests Friday at the British Embassy prior to their departure for the United States. The invitation was extended by Ambassador Sir Eric Phipps.

School Is Bombed

MADRID — Rescue squads searched bomb-shattered buildings of the Catalan City Lerida this week-end for additional victims of an insurgent air raid already reported by the government to have taken 125 lives. Hospitals were filled with injured men, women and children.

More than 50 bodies of children were removed from a primary school, wrecked over their heads near closing time when nine tri-motored planes roared in from the west and dumped explosives. A Government communique called the raid a "vicious and criminal attack upon a civilian population."

Referred to Supreme Court

OTTAWA, — Alberta's bank taxation, credit control and newspaper regulation bills, passed at the last special session of the Legislature, will be subject to reference to the Supreme Court and probably the Privy Council to determine if they will become law, Premier Mackenzie King announced last week.

The Supreme Court will be asked to depart from its usual custom and "receive such evidence and admit such proof," as it may consider necessary in order to determine whether the bills, if allowed to become a law, would be within the competence of the Alberta Legislature.

Neutralization Plan Fails

SHANGHAI, — Efforts of the powers, led by Britain, the United States and France, to neutralize Shanghai as soon as the long Chinese-Japanese battle around this city ends, have failed completely, reliable Japanese sources told the United Press this week.

Military reasons prohibit such neutralization, they said.

Naval Fliers Killed

SEATTLE, — Five naval fliers were killed and two injured in a collision between two fighting planes 3,000 feet above Boeing Field.

Apparently trapped in the ruins of their bly navy amphibian, the five fell to their deaths. The other two men, in a smaller naval plane, leaped to safety with parachutes.

Cuban President In U. S.

MONTREAL, — Gerardo Machado, ousted President of Cuba, who has been living in Montreal, has obtained permission to enter the United States temporarily for a surgical operation, this week, it was learned authoritatively.

HAVE YOU HEARD

A dear old lady returned from her first visit to France. "What impressed you most?" she was asked.

"Well," she replied, after a moment or two's thought, "I think it was the French peasants singing the mayonnaise."

Now follows a better way to prepare for the morrow:

All of us are always going to do better tomorrow, and we would, too, if only we started today.

Five-year-old Billy was talking to his Aunt Mary. She said. "Well," Billy, I suppose you'll start to school next year."

"Oh, no, auntie," replied the boy. "What would I do in school—I can't even read or write?"

A friend of ours believes it is perfectly alright for the government to spend a million dollars before breakfast, but thinks it is a terrible squander of money for the city board to spend $3,000 over a period of years for gravelling the streets.

Sailor— We just dropped our anchor, lady.

Lady—I thought you would. It's been dangling outside for some time.

They were entertaining friends in their new house. Suddenly one of the guests sat up and listened.

"Surely you are not troubled by mice already?" she said.

"That's not mice," replied the householder. "That's the people next door eating celery."

Two wives were discussing their respective husbands over a cup of tea. The first complained that her husband never came home from his club until it was past midnight.

"Well, my dear," said her friend, "for years I wondered where my husband was spending his evenings. And then one night I reached home early —and there he was!"

Captain — "Have you cleaned the deck and polished the brasses?"

Sailor— "Yes, sir, and I've swept the horizon with my telescope."

Old Gent—"What do you mean by saying your occupation has gone?"

Tramp—"They've pulled down the house I used to lean against."

Modern Bluenoses "Bunch of Softies"

Captain Walters Snorts at Nova Scotia's Pleasure-Loving Youth

Bluenose sailormen, descendants of those iron men who sailed wooden ships 50 years ago, are a thing of the past, in the opinion of Captain Angus Walters, of Halifax, skipper of the Lunenburg banker Bluenose.

"The pleasure-loving generation of today are a bunch of softies," commented the man who took command of the Bluenose when launched in 1921, and has helped her keep her title of Queen of the North Atlantic Fishing Fleet ever since.

The future of the fishing industry in Nova Scotia was threatened by a shortage of young men willing to dare the hardships and dangers of Bank fishing, the Bluenose skipper said in an interview. He did not know if this shortage was caused by prospect of poor returns from fishing or whether it was "just the effects of our pleasure-seeking age."

Automobiles, radios, dance music and other distractions had lured the young men away from the sea. He added the time was not far distant when Lunenburg's famous fleet would put out to sea manned by alien crews. Already there was a fair-sized sprinkling of sailors from Newfoundland and other countries manning the Bankers.

In everyone's life there's more prose than poetry.

An Englishman visiting an American lake asked a native if the place was good for fishing.

"Sure, stranger."

"What kind of fish?"

"Oh, all kinds, stranger."

"What did the largest fish you ever caught weigh?"

"Wall, stranger, we don't take weighing machines when we go fishing, and I'm an honest man and would not like to say how much the last trout I caught would weigh. But when I pulled that fish out of the water, the lake went down a foot."

There is, just now, quite an argument on among those who study the brain and nerves, about worry. Surprising as it may seem, there are high authorities upon the subject who say a certain amount of worry is a good thing. This depends upon what is understood by worry. If it is a mere nervous anxiety, it is bad. If it is more or less calm effort to figure out one's troubles and seek to find a remedy, it is, of course, a good thing.

Along Canada's Mining Highway

Regardless of wars and stock markets, mining and oil developments denote continuous progress.

Recent highlights in Quebec are the indications of big mine probabilities on Sladen Malartic and East Malartic, and an enlarging and higher grade ore outlook on Powell Rouyn.

In Ontario's Larder Lake area, Barber Larder is the rising star, with important mine indications. Omega, Kerr Addison and Martin Bird continue to develop favourably. Oriole has new developments of promise.

Kirkland Lake Gold is meeting with splendid success at depth. Other Kirkland Lake producers show steady production record.

In the Porcupine camp, Moneta and Pamour have outstanding favourable ore disclosures.

In the Long Lac camp, Hardrock is preparing for production, with the mine indicating an important future.

Hutchison Lake, on underground work, is shaping up favourably.

In Patricia, the Albany River mine, after a long period of uncertainly, is developing important ore. Crowshore, adjoining, is proving the continuance of the favourable structure.

In Alberta, the Turner Valley oil field is showing rapid expansion. Recent new production successes indicate important future dividends for Royalite, Brown Oil, Davies Petroleum, Monarch, Foundation and Commonwealth. One hundred miles to the south of Turner Valley, at Taber, the Plains Petroleum Company has attained success with a commercial producer.

British Columbia has new gold interest on the west coast of Vancouver Island.

Ninety-Foot Drop Down Mail Chute

Englishman Has Surprise Alice-In-Wonderland Journey

James Thomas, 69, is recovering from the surprise of an Alice-in-Wonderland subterranean journey he made last week.

Mr. Thomas stepped off the Newmarket race train at Liverpool St. station, London, England, and walked across the platform towards a cab. He stumbled over a railing and disappeared head first into a hole.

His wife screamed and fainted. Porters rushed up. Meanwhile Mr. Thomas plunged at express speed down a 90-foot long steel letter chute to the post office in the tube station under the street.

Turned Up In Post Office

Ten seconds late, breathless and aghast, his bowler hat bouncing before him, he shot on to the revolving hand, Charlie Chaplin fashion. Dumbfounded postal workers stopped the machinery and picked up the white-haired man, who had suffered nothing worse than a slight cut on one hand and a bad shaking up.

He was taken back to his wife. She revived at the sight of her lost husband. "Oh, Squibbs!" she cried, and they embraced as hundreds cheered the return of the man "who went down there."

Diamonds Found On Lake Bottom

The South African Government last week despatched a special force of diamond police to Verneuk Pan to guard a newly discovered diamond field, pending a legal decision on an action to stay prospecting. Verneuk Pan is a lake bed in Calvinia where Sir Malcolm Campbell established automobile speed records in 1929. It is located in a desolate part of Cape Province. Some experts declared the stones found so far were small and of poor quality.

Coal deposits in Manchoukuo have just been estimated at 8,000,000 tons.

Here and There WITH THE BOY SCOUTS

The old British trawler, "Espero," which was used in the filming of Victor Hugo's "Toilers of the Sea," is now the floating home of Sea Scouts of the Island of Guernsey. The old vessel, which had been abandoned by the moving picture people on the conclusion of their work, had sunk in St. Peter Port Harbor. It was purchased at auction by Rev. G. A. Taitt, and handed over to the Boy Scouts. The Scouts are refitting the old craft, under the guidance of a ship's carpenter.

When at home at Pax Hill, Hampshire, Lord Baden-Powell, World Chief Scout, begins his day at 6 a.m. with a walk, accompanied by his three dogs. One of these is a big black "Labrador," old and blind. At every stile, relates Mr. J. F. Stewart of Toronto, a summer guest of the Chief Scout, Baden-Powell helps the old dog over, and guides him through the gate. When they turn back for home, the old dog presses his nose against his master, and is given his cane. Proudly carrying this, the dog goes ahead, and arriving in front of the house, walks slowly in a circle until the Chief Scout comes, and with a pat, takes the cane from him.

B.-P. is pictured as a most entertaining host, still full of the play spirit of boyhood. "At dinner one night," related the visitor, "he gave us his ideas of a Caledonia market—a jumble of people, shacks, booths and noise, and wound up with a lively portrayal of a coster selling "barmalade."

A story told by B.-P. with great zest described a military reception when he was a young officer in India. As a prank, he and another youngster carefully disguised themselves and went as "newspaper correspondents," one allegedly for a French newspaper, the other for "a London daily." Chuckling as though the affair had happened but yesterday, B.-P. recounted the chats he had with various people present, including one elderly lady who was pleased to recall having met him in London the previous season—when B.-P. was in India.

The Chief Scout was described as remarkably active, and "at 81, as fine a specimen of a well preserved elderly man as one would find anywhere." He always sleeps in a corner room which has no walls on two sides; he rises regularly at 6 o'clock, and goes for a walk with his dogs. On his return he goes through his small mountain of morning mail, and has it ready for his secretary before breakfast.

• • •

The visitor marveled at the amount of work done by the entire Baden-Powell family. "Sometimes there were three typewriters going— Lady B.-P. at her machine on Guide affairs, the Hon. Heather B.-P. on news matter for the press, and the Chief's secretary on his correspondence. A regular workshop!"

WOMEN WHO SUFFER

WOMEN who suffer in silence often pay double penalty for adding this pain of unhappiness of silly pride. Painful periods are nature's warning that something is wrong and seek immediate attention. Growing girls as well as women in middle life are often suffering from female irregularities. They find Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a dependable tonic. Read what Mrs. John Roth, Route 4, Exeter, Ont., said: "I lost weight, suffered from headaches and my strength was completely gone. It was almost impossible for me to eat. Mother advised me to take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and in a short time I was feeling fine again." New size, tabs. 50c. Buy now!

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

AUTUMN SNAPSHOOTING

Fall landscapes add much to the artistic appeal of your photo album.

WE MAY sing of the flowers that bloom in the spring—tra-la—but a song cannot adequately describe the wonderful colorings that Mother Nature bestows upon the trees and shrubs in the fall. The woods are ablaze with color and new colorful fall flowers appear. Lakes, rivers, and the well known babbling brook seems to reflect these bright colors.

Now, let's consider the type of film to use for fall colors. For example, suppose you are taking a picture of a bed of fall flowers—some deep orange or red and others dark blue. Ordinary film, not the chrome type, would yield a print in which the brighter colored flowers would appear darker than the blue ones, though to the eye the orange and red flowers appeared lighter. It would not, in other words, give true color brightness values in black and white print. However, with what is known as panchromatic film the true tonal values in monochrome rendering will be obtained.

Renderings of color and cloud effects are further improved by the use of proper color filters with any type film, including the chrome and panchromatic.

A filter is a specially prepared disc of colored gelatine, between glass, which is slipped over the camera lens. Its function is to hold back certain rays of light and let others pass through. Although there are several kinds, I believe the beginner who has never used a filter might choose between the two most popularly used, or better yet, have both to use when necessary to improve the quality and artistic appearance of the snapshot.

One of these filters is known as the K-2. When using the K-2 filter with chrome type film, it is necessary to increase the exposure over that which you would give without the filter about 2½ times. With supersensitive panchromatic film the exposure with a K-2 filter need be increased but two times.

The other filter is used largely to photograph clouds in a landscape with NO increase in exposure time. This is called a Sky Filter, one half of which is yellow, and the other half clear. The reason why this filter can record both clouds and landscape without requiring any increase in exposure is that the sky is photographed through the yellow part of the filter while the landscape is photographed through the part which is not colored. The yellow part of the filter holds back the blue of the sky somewhat and gives the white clouds more chance to record their real beauty.

Your nearest dealer in photographic materials will gladly give you more information regarding the use of color filters and I am sure that when you realize the great difference the use of a filter makes in the appearance of your snapshots you will become a confirmed user of this inexpensive accessory.

STORY TELLING

It's the story-telling picture that carries real human interest appeal.

ALMOST all of us have had the experience of calling on friends who persist in getting out their collection of snapshots and parading them before the eyes of their defenseless guests.

Now please bear in mind that I harbor no thoughts of this practice as being a breach of social etiquette. On the contrary, I am for it. But—there are many kinds and classes of snapshots. There are, for instance, the snapshots that are very good as far as exposure, sharpness and composition are concerned but with practically no human interest appeal. We can class these as record pictures.

Have you ever heard of story-telling snapshots? I'll wager that many of you haven't. For that reason this week's Snapshot Guild will be devoted to story-telling pictures.

From the cradle to the grave we hear stories — and like them. All through our lives we retain our interest in story-illustrations. It is this appeal that takes us to the movies and causes us to look through the pages of daily newspapers and magazines for pictures that tell stories of human activities.

When it comes to taking snapshots, however, so many seem to forget about story telling subjects. They pick up their cameras and just shoot. There is no other way to take pictures.

There is a vast difference between a close-up view of a person and a story-telling picture. A close-up — whether head-and-shoulder, three-quarters or full length—is more or less a record picture to show the image of the person photographed, but it does not tell a story. You may take a picture of Peggy standing looking at the camera. A fine picture, no doubt, bearing all the earmarks of good photography properly exposed and a good example of composition, but still a record-type snapshot. Let Peggy be pictured raking the leaves and you have a story-telling human interest snapshot. Today as you're glancing through the newspaper, notice for yourself whether record pictures of people looking at the camera or story-telling pictures of people doing things interest and please you more.

Before taking a picture give it a little thought and if it is to be a snapshot of an individual, have him doing something and not staring at the camera, simulating a victim of amnesia.

I don't want to seem to lecture but I do want to impress upon you the importance of giving serious thought to your picture taking. If you will keep this story-telling idea foremost in your mind when you take your next pictures, I am sure they will be more interesting to you and your friends.

TELEPHONE TALKS IN THE WATSON F.

"This is just like being home!"

Bill Watson occasionally gets fed up on that out-of-town job. Work is oppressive. His pals are dull. Meals are tasteless. The outlook, generally, is bilious. Good, old-fashioned homesickness, that's what it really is — and Bill has a sovereign remedy, once he has diagnosed the case: a long distance call home. And it costs so little, too, that he has decided to forestall attacks by a regular schedule of weekly calls.

Bill's ideas are right in line with the rest of the family. The Watsons have come to appreciate fully the comforts, conveniences and low cost of Long Distance. Do You realise how little it costs to telephone?

Water Clock Was Used by Chinese, Hindus Ages Ago

An ancient time-telling device was the clepsydra, or water clock. Like the sundial, it was invented so long ago that there is no authentic record of its origin, observes a writer in the Washington Star. It was used by the Chinese and Hindus from the earliest times, but it was developed most extensively by those clever people, the Greeks. And they had a word for it, for the name comes from the two Greek words meaning "the thief of water." Its simplest form was that of two vessels, one of which had a small vent which allowed water to drop slowly into the other. One of the vessels was graduated, and the height of the water in it at any given time indicated the hour.

The Greeks and Romans installed water clocks in the forums or market squares of their cities, guarded by a civic officer whose duty it was to keep it filled and in order. Wealthy citizens sent their servants around to find the exact time from it, while the poorer classes were informed by the sound of a horn which was blown by the attendant "every hour on the hour." The Romans also installed water clocks in their law courts. The device was filled up when a lawyer started his oration, and when the water ran out he had to stop. "This," said a writer of the day, "was to prevent babblings, that such as spoke ought to be brief in their speeches."

Queen Bee Is Very Busy During Swarming Season

During the swarming season bees reveal most amazingly the intricate functioning of instinct, states a writer in Literary Digest. New queens have been developed in their circular cells. Quality of food determines whether an egg shall become a queen or a worker bee. Queens are fed bee-jelly (propolis) by their nursemaids, workers receive bee-bread, which is largely pollen scraped from the hairy legs of worker bees. The old queen departs with her retinue, leaves the hive to the newly hatched queen.

The virgin queen prowls around looking for the cells of unhatched queens. If the colony is large enough to permit swarming, guards prevent the virgin queen from attacking her sisters who are on the point of hatching. If the hive population is small, swarming inadvisable, the newly hatched queens battle to the death, the fittest remaining to take charge of the hive as ruthless dictator.

When the hive is large enough to swarm, bees leave the colony in clouds to follow their new queen. They gather in great clusters, clinging to one another's bodies, on tree limbs, fence posts, almost any nearby object, and the alert beekeeper must have a new hive ready to entice them into.

In a Velvet Gown

It is a far cry from the Arabs at El Fustade near Cairo to the looms of velvet on this continent, says the Montreal Herald. More than 2,000 years have elapsed since our earliest records of velvets among the Persians and East Indians. From the Arabs the art of velvet weaving went to the Spaniards, then to Sicily, and, in the Sixteenth century, into France where it developed under the skill of the most creative and intelligent hand-looms to power-looms, to meet the volume of demand, the process of weaving has gone on. Velvet is woven in two pieces at a time—face to face and cut with a knife afterward, leaving a straight erect pile—the test of all pile velvets. First, heavy thick velvets were made, later finer types of velvets known as Lyons, then chiffon velvets and after that the slenderizing, draping material known as transparent velvet.

America's Own Cabinet Styles

By the end of the Eighteenth century America had developed fine cabinet-makers and a style of her own. It is true that they were influenced by the great Georgian masters. The American designers of this period almost immediately seized the Empire styles and modified them into American Empire. In America the frills, the paint and the gilt of the French empire were dropped. The natural color and grain of the wood were brought out.

Early Washington Assemblies

The Washington assemblies in the early period of the republic were ceremonious and exclusive affairs. Admission was obtained only by cards of invitation. No gentleman, whatever may have been his rank or calling, was permitted on the floor unless he was attired in full evening dress, with pumps, silk stockings, and flowing cravat, unless he belonged to the army or navy, in which case complete regimentals were necessary.

Associated Metal With Planets

The ancient astrologers associated a certain metal with each planet. Gold belonged to the sun, silver to the moon, iron to Mars, mercury to Mercury, tin to Jupiter, copper to Venus, and lead to Saturn. Lead was a precious metal because it represented wisdom after suffering. It was believed that to wear the metal of your sign brought you good luck.

Queen Bee Is Greatest of the World's Mothers

A beehive is a perfect matriarchy, the queen bee laying claim to the title of the greatest mother in the world, asserts a writer in Literary Digest. Every one of the 50,000 inhabitants of the hive is her offspring. The queen is the only perfectly developed female in the hive. The workers are partially developed females. Truly regal, the queen deigns not even to feed herself; that is the task of a dozen worker attendants who swarm about her, taking care of every want. The queen's life is an incessant round of egg-laying; on her fecundity depends the life, safety and happiness of the hive. The worker bee lives but six weeks in the busy summer-time, the queen from three to five years, during which she lays 1,500,000 eggs.

Worker bees in the average hive die at the rate of 1,000 a day; 2,000 new ones hatch daily. From May to September, the active period of the hive, the queen lays 2,000 eggs every twenty-four hours, eats three times her own weight in food daily. Her attendants range around her in a circle, all facing the queen as dictated by court custom, leading her respectfully over the honeycomb cells which have been prepared to receive the eggs which will hatch into workers, drones or queens.

Strange Superstitions Recognized by Sailor

Many strange superstitions from the distant past are inherited by the sailor, and even in days of steel and steam his outlook is influenced by them.

From time immemorial, observes a writer in the Montreal Herald, sea birds have been rewarded by sailors as precious. Woe betide the man who slays one of "Mother Carey's Chickens!" The fate of the man who shot the albatross is well-known.

But there are other supersitions concerning sea birds. Many sailors, for instance, believe that they are the wandering souls of evil-doers condemned to continual movement. Some believe they carry the souls of masters of lost ships, plaintively crying in the still watches of the night until their bodies shall be carried to the land for Christian burial.

The small gray gulls which flit swiftly up and down the Bosphorus, near the Golden Horn, skimming close to the surface of the water without ever seeming to alight, are said by sailors to be the souls of wicked captains of ships sentenced to wander thus till the Day of Judgment.

Big Pearl Shell Areas

There are three big pearl shell areas in the world which produce nine-tenths of the world supply. Virtually all perfect large pearls come from these three. They are the Paomotus, the Torres Straits and the Persian gulf. In the Paumotus—low-lying atolls 300 miles from Tahiti—are found the largest pearls of all. They are found in deep water in "black lipped" shell as wide across as dinner plates. (A diver or pearl buyer never says shells!) The shell from the Torres Strait, which separates Papua from Cape York Peninsula, Australia, is usually gold or silver lipped, and produces many medium-priced perfect pearls of fine luster. The seed pearls of the world come from the Persian gulf, as well as occasional large blacks.

Ozone Form of Oxygen

Ozone is a form of oxygen. The molecules of the ordinary oxygen of the air are built of two oxygen atoms. The molecules of ozone consist of three of such atoms. As a result of this difference of structure ozone contains considerably more chemical energy than does oxygen and is far less stable. It is a gas with a faint blue color and is formed when oxygen or its compounds are acted upon by certain sources of intense energy, such as a silent electric discharge, or fluorine gas, or certain wave lengths of ultraviolet light. It is an excellent absorbent for ultraviolet light, under the influence of which it is ionized, or partly broken down into electrically charged particles.

The Violoncello

The violoncello, tuned an octave below the viola, has longer, thicker strings. The generous size of the sound box with its ample room for air vibrations makes a dark and sonorous tone. In the mass of orchestral tone, the cello is an effective instrument due to its warmth, its range of more than three octaves and the singing quality that makes it an outstanding favorite. It has a short, heavy bow and the left hand technique is entirely different from that of either violin or viola.

The Goose Flower

The malodorous goose flower takes its name from its shape. The flower's scientific name is aristolochia grandiflora. Another popular name for it is carrion flower—because of its odor, which serves as a lure to certain pollen bearing insects. The flower is one huge petal about one foot wide and fourteen inches long with a slender tail, its outline being in the form of a goose with spread wings. Its plant is about eight feet high and is imported from the tropics.

The Open Column

A week ago to-day, as the King stood with bowed head before the Cenotaph in London, paying homage to the memory of the men who gave up their lives for the safety of their country, a man broke through the press of worshippers, and shouted that their reverence was false. He was dashed to the ground, trampled and beaten, and every newspaper of the Empire branded him a lunatic.

Yet, considering the state of world affairs to-day, the threats of war, and the active conduct of two wars on different parts of the earth, is there so much lunacy in a cry that reverence for the men who died in the Great War is hypocritical? The Great War, we were told, was a war to end war, a war for the democratic freedom of the peoples of the earth. There was great rejoicing when the Armistice was signed, and mothers heaved sighs of relief, believing that no longer would their sons be taken from them to die in the mire.

There have been too many men die in battlefields since November 11th, 1918, to convince sober observers that the Armistice was anything but an eleventh hour repentence, and that, far from repenting, the world is arming for another holocaust. There can be no conscious charge of falsity and hypocrisy against the King, or against his government. The British people have a slogan to which they adhere with fanatical pride: "Play up, play up, and play the game". England played the game in the Great War, espousing the weaker side in the defence of unhappy people.

In the next war, England, beyond a shadow of a doubt, will again play the game, and fight on the weaker side. But why must there be another war? It is a fine thing to play the game, but, if the game becomes brutal and degrading, why not change the rules?

The man who takes a gun, to-day, and goes into the street, and shoots another man dead, is guilty of murder. Yet there is no law, national or international, to punish or restrain the man who manufactures guns and sells them to nations in the sure knowledge that they will be used to tear other men limb from limb, and strike them down into a bloody welter. As surely as the gun was made for murder, and sold for profit, the man who made it, whose factory ground out thousands of war tools, is a murderer, and those who supported him in his industry, and allowed its continuance, are accessories to murder. Yet there are no rules of the game to prevent the trade in the tools of murder. Wealthy heads of armament firms are considered amongst the leading citizens of their lands.

We say that the rules of the game should be changed. In the next war, let us take the heads and employes of Skoda and Krupp and Creusot and the other armament makers, and put them together at the south pole, and let them battle for supremacy, and leave peace-loving folk in peace.

DONALD McTAVISH'S SACRIFICE

In 1856 men took life seriously. The settlers and their families had been engaged in the grim struggle of subduing the forest or being subdued by it. The grim determination of the English, Irish and Scotch, who had built the first log cabins were however triumphing, and a measure of comfort, with promise of future wealth, was rewarding their efforts.

Transportation then, as now, was a vital matter. The Sixteen-mile river, where it emptied into Lake Ontario, had been an important highway. In th summer time the canoes of the Six Nation Indians traversed its waters, and in the winter the Indians treked up it with their dog-sleighs on their hunting expeditions. Now the redman had disappeared and the river was dotted with crude brush dams that drove grist and saw mills, grinding the farmer's wheat and converting his logs into lumber. The river had volume enough in the early days to float white oak staves, logs, masts and rafts and sawn lumber down to the lake, there to be loaded on schooners to be taken to the States or to the Old Land. Before the days of the railway, all produce that could not be floated down the river had to be teamed to the lake. Enterprising citizens had built a plank road in 1856 from Oakville to Ballinafad, along which came wheat from as far back as Erin to the grist mills, tanbark for the many local tanneries, staves for the barrel factories; also a host of teams drawing flour to the lake. Some of the teamsters made a round trip of eighty miles, generally loaded heavily both ways. As some still had the slow-going ox-teams, the trips were long and weary ones. Accommodation for man and beast was a pressing need, and the plank road fairly bristled with little taverns. Wage earners of to-day cannot realize the struggles of the toilers of former times. For teaming flour, a man got for his team, waggon and himself, $1.50 a day, whiskey and horse-feed included. A laborer in summer got five York shillings, 62½ cents; in harvest time, from sunrise to sunset, 75 cents, and for chopping cordwood, beech and maple, 30 cents per cord. The man who could put up two cords a day had to swing his axe and beetle from daylight until dark, eating his lunch in the bush, thawing the frost out of sandwiches at the open fire. The possible earnings of the most industrious and the actual needs of a family allowed a very narrow margin. Sickness or old age, like spectres, followed the footsteps of many. Easy money seemed to open the door to Paradise and blot out the old treadmill of hard, unremitting toil.

Timber men, storekeepers, grist mill or tannery men were envied by the laborers, but the tavern-keeper was in a class by himself. Whiskey was looked on as a necessity.

The unending stream of vehicles on the plank road filled the sheds and stables, dining rooms and bedrooms of all the taverns. Business literally came knocking at their doors. Meals, consisting of abundance of the best of food, were furnished for a York shilling (12½ cents). Supper, bed and breakfast, three York shillings (37½ cents). But every day was a busy day at the bar. Whiskey was four cents a mug, or ten to twelve mugs for a quarter. Those were the days before troublesome temperance people insisted on early closing, or on the separation of a tavern and a dance hall. Almost every shed had an upper story. This was fitted up as a dance hall, and a place for public meetings. Here, in winter-time, dances would be held several times a week. Political meetings would be held in these halls, and in the stirring days of MacKenzie, many stormy meetings and famous fights occurred.

At the time of our story, Donald McTavish was 35 years of age. He had worked hard all his life in the summer plowing, stumping, cradling, binding, threshing with the flail and chopping cordwood in the winter. He had a capable wife and three children. His one ambition was to be a tavern-keeper. To be able to wear a white shirt. To be always under cover, not exposed to rain and snowstorms, looked good to him. Countless blows of the axe and beetle to earn 30 cents, cutting, splitting and piling a cord of wood wearied him. He pictured himself the genial host behind the bar, rolling in a steady stream of silver. With this goal ahead of him he had worked and saved. With a sum of four hundred dollars, he had bought an acre of ground in a good locality on the plank road. A snug little tavern, shed and stable was built, sinking his earnings, leaving him in debt. He moved into the building, bought a generous supply of liquor and intended opening up business on the following day. Business took him to Proudfoot Hollow. Good tactics brought him to one of the bar-rooms there. Toasts to the success of his new tavern were drunk time and again, until many of the crowd were much the worse of liquor. Protracted meetings were being held in the little Methodist church. The year before Divisions of the Sons of Temperance had been organized all around the country, and religion and temperance had become very much mixed. The preacher at the protracted meetings night after night denounced taverns of the day, in what the bar-room gang claimed to be very intemperate language. He was loudly denounced as a fanatic and disturber of the peace. Eventually the crowd adjourned to the church, Donald McTavish at the head of them. Out of the cold, bitter night, they came into the little church, their breaths reeking with whiskey. Then something strange happened. There was not any great soloist present. The preacher was not famous or eloquent. But the holy spirit was present with the mysterious, irresistable power, that wins men's heart. Donald McTavish three parts drunk, boiling with indignation at the man who would denounce his future business, had come to the church, but he soon found himself kneeling at the penitent bench, sobbing like a child. He went out of the church, over the three-mile snowy roads, as one in a dream. He went into his trim bar all ready for business in the morning, looking at the till that was to hold the easy money, and he knew it never could be. He told his wife of his conversion, his vision, new birth, call it what you will. She immediately saw eye to eye with him. Together they went into the bar and cellar and smashed barrels and kegs, letting all the liquor out. Before daylight next morning a man walked a mile to the bush and started cutting cordwood at 30 cents a cord. At noon he started a fire to thaw out his frozen lunch. At dark he walked home, having put up two cords, 60 cents earned. His wife had been bombarded with callers who could not credit the story tht Donald had been converted and could not keep tavern. This is a true story and so it has no frills. Prosperity did not burst upon Donald and put him on the seat of the mighty. He was a laborer all his days. All his savings were sunk in the buildings, also he was in debt. Time and again he could have sold buildings and lot for a tavern, as the location was good. But his conscience would not permit this, as he felt that in taking the money he would still be an indirect partner in the business. He lived in the tavern and toiled as a laborer to pay his debts and raise his family. Life never was easy for him. Incessant toil and exposure rapped his energy and twisted his frame with rheumatism. Every year the heavy work and long hours were harder on him. Always at his shoulder was the tempter—"What a fool he was not to take the easy, prosperous road." But quietly determined glorying in being a "partaker of His sufferings," he was faithful unto death.

Soon wealthy men had a large brick church built. The preacher of the protracted meetings was gathered to his fathers. The little frame church was turned into a hall. Donald McTavish was never prominent in the new church. A chesty preacher toadied to the enterprising men who built the new church. They looked on Donald as a rather common fellow, quiet of course, but lacking in enterprise, without influence, being a laboring man. On a sleety November day, Donald McTavish was buried. The service was a little hurried, as the daughter of a leading business man, "one of the pillars of the church," was to be married that afternoon. His grave is in a neglected corner of the cemetery, unmarked in any way. The old tavern and sheds have rotted away. The lot was acquired by the man owning the adjoining farm. The last of the buildings have been rmoved, and grain has been growing on the site. Donald McTavish's life was not wasted, his quiet faithfulness influenced the whole neighborhood.

And do not let us waste too much sympathy on the neglect and lack of appreciation that he met with among men.

He was fully understood by the Carpenter's Son.

"Once to every man and nation
Comes the moment to decide,
In the strife of Truth with Falsehood
For the good or evil side,
Some great cause God's new Messiah,
Offering each the bloom or blight
Parts the goats upon the left hand
And the sheep upon the right
And the choice goes on forever
Twixt the darkness and the light.

Hast thou chosen, O my people,
On whose party thou shall stand,
Ere the Doom from its worn sandals
Shake the dust against our land,
Though the cause of Evil prosper,
Yet 'tis Truth alone is strong,
And albeit she wanders outcast
Now, I see around the throng
Troops of beautiful, tall angels
To enshield her from all wrong.

We see dimly in the Present,
What is small and what is great,
Slow of faith, how weak an arm,
May turn the iron helm of fate
But the soul is still oracular
Amid the market din,
They enslave their children's children
Who makes compromise with sin.

Then to side with Truth is noble
When we share her wretched crust,
Ere her cause brings fame and profit
And 'tis prosperous to be just.
Then it is the brave man chooses
While the coward stands aside,
Doubting in his abject spirit
Till his Lord is crucified,
And the multitude makes virtue
Of the faith they had denied."

Taken For Granted

Japan no longer publishes casualty lists. The official viewpoint no doubt is that as soon as a soldier moves to the front his relatives can take it for granted that he is dead. — Toronto Star.

The Only Safe Way

Dying from a wound inflicted when a rifle went off in his hands, a Calgary war veteran exclaimed, "I don't know how it went off." The only safe gun is one that is unloaded. Before putting rifle, shotgun, pistol, .22, or any other firearm away, make sure no cartridges are in it. — Calgary Herald.

An Opportunity Lost

Many observers feel that the golden opportunity—if one can speak thus of disastrous times—was passed in the pit of the recent depression when Canadians were sufficiently humbled and frightened so that they might have stood for a drastic re-organization of the nation's financial structure. Australia at least got a thorough revamping of her finances out of the depression. Canada got a financial hangover, and now a Commission.—Winnipeg Tribune.

Stock Market Antics

Passing comment by the Boston Globe: "The scramble to get aboard in the stock market was almost as desperate as the rush to jump overboard 24 hours earlier. We're queer people." Yes; and pretty childish at times. We play the market in the hope of "easy money"—worry all the time our "piker's bets" are there — and then run around in circles when they are endangered. . . Really, if children acted like grown-ups they would be sent to bed without their supper.—Halifax Herald.

No Censorship Wanted

It does seem a little out of place for a judge to suggest that the newspapers of Ontario are in need of some censorship. There might have been some point in it twenty years ago when the Province contained innumerable party organs that discussed public affairs in a rabid partisan manner, having little regard for the amenities of public life. In recent years, however, the whole trend in the publication of newspapers has been towards accuracy and impartiality in the publication of news, and towards fair editorial comment. — Brantford Expositor.

Lights For Pedestrians

Pedestrians travelling along the highways these dark fall nights should carry some form of light for their own safety.

With the return of the season of dark and frequently rain-glazed roads, unlighted wagons and buggies and persons walking along the right side of the highways again become the nightmare of drivers. Dusk falls early and darkness is very thick, rendering visibility very poor these evenings. Yet farmers will persist in driving after dusk without a light on their vehicles, despite the great danger they are placing themselves in and the fact that they are breaking the law.—Owen Sound Sun-Times.

THE EMPIRE

British Soldiers Leave

An event of great importance was the official handing over of the "Main Guard" at Alexandria by the British Army to the Egyptian Police. This little ceremony was a means of demonstrating and emphasizing, in the very heart of the "Second Capital," the new independent status of Egypt. For fifty-five years, ever since the Occupation in 1882, this station of British troops had been in existence. Though it was at first in Mohamed Aly Square, it had been in its present central location for so long that the sight of the Union Jack flying and British soldiers at work in the main streets of the city had become so familiar that it was no longer noticeable. Its absence will be the more remarkable on that account, and the change-over will impress upon Alexandrians that the new regime has begun, better, perhaps, than more important events.—Cairo Sphinx.

The Dividing Line

In the Far East there are militarists and war-makers who praise peace. Japan fights for peace, says its Prime Minister. Mussolini pats him on the back for "defending" Japan so bravely. Birds of a feather flock together. But how do you classify these birds? Beware of the "haves" versus the "have-nots" classification, because many of the "have-nots" are peaceful. Beware of the "democracies" versus the "dictatorships" classification, because there are peaceful "dictatorships." The dividing line today, as Roosevelt sees and says, is that some believe in the rule of international law, in the rightness of peaceful settlement and the wrongness of aggression, and some do not believe in any of these things. It is not a nice fact, but it is a mistake to run away from it—which is what is, in fact, done by some of those who warn us of the dangers of thinking in terms of "rival blocs." — London Daily Herald.

Bee Vinegar

Did you know that in hot countries it is difficult to obtain proper fermentation, and for that reason vinegar, made from a process of fermentation is very expensive. Most of the vinegar used in Mexico is imported from the United States.

A Mexican has now returned home after conferring with leading American bacteriologists, and he intends to breed bees and use their honey for making vinegar. There are no fruits in Mexico which have the necessary fermentation strength. The vinegar will have to come, indirectly, from the beehive.

Heavy Water Seen As Youth Elixir

New Chemical Production May Prolong Span of Human Life

British scientists are experimenting with the world's most expensive, and as yet, most mysterious liquid, heavy water.

As yet only a curiosity, but believed to have countless uses in industry, agriculture and medicine, about six thimblefuls are being manufactured daily, at the Billingham-on-Tees (England) factories of the Imperial chemical industries.

Costing $50 a gram, the formula of heavy water is D two O instead of H two O, and is composed of unusually heavy hydrogen atoms.

Scientists who are at present experimenting with the liquid are Professor James Kendall of Edinburgh university and Professor G. R. Clemo of Newcastle.

Also the Imperial College of Science and Technology, Kensington, are making research into the heavy water.

One theory is that is an "elixir of youth," capable of prolonging the span of human life.

Believing that an excess or deficiency of heavy water on the bloodstream may be responsible for certain diseases, research is being made to ascertain the proportion of heavy water in human blood, it being known that the blood of aged people contains a high proportion of it.

Eclipse of Old Apple Favorites

Newer Varieties — McIntosh, Delicious, Spy Are First In Public Favor

In the change from the old-time family orchard to the larger commercial orchard much has been gained in the way of money returns, says the Family Herald and Weekly Star. The districts which specialize in apples now have their methods pretty well standardized from the first selection of varieties for planting to the final sale on the market. Whole orchards of ten, twenty or even fifty acres are limited to half a dozen sorts. Cultivation, pruning, spraying and thinning follow well recognized rules with a view to producing high quality apples uniform in size and color. The great majority of people call for McIntosh, Delicious or Spy. These varieties have color and flavor and so command the highest prices.

Regret Their Loss

There are not a few people, however, who look back with regret at the loss of old favorites that they knew in their youth — Golden and Roxbury Russets, Yellow Pippins, Spitzenberg, Seek-No-Further, Tolman Sweet and Hubbardston. Each had its own peculiar aroma and in its season was prized by the family either for eating out of hand or for cooking. There were others that were good for cider making or for boiling down into apple butter. That was in the days of large families and self-sufficient farms. Today there are more apples produced and consumed; they are carefully stored and are available to city residents for eight months in the year. The export trade has attained large proportions. With all this expansion of the industry there will be regrets that old favorites of the past century are disappearing. There are still men and women who would choose a Snow or a Fameuse before a McIntosh and who would pay as much for Tolman Sweet as for the much vaunted Delicious.

Sporting Comment

By KEN EDWARDS

This week as promised, we are continuing the "official boxing rules." I trust they will be interesting to you.

1. Fouls . . . there are many "fouls" in boxing; here are just a few:

(a) Hitting below the belt;

(b) Wrestling or roughing;

(c) Purposely going down to the canvas without being hit;

(d) Butting with the head or shoulder or using the knee;

(e) Holding your opponent with one hand and hitting with the other;

(f) Deliberately clinching or holding the opponent;

(g) Hitting an opponent who is down; or who is getting up from being down;

(h) The use of abusive of profane language;

(i) Hitting with the inside or butt of the hand, the wrist or elbow;

(j) Hitting or flicking with the open glove;

(k) The use of the pivot blow or rabbit punch;

(l) The failure to obey the referee, or any physical actions which may injure a contestant except by fair sportsmanlike boxing.

More Rulings

A boxer holding a championship title must defend the same within a period of six months after winning or defending the title in a bona fide bout to a decision.

Should such a boxer fail to so defend his title he must accept any challenge endorsed by the Commission within thirty days after receipt thereof under penalty of the forfeiture of his title.

A championship can be lost by default, forfeit or inability to pass the scale, but a championship can only be won in a contest.

News In Review

Objects to Russia

BRUSSELS. — Japan may reject any proposal by the nine power conference to mediate the Chinese-Japanese war, diplomatic sources reported this week-end, because of Russia's insistence on taking part in the negotiations.

Many delegates felt that the Japanese reply would offer little of concrete value to settle the Far Eastern conflict so long as Russia is represented at the conference. According to reports from Tokio, Japan objects to Russia's presence here on the ground that Russia never adhered to the nine power treaty.

Aim at Nanking

SHANGHAI. — Chinese officials reported this week-end that the Japanese had landed up to 50,000 reinforcements near Kwan-Hai-Wei, on the south side of Hangchow Bay for what may be a mass attack on China's Hindenburg line in an effort to break through it to the central Capital in Nanking.

Dictatorship in Brazil

RIO DE JANEIRO. — President Getulio Vargas this week-end assumed dictatorial powers to rule Brazil for an indefinite period by a coup in which he dissolved all legislative bodies and proclaimed a new Constitution with corporative features.

The new Constitution was put into effect immediately by a Presidential decree. At the same time, Vargas issued a manifesto declaring the new regime would suspend payment on all Government debts abroad.

Towards Martial Law

JERUSALEM. — The Palestine Government has empowered military courts to exact the death penalty from gunmen and bombers in the Holy Land in what was considered the first step toward martial law.

The action was taken under an Order-in-Council to deal with the long reign of terror. Five Jews were murdered and three new shootings followed the court announcement this week-end.

Endorse Insurance Scheme

OTTAWA.—Informal endorsation of Prime Minister Mackenzie King's proposal for a national unemployment insurance system came this week from three Provinces, while Governments of others said they were preparing replies.

Bomb in Office

BELFAST.—A time-bomb exploded this week-end in the recruiting office for the British Naval Reserve here. The blast was heard throughout the city. Investigators searching through the wreckage found fragments of the explosive. Many documents were destroyed.

Storm in Alaska

NOME.—A terrific storm, worst since a tidal wave wrecked the entire town in 1913, battered Nome this week-end. The high seas tore away the foundations of nearly every business house on the waterfront.

Socred Convicted

EDMONTON.—Joseph H. Unwin, Social Credit member for Edson in the Alberta Legislature, was this week convicted by an Alberta Supreme Court jury on a charge of publishing defamatory libel knowing it to be false.

Franco Spurns Triple Alliance

SAINT JEAN de LUZ, Franco-Spanish Frontier.—Nationalist Generalissimo Francisco Franco is determined to stamp out all extremists in Spain, but will have nothing to do with the Italo-German-Japanese anti-Communist alliance, his official spokesman told the United Press.

New Deal Revised

NEW YORK. — Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau Jr., announced abandonment by the New Deal of its business "pump-priming" policy, and disclosed Administration plans to balance the 1938-39 Budget by curtailing Federal expenditures $700,000,000.

No additional taxes are being contemplated, he said, and the entire Federal tax structure is being studied with a view to relieving inequities against taxpayers without reducing Government revenue.

War in Quebec

MONTREAL.—Quebec Provincial Police delivered three more blows in Premier Duplessis's war on communism this week, raiding and padlocking establishments on the same grounds as they closed the French language Communist weekly paper La Clarte. They acted under direct orders of the Premier himself.

Missionaries in Ethiopia

ROME. — Mussolini's engineers have built, or are completing, eight Catholic churches with dozens of auxiliary schools, dispensaries and clinics in Ethiopia. Further, Il Duce has stimulated the idea of Catholic mission education.

He estimates 800 priest missionaries and 1,200 nuns are needed to aid Fascism in the work of "Italianizing" the conquered territory. The Salesian Brotherhood — famous for its work in South Africa—has been authorized to lead the mission work.

Dead in Domingo

WASHINGTON.—Government officials studied this week the first detailed reports of the alleged massacre of "thousands" of Haitian nationals living in the Dominican republic.

The reports were written by an American neutral observer living on the Haitian side of the border which divides the Caribbean island between Haiti and the Dominican republic. They estimate the number of dead in recent clashes between Dominican police and Haitians as high as 5,000.

Thatched Cottages Like These Are Condemned

A of time is making [illegible] changes in many parts of Old England. Modern highways in keeping with twentieth century speed and traffic have been mainly responsible for the practical destruction of ancient and picturesque villages. The photo above shows a row of 500-year-old thatched cottages in Queen street, Tilshead, which are to be torn down to make way for more modern structures. Throughout all these years the cottagers have obtained their water supply from an 89-foot well nearby.

News Parade

Commentary on the Highlights of the Week's News . . . by Peter Randal

CHILD FATALITIES CUT: — Not one child has been killed in traffic accidents in Kansas City for 13 months, it was reported this week. Death of tiny toddlers in the streets has been entirely eliminated. "How did you do it?" other cities ask. The answer lies in an intensive campaign of safety education carried on among the children. Each child hears about being careful from his parents, his teachers, policemen at corners, and from "voice of safety" cars with loudspeakers which patrol the streets. Any citizen involved in an accident endangering school children is given a $100 fine and 15 days in jail. Were methods such as these tried out in Ontario, the result would surely be a lowered child death toll in motor accidents. And isn't that something worth working for?

BETTER ROADS FOR THE NORTH: The promise has been made by Hon. T. B. McQuesten, Minister of Highways, that Northern Ontario roads already in existence are to be improved, and new highways constructed to equal those in the southern part of the province. The road situation in the north has for long been a very sore point. Since the highway up through Cobalt to Cochrane was first built, certain sections of the road have been left untouched through the years, and consequently are very, very bad. It is an unhappy experience to drive over them, even a dangerous undertaking.

The north can be made truly accessible only if the Minister's promise is carried out.

Forgetting the serious for the moment, we have always enjoyed hearing the story of a family who ran into difficulties on the road in the early days of the "Ferguson Highway." They approached a big puddle, proceeded to slosh through it, discovered too late that the "puddle" was muskeg. The occupants of the car jumped out in time, grabbed their suitcases out of the car through the windows just as it sank from sight. There they were left standing aimlessly by the side of the road, all dressed up with places to go and no way to get there.

LINE-UP: Germany and Italy last week signed an anti-Communism, or anti-Russian pact with Japan. Russia and France have an agreement; France and Britain have an agreement. Russia's sympathies are with China. There you have the picture.

FALL OF SHANGHAI: After 88 days of battle during which the Chinese "lost battalion" kept their stand in vain, the great city and port of Shanghai fell last week into Japanese hands. The withdrawal of General Chiang Kai-shek's Chinese troops took place amid the explosion of bombs dropped from Japanese planes and the hurling of merciless artillery shells. The Chinese took up lines south and west of the city, and prepared to defend the capital, Nanking. Shanghai was completely cut off from the rest of China. Cost to the Japanese of completing the capture included: dead and wounded, 125,000; army expenditures, $600,000,000; trade loss, $250,000,000.

Japan cannot pause now to consider whether or not the expense was worth it—the country is committed irrevocably to go on and on and on in China. If the tide should turn against Japan, as many believe it shortly will now that a new united China has risen in defence under General Chiang, it will mean disaster for the Land of the Rising Sun whose conditions at home are at the moment economically intolerable.

A NEW FLAG: Canada hasn't a flag of her own. For years perfunctory agitation has been stirred up to secure for the Dominion "a distinctive Canadian flag." But the only definite proposals made have been urged by single voices. Mr. Hugh Savage, of Duncan, B.C., is one, and Mr. Cameron McIntosh, M.P. for North Battleford, Sask., is another. Now a motion is actually before the House asking that a new flag be created. Time something is done about it.

AT 83 SHE DEFIES RHEUMATISM

After Suffering Acute Pain For Years

Rheumatism first attacked this old lady in 1931, and gradually spread from her arms to other parts of her body. Then she started to take Kruschen Salts, and now she sends the following letter in her own handwriting:—

"I have suffered from rheumatism since 1931. At first, I felt acute pain in both arms. I could not sleep for pain. It grew worse, and gradually it crept down to the tips of my fingers. Next it reached my knees and ankles, which made me quite helpless for a long period. A friend recommended me to take Kruschen Salts. I find they do me more good than any other medicine, liniment or ointment I ever used. This is my own writing, though I am in my 84th year."—(Mrs.) H.

The pains and stiffness of rheumatism are often caused by deposits of needle-pointed uric acid crystals in the muscles and joints. Kruschen Salts stimulate your liver and kidneys to healthy, regular action, and assist them to get rid of the excess uric acid which is frequently the cause of your suffering.

Television Tests Are Successful

Pictures Aboard Liner Clear and Sound Described as Being Uerfect

Successful reception of television of television broadcasts by a liner at sea was reported at New York by Captain A. T. Brown of the Cunard White Star liner Britannic.

Captain Brown said the experiments believed the first of their kind ever attempted, were performed on Oct. 29th, 30th and 31st, after the ship sailed from London.

The experiments were conducted by Corporation, who set up their receiv-engineers of the British Broadcasting ing equipment in a vacant cabin. The captain said the Britannic, until it left the English Channel was never more than 30 miles off shore.

Screen 10 by 12

"They broadcast special programs from Alexandra Palace, in London, and the reception on the ship seemed excellent.

The pictures were reproduced on a screen about 10 to 12 inches. It was as distinct as if they had been sending it from the next cabin."

HAVE YOU HEARD

A certain man whose business is more service than sales, has hung a large mirror on the wall by his telephone. His reason he explains as follows: Sometimes he gets so busy he doesn't take time to shave or clean up for days. When his phone rings, and he goes to answer it, chances are he'll see himself in the mirror, realize how bad he looks and what others see when they look at him, and proceeds to clean up. Now there's a real lesson for us all. It may be we not only need a mirror to reflect our physical selves to us, but other parts of our being may look soiled or neglected too. How about the disposition? Are our habits getting dingy? What would a spiritual or moral mirror reveal to us about ourselves?

Here's an unbeatable philosophy of life: "Keep an even mind and a fine spirit and eventually the bouquets will outnumber the brickbats."

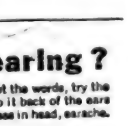
Every man hates to settle down and try to think out his immediate problems. It's much harder to do than to work. What we want to do, when we ought to settle down and think, is to wish and hope.

But no matter what your peculiarity may be, avoid absent-mindedness. Pathfinder tells this one:—

Elsie—What made you quarrel with Norman?

Helen—The meanie, he proposed to me again last night.

Elsie— But certainly that was nothing to get angry at.



Helen—Oh, yet it was. I had accepted him the night before.

Old fashioned music, as we get it, is the kind that's supposed to carry some kind of a tune along with it. We wonder if that isn't the main reason it's still pretty much inclined to be popular.

Hard of Hearing?

If you can hear a voice but not the words, try the famous Leonard Ear Oil. Rub it back of the ears to relieve partial deafness, noises in head, earache.

We shall do something in life if we try to live up to the expectation of those who have confidence in us.

One of the best resolutions you can make is never to do anything which you would despise or think meanly of in another. Never do anything that you would be afraid or ashamed of if it were your last hour on earth. Then the world will call you blessed.

Jay— Are you acquainted with your fashionable new neignbor?

Kay—Only in a way. Her cat boards at my house.

Now we are told that excessive laughter can cause heart trouble. So many of us will have to stop laughing at our own jokes.

A young boy, undergoing an examination for position came across the question: "What is the distance of the earth from the sun? " He wrote answer as follows: "I am unable to state accurately, but I don't believe the sun is near enough to interfere with a proper performance of my duties if I get this clerkship."

He got it.

The old way was to use the strong right arm; the new way is to use the brain.

Guide—That is the statue of the famous Indian chieftain, Black Hawk.

Girl—H-m-m—he had a son, Tommy, didn't he?

A man told a friend that he was running for an undertaker, as his wife was seriously ill.

Friend—But it's not an undertaker you want; it's a doctor.

Scotsman—Na, na, I canna afford to deal with middlemen.

Don't put much confidence in inside information. It's usually nothing but silly hooey.

Ancient Aztec Language Key

New Mexico University Linguists Study Facsimiles of 16th Cen - tury Work in Hope of Finding It

Three books which may bear the same relation to the ancient Aztec language that the Rosetta Stone does to Egyptian picture writing have been acquired by the University of New Mexico.

The three volumes are facsimile reproductions of Fray Sahagun's 16th century "History of the Things of Mexico," written in Aztec picture with parallel columns of Aztec text written in Latin letters. One volume of illustrations was done by native artists.

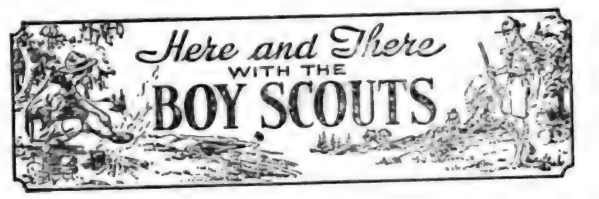
Only two of the original manuscripts of this Aztec version of Sahagun's history are known to exist. The university copy was photographed from one in Madrid, and the other is in a library in Florence.

Hope to Reconstruct It

The three-volume facsimile reproduction is very rare. It was made in Spain in 1906 and dedicated to Profiro Diaz, former president and dictator of Mexico.

University scholars plan to publish an English translation from the Aztec and Spanish originals.

From the parallel translation of Aztec picture writing, the sounds of their spoken words and the meaning of the words in Spanish, the university linguists hope to reconstruct the ancient Aztec language.



Rocket cameras, capable of travelling at a speed of 700 miles an hour, are being perfected at Roswell, New Mexico, by American scientists. They are intended to soar vertically fifty miles into the stratosphere and photograph the stars. They will register scientific data on instruments sunk in their shells.

Try something NEW for your RHEUMATISM

The old saying: "Times change and we with Time" applies to your Rheumatic pains in a way. What grandma found effective might be quite useless to you.

There is now available in Canada a rheumatic remedy that has had an outstanding record of success in Britain, where its popularity has been rapid and well deserved.

There's only one way to account for it. Fynnon Salt is the modern expression of the old "spa" treatment that was so good for those who could afford it. Fynnon Salt combines Sodium, Potassium, Lithium in its composition. One glass of Fynnon Salt is as beneficial as three glasses of mineral Spa Water. Being so rich in the very ingredients that are known to drive Rheumatic pains out of the system, it is making firm friends with tortured Rheumatic sufferers everywhere. You can turn confidently to Fynnon Salt. Take the daily dose for a week as a duty. After that, you'll take it as a pleasure — as an insurance against any return of the pains that have harried you for too long. Get a large 75c package of Fynnon Salt from your druggist. If you have any difficulty getting supplies, write: Laurentian Agencies, St. Gabriel Street, Montreal.

Unique in Canadian Scout awards was the presentation of the Certificate of Merit by His Excellency Lord Tweedsmuir, Chief Scout for Canada, to the Scouts and Scouters of the London district. The certificate, awarded in connection with Scout service during the serious floods of last spring, reads:

"This Certificate is granted to the Boy Scouts of London, Ont., for strenuous and commendable work rendered during the disastrous floods in the spring of 1937."

Three brilliant beds of autumn flowers before the headquarters hut of the 1st Parry Sound Scout Troop was one of the features which attracted the attention of flower lovers attending the annual local fair. The Scouts are making plans for a more extensive display next year.

An opportunity for practising approved Scout-style first aid was provided unintentionally by one of their own number during a hike of the 1st Sudbury Troop, when Scout Fergus Ducharme fractured a leg. Splints were improvised and a stretcher made of coats and staves and the patient carried out to the highway.

Two of the year's important eastern scholarships, one of $1,000 and the other of $675, were captured by Boy Scouts. The first, the Lord Atholstan McGill entrance scholarship, was awarded Patrol Lender George Lefebvre of the 1st Huntingdon, Que., Scout Troop, and the second, a Provincial scholarship at Queen's was won by Troop Leader Donald Cornett of the 1st Smiths Falls Troop.

Boy Scout rope spinning has not been thought of as training for missionary work. Former Rover Scout Firmin Sauve of Ottawa, home on furlough from a station of the Christian and Missionary Alliance at Timbucto, on the southwestern fringe of the Sahara Desert, told of the success of a demonstration of rope spinning in helping establish friendly relations with the fierce fighting, long unapproachable Tauregs, or "veiled riders" of the great desert.

A display of rope spinning in the market place of Timbucto attracted the attention of a group of the veiled camel men, and a demonstration of walking on the hands and other gymnastic stunts which appealed to their love of physical prowess finally established a friendly understanding. In return the young Canadian was taught the desert way of making fire with flint and steel and some mysterious quick-igniting tinder, and other desert "scoutcraft." As a souvenir, he brought back a Taureg fire-making set, in a goatskin case given him by a former chief of desert raiders who had accepted Christianity and become a good citizen.

The former Ottawa Rover Scout declared his Scout training had been of great value to him in many ways in his missionary work.

TIRED or NERVOUS? Is bile doing its work?

Your liver is lazy, that's why you feel so rotten half the time. Your system is not getting enough bile. Your head aches, your back aches. Your food doesn't digest properly. It stagnates and decays for lack of bile. Bile is a digestant and an antiseptic. Your liver should produce 18 to 36 fluid ounces of bile every 24 hours.

Tanol Tablets will make your liver do its work. Based upon a small proportion of Calomel blended with certain other useful medicinal ingredients, Tanol Tablets act promptly and directly upon the liver, stimulating the flow of bile. They are easy to take and provide a safe, easy way of using calomel, probably the most effective liver stimulant known. They are not harsh. But they are efficient. Your druggist has them. 50c. (8)

ALWAYS TIRED?

REPAIR RAGGED NERVES

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

ANIMAL AND PET PICTURES

The very fact that animals and pets don't pose makes them ideal photographic subjects.

FROM household pets to giants of the jungles—animals are ideal subjects for snapshooters. They don't pose; they don't act. You can snap them in natural, undirected action and that is just the reason their pictures create so much interest.

To get good pictures of any animal the first essential is patience. It is quite possible that the family dog will stand up obligingly for you on command, but in picturing all other animals you'll find it necessary to wait for the picture you want.

And this brings us to the question—what do you want in an animal picture?

You may prefer to snap a kitten as it plays with a string or a dog wrestling with a stick.

Domestic animals, of course, offer few real camera difficulties, for you can get them to come where the light is right. Open shade, on a bright day, will be found best. As for shutter speed (if your camera has variable speeds), you'll need 1/25th of a second or faster, to catch fleeting poses and expressions. Unless the light is exceptional, better work with the lens wide open.

To snap less controllable animals—squirrels, birds, and such—you'll need greater patience and cunning. Much depends on background and on your distance from the subject. At more than ten feet, for example, a squirrel becomes almost invisible UNLESS it is sharply revealed on a branch, with the sky for background. Obviously, you'll need to use a fast shutter; squirrels move too swiftly for slow snaps.

The zoo can be a happy hunting ground, too. In many cases, you'll be able to shoot through or over the bars of cages, obtaining clear, unobstructed snaps.

Use a modern, color sensitive film. You'll need all the detail you can get and the utmost in color value rendering.

HORNBY

Broadcasting Tower Now Complete —650 Feet High

Towering 650 feet above the broad acres of Hornby district in Halton County, where pioneers fought their winning battle with the wilderness long before United Empire Loyalists flocked to the district from the revolting south, an ultra-modern steel mast rises like a great inverted pencil so that Canadians may flip a switch in their homes and gather melody from thin air.

Dwarfing even itself, by reason of its cloud-combing height, the mast appears almost delicate in construction when seen from a distance, yet it tops the 36-floor Bank of Commerce head office building by nearly 200 feet and the burden resting on the 10-inch steel ball at is pivot base is in excess of 54 tons.

In the shadow of the lofty structure and looking peculiarly squat by comparison, is the modernistic little building housing $250,000 worth of electrical equipment and which constitutes the nerve-centre of the C.B.C.'s new station, CBL. Designed to broadcast on a frequency output of 840 kilocycles, it will dominate the local field by reason of its 50,000 watt output, and forms, with station CBF, just completed at Vercheres, Quebec, the eastern section of a tri-station chain spanning Canada.

Gleaming white amid an autumn setting, the modernistic building housing the equipment is in sharp comparison with Hornby's pastoral scenery. In it are the very latest gadgets dear to the hearts of radio engineers. There are two $3,000 100-kilowatt output tubes, cooled by distilled water and said to be the largest in use for North American broadcasting purposes.

Heat from the cooling system will be removed by air-blast and used to help heat the building, thus saving an estimated 1,000 gallons of fuel oil annually. Requirements also call for a 50,000-watt transmitter with provision for a short-wave transmitter and there are transformers, fences, switching equipment, workshops, cleaning and ventilating systems and a thousand and one minor items, all arranged in logical and compact order.

The building also houses administration offices, a staff room, kitchen, toilet and a garage for two cars. Largest of the rooms is the transmitter control room where an inlaid linoleum floor forms a colored map of Canada with names of cities having radio stations clearly marked. All controls for the station's circuits are operated by remote control from a console located within clear view of the bank of switch equipment and where the operator may have every necessary function at his finger-tips.

To assure continuous service to the Canadian radio public, the station is fed from two separate power lines and so arranged that either one or the other may be used at will. As an added safety feature, all vulnerable components of the transmitting equipment are provided in duplicate.

The 650-foot tower, which will be topped by air navigation beacons, is in itself an antenna. Below its bulk and buried in the ground, is a network of wires—more than 19 miles of it—radiating from the base like spokes of a wheel. There are 120 main spokes, each 600 feet long, with smaller ones spaced between. Every piece of metal in the building, radio and electrical apparatus, water pipes, conduits and metal window frames, is electrically connected with the ground system to avoid any possible loss of energy from the antenna.

The tower was completed a week ago and there remains but the painting and installation of the beacon lights to finish that end of the job. The building, however, is less advanced and considerable electrical work in connection with installation of the maze of equipment remains to be done.

Port Credit Armistice Parade

One of the best parades of the vicinity took place in Port Credit on Sunday, Nov. 14. The parade included: The Lorne Scots Regt., Port Credit Legion, Girl Guides, Boy Scouts, Fire Brigade, Local Council and other lodges. "A" Company of the Regiment was the guard of honour and took the salute as they marched by Major-General Cawthra-Elliot. The parade marched to Clarke Memorial Hall and later to the cenotaph. Guest speaker was Brig.-Gen. Alex Ross, C.M.C., D.S.O., V.D., A.D.C. The guard of honour was commanded by Capt. G. A. Montemurro and those in attendance from Streetsville were: Sergeant R. Hollingshead, Corporals H. Wilson, J. Kirke, F. Hollingshead and B. Saul, F. Golfetto, R. Hanson, W. Tracy, K. Hollingshead. It was a most spectacular parade with a large attendance of citizens who remembered days gone by with bowed heads.

PERSONALS

Mr. and Mrs. Glen Noble and son, of Toronto, visited with his parents here on Sunday.

Mrs. H. Whittam and R. K. Millan were the winners in the Carhart Overalls competition at the Owens Store, Streetsville. They tied each other.

Miss Jean Hammond has returned home after an extended visit with Miss Phylis Le Maistre, Montreal.

Mrs. Everett Coltman and son, Paul, of Trenton, are here on a visit with her aunt, Mrs. J. P. Caslor.

JUVENILE HOCKEY

The hockey fans of Streetsville will be glad to know that the Juvenile Hockey Club is going to "carry on". Last season the boys made a great effort to capture the championship of the T.H.L. This year the boys are going to try again with much the same team but with more experience and consequently a better chance.

The boys are going to assemble in the town hall on the 22nd of this month to appoint an executive and make a tally of all players.

The Club extends an invitation to all sports lovers of Streetsville to attend this meeting and support the team as much as they are able.

We all know that the Village of Streetsville, at the present time, is almost void of sporting activities. It is a sad situation because there is very good material in the town to make teams—and with a little support from the rest of the village, Streetsville could probably make a name for itself in the world of sport. Maybe if Streetsville hockey team achieves some honours in the coming season, it will help dispel some of the stigma that the recent crime has attached to the village.

This can be done with the wholehearted support of all the village. We noticed that when the boys reached their group finals last season that they had quite a following. This moral support helped them turn in the good performance that they did and it was only the lack of players that made them lose. I'm sure if this support was given steadily throughout the hockey season that the boys will sweep everything before them.

Watch this column for further developments.

SIMPSON.

U.F.W.O. NOTES

The U.F.W.O. Club met Monday, Nov. 8, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Rogerson. The president was in the chair and in spite of the weather nearly every member was present.

After the business part of the meeting Mrs. Harry Lee was presented with a lovely piece of pottery as an appreciation of her services as president for the past year. Mrs. W. Steen was given a hearty vote of thanks for the very capable way she looked after the books. The meeting was then closed with the singing of the National Anthem. Euchre was played till lunch time, winners being Mrs. H. Lee and Mr. W. Steen.

The next meeting will be December 13 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Maxwell.

25 YEARS AGO

From The Review, Nov. 14, 1912.

Mr. Wm. Couse attended the annual meeting of the Ontario Beekeepers' Association in Toronto, for three days.

The local Orangemen celebrated the Fifth of November with an oyster supper.

Mr. Joseph O'Connor had a successful clearing sale of farm stock, implements, etc.

There are a couple of cases of scarlet fever in town and schools have been closed for a week.

Mrs. Henry Hetherington passed away at her home in Toronto in her 80th year. She formerly lived at Barbertown.

Trinity church choir held a social at the home of H. F. Staley on Mallowe'en.

Charles Oram of West Toronto and Miss Bertha J. Elliott of Streetsville were married at Brampton by Rev. W. N. Chantler.

Auctioneer W. A. Russell conducted very successful sales for John Wilson, H. A. Tifkins, James M. Robinson and Howard Wilson.

J. A. Fletcher of Brampton and Mary Maud Denison of Churchville were married by Rev. Canon Walsh.

A stable, situated on the property of Mrs. Flanigan, near the Palace Bakery, caught on fire Saturday night and was destroyed. By hard work a number of men saved the adjoining buildings.

DRUMQUIN

Mild weather with light showers prevails at time of writing which is a great help as so much work on the land remains to be done. The thunder on the morning of the 8th inst. foretells an open fall, so our forefathers say.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Cross and Miss Peggy Cross left late Saturday night for the mining district in Quebec, where they purpose spending the next few months.

The Mission Circle will hold their next meeting at the home of Mrs. Delbert Downs, sixth line, to which the young ladies are asked to bring their articles for the bazaar.

Much sympathy is extended to Mrs. Merry, Mrs. Stephens, Mrs. Whittaker and Jasper Howes in the loss of their aged mother, who had been active in church and institute work until her health began to fail several months ago. She will be much missed by a large circle of friends.

Mrs. U. B. Taylor, a returned missionary on furlough, who has spent ten years in China, addressed the W.M.S. of Bethel church on Sunday and gave a very inspiring talk of the work and needs in the eastern field.

Our local sportsmen have returned from their hunting expedition, although they did not secure their full quota, they were fortunate in securing half their share.

Mr. and Mrs. A. G. McNabb spent the week-end with friends at Rosemount.

Do not forget Bethel Bazaar to be held on Nov. 24th in the basement of the church. Afternoon tea will be served.

High School

"Time marches on," and so did the pupils on Monday morning.

Everyone was anxious to see our new teacher. No one was disappointed .... Does she like popular music! Oh, Boy! She is also greatly interested in our game of Jack that we play on the blackboard.

Our former teacher, Miss Henry when saying 'Good-bye,' said "I am not going to say 'Good-bye' as it really isn't 'good-bye.' She left her phone number and address behind, in the High School. .... I guess that means "Come and see me some time."

Our last Literary Society meeting was only a business one. We arranged to pay a few of our debts

It was moved and seconded, that we get our piano tuned with money from our Society. When we voted on this it was turned down. We really meant, either the School Board will pay to get it tuned or we will move the piano. However, the piano has been tuned and the bill sent to our treasurer. Now, who is going to pay for it?

We warn you now, that our reports which will be taken home soon, are not so good. I guess that means neither are we.

Junior Institute

On Tuesday evening Nov. 16th the Junior Institute met at the home of the President, Miss Helen Ding wall. The first part of the meeting was spent in discussing several business matters, after which everyone participated in a game of crokinole. The winners were 1st Miss Margaret Longworth, 2nd, Miss Doreen Chamberlain. A delicious lunch was served by the hostess, assisted by Misses Edna Stephens, and Lyle Durie.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Miss Jean Temple on Tuesday evening, Dec. 14. All girls of the district are cordially invited to become members and join with us as we start working on our new project

Thief Robs Village Home

Lloyd Varcoe, manager of the Carload Groceterias, Streetsville, reports that some person entered his home, here, last Sunday when every body was away, and lifted $250, the store receipts for Saturday.

Will Take Vote on New School

The Streetsville High and Public School Boards will ask the Village Council to take a vote at the January election on the question of the erection of a new combined school at a cost of $65,000. The Council refused to supply the money without taking a vote, but that does not say they are not in favor of the proposition.

UNITED CHURCH NOTES

The Rev. Archer Wallace M.A., editor of Sunday School Publications for the United Church, well known writer of books, and lecturer, has agreed to come to give his lecture on "A Tale of Two Cities" in Streetsville Feb. 8th

The United Church Sunday School has arranged to hold its annual Christmas Concert on Dec. 21st. A large part of the programme is to be a pageant entitled 'the Greatest Gift.'

The C.G I.T. of the United Church has decided to hold a conclave early in December, when the groups will compete in a number of events (1) Table setting and decoration. (2) Group Yell. (3) Group Song. (4) Home Craft. (5) First Aid.

From all we hear, this will be a memorable night.

The Boys Groups are being asked to unite in the program for the evening

Rev. T. D. Jones has commenced a series of sermoms for Sunday evening on the theme: "Alternatives to the teaching of Jesus."

He took the first rather suggestive title last Sunday, "Envy one another for Jealousy is not Enough."

He said that once one began to examine the alternatives to the ethics of Jesus the glory of Jesus appeared tremendously enhanced. It was a thought producing discourse.

C. G. I. T.

Regular meeting of the Canadian Girls in Training was held Monday evening in the United Church basement. The representation was quite large and all seemed very eager to learn the outlined study. Rev. Mr. Jones group was in charge of the program with Miss Jean Rice acting as chair-lady. The programme consisted of the devotional exercises, several matters of business which were discussed, and a musical quartette which was made up of Misses Mildred Stephens, Jean Rice, Marion Steen, and Wilma Hamilton. Before the meeting closed, the girls divided into their own groups, under the leadership of Miss Edna Stephens, Mrs Dr. Steen, and Rev. Mr. Jones to discuss any group problems and to make preparations for the coming Conclave.

THE DOG TAX AND LIVE STOCK PROTECTION ACT

This legislation protects live stock owners against the ravages of dogs

This Act requires:—

The taxing of dogs and the issuing of dog tags.

—where live stock (Cattle and Sheep) are injured, the owner shall notify the local Valuer or the Reeve of the Municipality within forty-eight hours after discovery of the damage.

—the local Valuer must make two reports, one for the Municipality, and one for the owner of the livestock.

—if either of these is not satisfied with the report, he may appeal to the Minister of Agriculture for another Valuer by depositing $25.00. This money is returned if the appeal is successful but is forfeited if the appeal is lost.

—the award made by the Valuer appointed by the Minister is final.

TELEPHONE TALKS IN THE WATSON FAMILY

"Yes, Mary . . . and Tom's fine, too."

Old Mrs. Watson lives with her son Tom. Yet her only daughter Mary, miles away, is with her too, for Mary, though old-fashioned in many ways, is definitely telephone minded and never fails to call her Mother on Long Distance at least once a week — an inexpensive and supreme pleasure for both of them. As Tom Watson puts it, "though our family's scattered, we're never really far apart — with the telephone."

Are you acquainted with the comfort, convenience and low cost of Long Distance?

HOSTAGE HEIRESS

By DAVID DRESSER

Janet Duane, millionaire's daughter, gives a party one night aboard her father's palatial yacht, anchored off Miami. Gregory Gason tricks her into being lef behind wih him when the guests are taken ashore. The only other persons aboard are a crippled wtachman and Janet's Negro maid. Meanwhile, "Dusty" Lanion, lawless adventurer, has laid plans to seize the yacht to carry arms and ammunition to Cuban revolutionists. Believing the boat to be deserted, except for the watchman, who has been bribed, Dusty and his mean are about to board her.

CHAPTER XI.

"So-o-o?" Sakara stepped back with hissing intake of breath.

Gregory half rose, then cringed back as Don Martinez advanced into the cabin with blazing eyes.

"You two! You would dare to plot against our comrade?"

"Bah!" Sakara shrugged her shoulders elaborately—and turned away from him. "This Dusty Lenion, he is not so much. We find him in our way. Poof! He must be brushed aside."

"You are forgetting Don Martinez." The Cuban drew himself up proudly.

"Ah, no." Sakara purred. "Who could forget you?" She faced him, swaying toward him. "What matters this Dusty? With him attended to ....you and I ...." Her full lips parted in an inviting smile.

"But no!" Don Martinez started back.

"So?" she murmured. "You have changed your song since last night. You were not so cold when you begged me to return to Cuba with you." She leaned toward him with half-closed eyes and parted lips.

"You—you she-fiend!" Don Martinez gazed at her with loathing. "Last night you swore that you loved Dusty." he charged.

"Ah. But that was last night. To-night... perhaps I would listen to your words of love."

"No! By heaven, no! Dusty is my friend. I will go to him. He shall be warned.

• • •

A Sudden Move

Sakara moved without warning. There was a gleam of polished steel as she leaped forward with a dagger plucked from the bodice of her gown. Gregory gave a terrified cry as the blade grazed the Cuban's swarthy cheek.

The girl and man struggled a moment. Then, there was a tinkle of steel as Martinez twisted Sakara's wrist, and flung her back.

"Ha!" He paused magnificently on the threshold. "I go to tell Dusty of your amiable designs upon him."

The door slammed shut behind him as Sakara sprang forward with unappeased fury.

"Hurry!" she panted to Gregory. "We must stop him,"

She swooped up the dagger from the floor and jerked the door open to follow Don Martinez.

"Wait!" Gregory pleaded.

He caught at her shoulder, but she squirmed from him and ran out onto the wind-swept deck. Gregory followed her, cursing impotently.

• • •

Don Martinez was choking with anger as he hurried toward the bridge. That she-devil! She would knife him, eh? But Dusty would attend to her. Don Martinez felt supreme confidence in Dusty's ability to handle any situation. The moon was obscured by a cloud just then, and Don Martinez did not note the wraith-like figure pursuing him.

He was ten paces short of the bridge when Sakara leaped upon him tigerishly from the rear. The blade of the dagger had ceased to gleam as she withdrew it to strike again and again.

Don Martinez pitched headlong on the deck, while Gregory shrank back in terror at the inhuman fury depicted on Sakara's face.

"He—will tell no one," she gasped, as she drew away from the Cuban's crumpled body.

There was a startled cry from the deck behind them.

"What's happened?" Janet hastened toward them. "What is it? Who is that?" She stared wildly at the still form on the deck.

"Grab her, my Gregory," Sakara pushed Janet roughly toward him, and clasped her hand over the girl's mouth to suppress an outcry.

She almost succeeded. Only a gurgle came out when Janet screamed. But it was enough to be carried by the wind into the wheelhouse.

• • •

Running Amok

Dusty whirled from the wheel and peered down onto the deck. Then, with one swift motion, he dropped a loop over a wheelspoke to hold the ship steady, and leaped onto the deck.

He crashed forward with swinging fists. Gregory went down. Then, Dusty grappled with Sakara as Janet tore herself loose. The Russian girl's teeth clamped onto his arm as they tumbled to the deck together. Janet leaped to his aid.

Sakara broke loose. She screamed defiantly as she ran a few steps, then stopped to look back. Dusty was dizzily sitting up. Janet, beside him, was drawing his head tenderly down onto her shoulder.

That's what Sakara saw. Something snapped inside her. A moment ago she had been savagely bent upon besting this man who had scorned her love. Now, a crazed light succeeded the smoldering fury in her eyes.

"Sit there!" she screamed at them. "You think you mock Sakara. Sit there and make your childish love. Ha!" she laughed manically. "It is I——Sakara, who will have the last laugh. The wind will rise and the seas chant their hunger for a human sacrifice. Sakara will give them their sacrifice!" she laughed again.

"Dusty—what does she mean?"

Dusty's arm tightened about Janet's waist.

"She's gone nuts," he grunted. "Let me handle her." He started to rise.

"Don't, dear. Please." Janet clung to him frantically. "Leave her alone!"

"All right," he muttered. "She's crazy as a loon."

• • •

Down the Hatch

A strange gibberish came from Sakara's lips as the wind tore at her. In her mania, she had reverted to the language of her childhood. She started to back away from them slowly. She was hurling invectives and denunciation at them in Russian.

Suddenly, Dusty stiffened. "Good lord!" he muttered.

"What is it, dear?" Janet asked in alarm.

"She's—she's stopped by the hatch there. She's—quick!"

He thrust Janet away, and rose to one knee. His hand leaped to his shoulder holster and snaked a revolver out with lightning speed.

Janet gave a shrill cry, caught the barrel, and pulled it down.

"No!" she cried sharply.

The gun fell clattering to the deck as Dusty leaped up and sprinted toward the hatch. Too late! Sakara's wild laughter was abruptly cut short as she leaped into the hold where the explosives were stored, and drew the cover into place.

Coronation Styles Continue Popular

Hand - Knitted Fashions Are "Tops"—Colors Are Vivid

Fashion's eye is focused more keenly than ever on British styles since the Coronation, says a fashion authority. Under this influence, knitted fashions are surging to the top in style importance, and new attention is being paid to interesting detail work that is either dressmaker or tailored in feeling—thus keeping the British tradition for fine workmanship. Sitches are distinctly new, often giving a fabric-like appearance that is altogether revolutionary and unparalleled in knitted costumes. Distinctive novelty touches find their place, too, in the contrasting overplaids and crossbars of British Balmacans, and in two-toned jackets worn over monotone skirts.

Color, too, shows the effect of the Coronation splendor. Two-piece dresses are often knit in vigorous contrasting tones. Smart combinations, for example, are a dark hunters' green skirt, with a coronation gold blouse; a soldier blue sweater with a citron yellow scarf; or a wine dresses with embroidered plaid in soldier blue.

APPLES

In the Menu

One of the things that Canadians, living in foreign countries miss more than anything else, is the wonderful apples which are produced in this country. I can remember hearing one lady, who had been in the interior of China for many years, describing with what emotion she bit into a Canadian apple brought to her by some friends. The taste and smell of the apple were thrilling enough and eating it also seemed to take her back in memory to her homeland and renew all those ties which bind people to the country of their birth.

Most of us have never been denied all the apples we could possibly eat and so we don't appreciate them enough nor include them often enough in our meals. Canada produces almost every known variety of apple and in large quantities to export to all the British dominions. Baskets of this lovely and inexpensive fruit are on the markets now in quantities so use what you can in cooking and keep plenty for the family to munch by the fireside on winter evenings.

Though it has never been proved that an apple a day will keep the doctor away, it is true that it won't bring him any oftener, and most certainly won't drive the family away because Canadians just naturally love apples.

The following recipes include some old stand-by apple recipes and some new uses:

Deep Dish Apple Tapioca

2 1-2 cups tart apples, sliced
1-2 cup quick cooking tapioca
1 teaspoon salt
1-4 teaspoon mace
3 tablespoons butter
3 cups hot water
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 cup light brown sugar, firmly packed.

Bake apples with water and lemon juice in covered casserole in moderate oven (375 degrees F.) 15 minutes, or until partially cooked. Add remaining ingredients, mixing thoroughly. Bake 30 minutes, stirring well after 5 minutes, then every 10 minutes, and again when done. Serves with Butterscotch Hard Sauce or cream. Serves 6.

Butterscotch Hard Sauce

1-2 cup butter
1-2 cup brown sugar, firmly packed
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 egg yolk, well beaten
4 tablespoons milk

Cream butter thoroughly. Sift sugar and add gradually, creaming together until light and fluffy. Add vanilla, egg yolk, and milk, and beat well. Makes 1 1-4 cups sauce.

Dutch Apple Cake

2 cups sifted flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
1-2 teaspoon salt
1-3 cup butter or other shortening
1 egg, well beaten
2-3 cup milk
3 apples, peeled, cored, and cut in eighths
4 tablespoons butter
1-8 teaspoon nutmeg
1-2 cup sugar
1-8 teaspoon cinnamon.

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and salt, and sift again. Cut in shortening. Combine egg and milk. Add to flour until soft dough is formed. Spread in greased pan, 8x8x2 inches, having dough higher on edges than in center. Arrange apple sections on top of dough. Bake in hot oven (425 degrees F.) 30 minutes.

Cream butter, sugar, and spices together and spread on top of apples. Decrease heat slightly to 350 degrees F., and continue baking 30 minutes longer, or until apples are soft. Serve plain, or with Orange Sauce. Serves 8.

Orange Sauce

2 tablespoons cornstarch
2-3 cup cugar
Dash of salt
3-4 cup boiling water
1 egg yolk, slightly beaten
1-2 cup orange juice
2 tablespoons lemon juice
Grated rinds of 1-4 orange and 1 4 lemon.

Mix cornstarch, sugar, and salt. Add boiling water and cook until clear, stirring constantly. Place over hot water and continue cooking 5 minutes longer. Pour over egg yolk and beat well. When partially cooled, add fruit juices and rinds. Cool. Makes 1 1-2 cups sauce.

A TASTY DISH

Filet of Sole Creole

2 lbs. fish filet
2 tablespoons tomato paste
1 tablespoon minced green pepper
1 tablespoon sugar
juice of 1 onion
1 Oxo cube
1 cup boiling water
1-2 cup bread crumbs
a few sprigs parsley
2 tablespoons butter

Wash fish and place in baking dish. Mix tomato paste, sugar, green pepper, onion, Oxo cube dissolved in boiling water, and cook 3 minutes. Pour this sauce over fish, sprinkle with bread crumbs, dot with pieces of butter. Bake in moderate oven 20 25 minutes at 350 degrees F. Garnish with parsley.

Woman Isolates Measles Virus

Discovers It By Using Ink-Like Stain

Successful insolation of the virus that causes measles has given science a fresh advantage in fighting the most common communicable disease of childhood.

The virus was isolated for the first time by a woman, Professor Jean Broadhurst, Columbia University bacteriologist.

In "the journal of infectious diseases," she said she had solved the problem that has baffled scientists for generations by the use of a simple ink like stain called "nigrosin."

Mucous specimens from the nose or throat of measles victims and stained clearly showed the presence of the virus.

May Perfect Vaccine

Professor Broadhurst said the stain enabled doctors to detect measles several days before the appearance of the rash — chief symptom by which the disease has been diagnosed up till now.

Medical men expressed hope the discovery would enable them to determine measles carriers—person carrying the virus but themselves immune to the disease — and to perfect a preventative vaccine.

Dr. Broadhurst pointed out there were 799,455 cases of measles in the nation in 1934 as compared with 256,000 of chicken pox, second most common disease.

Cause of High Blood Pressure

Doctors Report Progress In Tracking it Down

Medical science, which for centuries has sought vainly to establish the cause of high blood pressure, reported progress last week by announcing the elimination of several things commonly accepted as causes.

Dr. Herman O. Mosenthal, of Columbia University, told the annual graduate fortnight of the New York Academy of Medicine that the disease, a major cause of death was not caused by excessive protein or carbon-hydrate foods, alcohol in moderation, the presence of high-blood sugar, or overweight.

Functional Disorder

He defined the disease as a functional disorder, characterized by progressively increasing elevation or arterial pressure, and noted that the "mechanical strain" incidental to its presence often produced changes in the heart and the arteries of the brain and kidneys so severe that death often results.

Emphasizing that alcohol, in moderation, does not influence blood pressure, Dr. Mosenthal pointed out that the blood pressure of habitual heavy drinkers is lowered in some instances when the alcohol is restricted or total abstinence is practiced.

Overweight Produces Strain

He explained that overweight, while in itself having no effect on blood pressure, did place an additional strain upon the heart and arteries and should be avoided. The only effect of protein and carbohydrate foods, he added, was their tendency to cause overweight.

Admitting that science has yet to establish definitely the cause of the disease, which is more prevalent among the aged, Dr. Mosenthal said that one of the "assumed" causes has been, and is, a large blood volume.

"The key to the situation," he said, "probably depends upon the fact that the arterial, pulmonary, capillary and venous regions have different functions in regard to the storage of blood. In the capilaries and veins a rise in blood volume should be effected without difficulty, while in the arterial system the quantity of blood probably remains constant."

Sunday School Lesson

LESSON VIII.
CHRISTIAN WORKERS
(1 Corinthians 3: 10—15; Galatians 6:6—10.)

GOLDEN TEXT— Let us not be weary in well-doing: for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not: Galatians 6: 9.

The Lesson in its Setting

Time.—The appointment of the first deacons in the early church was in 33 A.D. The First Epistle of St. Paul to the Corinthians and the epistle to the Galatians were written about 56 A.D.; and the first epistle of Paul to Timothy 63—66 A.D.

Place.— The appointment of the first deacons took place in Jerusalem. The City of Corinth was a great metropolis in northern Greece. Galatia was a province in Asia Minor. Timothy was residing in Ephesus when Paul wrote his first epistle to him.

It is not true that nothing is ever accomplished without work. It is true that nothing of any value is ever accomplished without work. This is just as true in the great enterprises of the Christian church, in the preaching of the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ, in the winning of souls to the Saviour, in the building up of believers. As Marshal Foch once cried out: "Gifts! Gifts! There is no such thing. There is nothing but hard work. There is nothing but that, even for the artist. Do not count upon gifts! Work!"

Our Work As Christians

The first paragraph of six verses can hardly be separated from the verse that immediately precedes it—"For we are God's fellow-workers: ye are God's husbandry, God's building." Cannot God do it all Himself? No. God needs man to carry out His purposes.

"According to the grace of God which was given unto me as a wise masterbuilder" — The word here translated "masterbuilder" is the Greek word architekton, from which comes our word architect. "I laid a foundation." Paul means that he had founded the church at Corinth, as well as many other churches. "And another buildeth thereon." Other men were (necessarily) carrying on the work of the Christian Church at Corinth, teachers, prenchers, evangelists, and pastors. Paul could be at only one place at one time. "But let each man take heed how he buildeth thereon. For other foundation can no man lay than that which is laid, which is Jesus Christ."—If anyone proceeds to lay another foundation over Christ, it is not a Christian church he is meaning to build. He who does not proceed upon the facts of Christ's life and death, he whose instruction does not pre-suppose Christ as his foundation may be useful for some purpose of life, but not as a builder of the Christian temple.

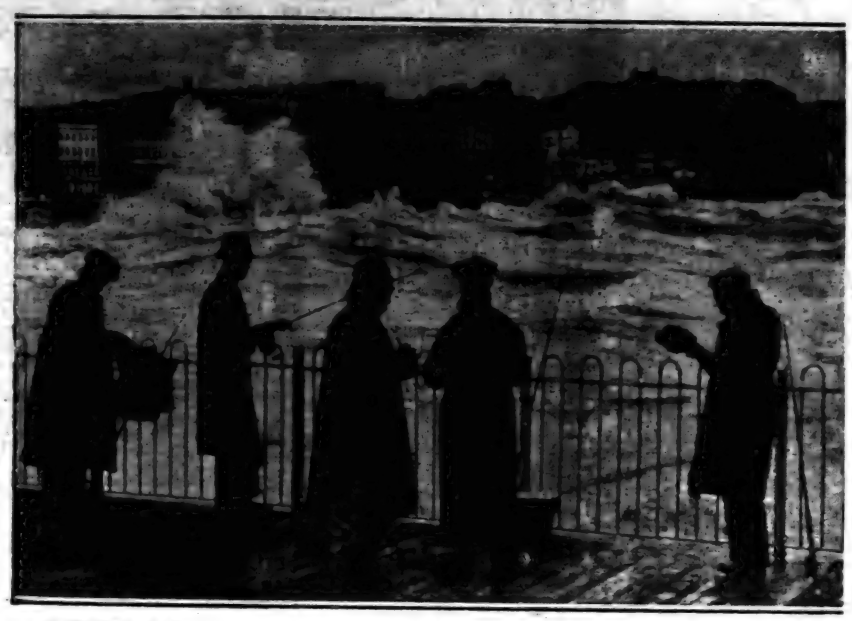
A Sure Foundation

"But if any man buildeth on the foundation gold, silver, costly stones, wood, hay, stubble; Each man's work shall be made manifest; for the day shall declare it, because it is revealed in fire; and the fire itself shall prove each man's work of what sort it is"—Exactly what in the mind of Paul corresponded to these various materials is not quite certain. Some think he referred to true or false doctrines. Others suppose that Paul had reference here to persons, some good and some worthless, who are brought into the visible church of Christ. Still others believe that the apostle referred to the moral and spiritual fruits of the work of Christian teachers in the lives and characters of their disciples and followers. The fire which Paul refers is simply a symbol of judgment, like fire which tests the true value of gold or silver. "The day," of course, the day of Christ's return for his own, when his own will be given rewards for the things which they have done upon earth.

"If any man's work shall abide which he built thereon, he shall receive a reward. If any man's work shall be burned, he shall suffer loss; but he himself shall be saved; yet so as through fire." The architect has to give his certificate before the builder gets his check, and the man who has built "gold, silver, precious stones," will have over and above his initial salvation in himself the blessed consequences, and unfold the large results of his faithful service; while the other man, inasmuch as he has not such work, cannot have the consequences of it, and gets no wages, or at least his pay is subject to heavy deductions for the spoiled bits in the cloth and for the gaps in the wall. The picture of this man is of one surrounded by a conflagration, and making a rush through the flames to get to a place of safety. We begin there where we left off here.

The Sowing of Seed

"But let him that is taught in the word communicate unto him that teacheth in all good things" — The word here translated "communicate" means, to have in common, to share, and Paul means that Christians, with a rich understanding of the word of God, should share their spiritual treasures one with another, either by the writing of letters, by edifying conversation, by the writing of books, or by public speaking, or otherwise.



"Be not deceived; God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap. For he that soweth unto his own flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption; but he that soweth unto the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap eternal life." —Never in the world of nature, but so often in moral matters, men are deceived into believing that, no matter what kind of seed is sown, the consequences will not be so bad after all; or that they can sow one kind of seed and reap another. Men are deceived into believing "they can sow folly and reap wisdom; they can sow wild oats, and gather honest wheat. If there is a sowing, there must be a reaping, and if there is a reaping, it will absolutely depend upon that which is sown. The corruption which is reaped begins here and continues in the life to come. The bloated face, the sensual leer, the sullen brow tells us what is going on within. To sow to the Spirit is simply to live a spiritual life, in the power of the Spirit of God, led by his Spirit, energized by his Spirit, seeking the will of God himself.

"And let us not be weary in well-doing: for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not."—Martin Luther has well said that it is an easy matter for one to do good once or twice, but to continue and not be discouraged through the ingratitude and perverseness of those to whom he has done good, that is very hard. A young man goes to his first place with boundless hopes of other and greater spheres opening to him in due time. He comes to discover, like the vast majority of us, that the ten talents have not been given him. Slowly and painfully the veil of illusion is drawn from his life, and he recognizes that he is to be but a hewer of wood and a drawer of water. The front places, the grander tasks are not meant for him. It is indeed a critical hour when the cold unwelcome truth discloses itself.

"So then, as we have opportunity, let us work that which is good toward all men, and especially toward them that are of the household of the faith."—In this verse the teaching of the entire preceding passage seems to be summed up. The church of Christ on earth is frequently designated as the house or family of God. Love always desires the good of others. Notice especially the phrase, "as we have opportunity." Opportunities do not tarry for long. An opportunity lost may never be recovered again.

The ideal church is the church in which everyone has some task to do. Dr. C. E. Seashore, the dean of the Graduate School and professor of psychology at the University of Iowa, has said: "The discovery of the individual and the study of his talents in modern psychology has brought forth a maximum which may well be our educational slogan:— 'Keep each student busy at his highest level of achievement in order that he may be successful, happy, and good.'" There is no question about it that the man or woman in the church who is most active, who is doing the most work, is the one who is happiest, whom most people love, and who is enjoying his or her Christian life the most abundantly.

Around The Dial

RADIO HEADLINERS OF THE WEEK

By FRANK DENNIS

Gossip has ruined many a career—but our ambition is to build them up—and so back we come again with a little more inside information on the people you hear on the radio. To begin with, I would like to thank that charming society gossiper, Pauline Drake, for the pretty flowers she sent me—and what do you think—with them she sent me a brick to build my new house with. Anyhow, we have a sense of humor (?) and so thanks, "Polly." You can hear her over CKCL every day at 1.00 p.m. in "What's New."

Sees A Picture A Night

If not the champion movie fan of the world, Erno Rapee conductor of the General Motors Symphony Orchestra and the Radio City Music Hall Symphony Concerts on NBC is a close contender for the crown. For years it was his business to see films in order to orchestrate them; so, before Sound came to the screen, he had seen and set to music 750 full length photoplays and more than 1,000 newsreels. As music director of Radio City Music Hall he sees a picture every night and spends most of his leisure time watching pictures in other movie houses.

Phil Harris, musical director on Jack Benny's Program on Sundays, made his professional debut as a drummer in a carnival band . . . . From Columbia Broadcasting System comes word of a new, twice-weekly series, featuring George McCall in "Hollywood Screenscoops." You will hear tell of unusual human interest stories about motion picture stars and exclusive news stories of the film capital. The time of the broadcast is 7.15 to 7.30, Tuesdays and Thursdays.

Rushed by Airmail

Eddie Guest, CKCL's chief announcer, just called up. Eddie informs us that he is conducting a new series of Hollywood comment, entitled from Hollywood To You. Just how much trouble Eddie goes to to get his information we shall try to tell you. The script is written in Hollywood, and must be in Toronto on time, for delays are not tolerated in radio work. The script is rushed up here by airmail and special delivery and Eddie has it on the air in twenty-four hours. The programs are heard every Saturday at 7 p.m. Eddie has been doing his movie mutterings for two years, and his column is authentic as well as entertaining.

A decidedly new program is on the air over CRCT, Tuesdays and Thursdays. The program is known as The Life and Adventures of Santa Claus. The story is taken from Julie Lang's famous novel of the same name. The book is on the preferred reading list for public and secondary schools in the United States, and the late Marie Dressler wrote a letter to the author stating that his book was a joy to read. The program deals with the origins of hanging the stockings over the fireplace, Christmas trees, why Santa climbs chimneys and so forth. We place this as being the finest program ever presented for the kiddies' benefit.

Mickey on the Radio

INSIDE STUFF—Mickey Mouse and his gang are scheduled for a series of radio presentations. This will be a live talent program with the original Mickey and Minnie Mouse voices, and those of Clarabelle Cow, Horace Horsecollar, Donald Duck and the three little pigs. As soon as we have more information about this series—we shall pass it along to you.

Pilgrim Finishes 300-Mile Crawl

Indian Began Journey in Thanks For Recovery of His Sons Who Died En Route

A man who set out from his native village of Manosa in Sirmur state, India, with his two sons more than two months ago on a "crawling pilgrimage" to Hardwar, 300 miles distant, has arrived in the sacred city. He has thus fulfilled a vow he made as thanksgiving for the recovery of his sons from typhoid.

He reached the end of the grim pilgrimage alone, however. His two sons died on the road.

Five Miles a Day

At the end of August the pilgrims, ignoring the entreaties of relatives and the warnings of doctors, set out to cover the journey to Hardwar in daily stages of five miles, crawling on hands and knees.

On the seventh day the strength of the younger son gave out, but his death was ascribed to the will of God and the father and the other son went on.

Stops For Funeral

Day after day their purpose was unshaken. They crawled through intense heat resting only at intervals when their swollen legs and arms would carry them no further. And then on the fifty-eighth day of the pilgrimage when they were only ten miles from Hardwar, the second son became too weak to go any farther and he also died.

The father, his purpose unshaken, attended funeral rites for his son and crawled on alone to Hardwar.

WAKE UP LIKE A CAVE MAN

Feel Full of Life—No More Tired, Dull, Heavy Mornings

Keep your liver healthy and you'll feel great every morning. When you wake up feeling "rotten" your liver is out of order. Your liver clears the blood of poisons, separates the nourishing part of your food from the waste. Supplies energy to muscles, tissues and glands—gives out bile, the body's laxative, helps stomach, kidneys and intestines to work properly. A mere bowel movement isn't enough. "Fruit-a-tives" made from fruits and herbs, will strengthen and build up your liver like nothing else will. You'll be amazed how well you are every morning. Try Fruit-a-tives. All druggists.

After considering the above applications, Council, by resolution, did disapprove of same and the Clerk was instructed to notify the School Boards accordingly.

Council on motion adjourned to meet December 6, at 8 p.m.

ACCEPTS CALL TO STREETSVILLE

Rev. R. H. M. Kerr Resigns as Pastor of Geneva Presbyterian Kirk

It came as quite a surprise to members and adherents of Geneva Presbyterian Church to learn last week that Rev. R. H. M. Kerr had handed in his resignation as pastor of the church into which he was inducted after his graduation from Toronto University and Knox College. With the concurrence of the members of Bruce Presbytery the resignation will take effect this month and Rev. Mr. Kerr will be inducted into the pastorate of St. Andrew's Church, Streetsville, some ten miles from Brampton, in the Peel Presbytery, in the course of a few weeks.

Chesley was Rev. Mr. Kerr's first pastorate after being ordained into the ministry, though well known to several members of Geneva Church before coming to Chesley, as he had been a student preacher during the holidays at Hanover while completing his college course. Mr. Kerr is secretary of the Chesley Ministerial Association and has taken a deep interest in that organization, is beloved by his clerical brethren and is highly esteemed not only by his own congregation but by the members of sister congregations and citizens generally for his active co-operation with his ministerial brethren in union services. Not only is Rev. Mr. Kerr an able pulpit man but has thoughtfully attended to his pastoral duties.—Chesley Enterprise.

LET US SMILE

For her birthday little Pat had been given a ring, but much to her disappointment not one of the guests at tea noticed it. At last she could bear their indifference no longer. "Oh!" she exclaimed. "I'm so warm in my new ring."

"Have you much room in your new flat?"

"Heavens, no. My kitchen and dining-room are so small that I have to live on condensed milk and shortbread."

ENJOYABLE EVENING

The semi-annual At Home of the local chapter of the Eastern Star was held Friday evening, Nov. 12th, in the Oddfellows' Hall, and was, as usual, a great success.

Bridge and euchre were indulged in, the following being the winners: bridge, Miss G. G. Ross, Dr. S. H. Smith; euchre, Mrs. W. Faulkner, G. E. Bunt; lucky bridge prize, Mrs. Jack Crozier; lucky euchre prize, Mrs. Will Leslie.

The dance hall was nicely decorated and good music was furnished by the Harmony Boys' Orchestra. It was a select crowd and a pleasant time was spent by all.

The prizes were presented by Mrs. E. C. Drew, Worthy Matron, who thanked the people for their presence and hoped they would come again.

The winners of dance prizes were: Lucky dance, Tom Doherty and Alice Casey; lucky spot dance, Peggie Jones. Mr. Sam Cordingley is Worthy Patron of the Chapter.

Bill Munro and Dorothy Crozier won the novelty dance.

Mrs. Laura Cation, D.D.G.M., Toronto District No. 10, Order Eastern Star, inspected Peel Chapter, No. 96, Streetsville, last Monday evening. She was accompanied by a number of present and past officers, and gave the officers of this Chapter much credit for the way they performed the work. This is one big night of the year in Chapter activities, and a very pleasant time was spent. Refreshments were served and speeches delivered.

The SPORTS BROADCAST

By Al Ryckman

Back to the desk and a bit of the work that has piled up ahead of us. We're kind of late and small wonder but here goes.

Well Clarkson did it. After being bashed about all through their first season in the local softball league by fairly stronger outfits, the Clarkson gentlemen took this year's championship very convincingly. The real spark of course was Ken Crew, the brilliant pitching ace, who suddenly developed into an extra special player of note. His remarkable hurling, batting and open field tackling, featured the triumphs.

Clarkson, of course, in the opinion of many and according to their summer record, were not the strongest team in the Highway set-up, but what they lacked in strength they certainly made up in team work. They stuck to their guns throughout a tough season.

Word from Port Credit is that Matt. MacQueen will again lead the Lakeshore town's softball club next season, although it had been previously stated that he would withdraw from the mushball circuit.

What with the Highway League playing in the O.A.S.A. and Oakville and Bronte entering the group in 1938, the league officials are seriously considering a Streetsville entry.

Rumour has it that many young ladies who performed in the Ladies' Four Softball League during the past summer composed of clubs from Erindale, Burnhamthorpe, Cooksville and Port Credit will be given a chance to try out with a certain Toronto organization in 1938.

When Dan Howley calls his baseball Leafs together at the Avon Park, Florida, training base next spring, it will be strictly a stag affair. Secretary Leman has announced from the new home office in the Northern Building that wives of the players must remain away from the camp.

To quote Mr. Leman, he says: "From now on spring training is going to be for the purpose of gaining conditioning and not a trip on which the players take their wives on vacation." A very good idea claims the Old Maestro, he himself being a bachelor.

Another bit of gossip along the baseball front from the Leafs' main office is that powerhouse Shanty Hogan has been given his outright release. Also the club has arranged spring exhibition games with the Boston Red Sox, Detroit Tigers, Newark Bears, Columbus Red Birds, Montreal Royals and the Louisville Colonels.

Dapper Dan has considerable rebuilding to do. An experienced catcher, who can hit is needed, along with two top-notch pitchers, and at least one smart infielder.

THIN ICE NOTES

One feature of the hockey matches at the Gardens last season was the outstanding vocalizing of the gent at a nearby parking lot.

His cry of "park here" was not exactly a college yell nor was it a growl, but we would certainly know his voice in a boiler factory.

This gent used to stand at the edge of the curb and bring out one of those "Park Here's" right from his boots. At this point automobile drivers would either jam on all four brakes and dash into his parking station or dash into a telephone pole or a passing street car.

To date we have missed said cheer leader at the games which is a bit of alright, since a nervous motorist going north on Sherbourne one Saturday night last year on his way to visit his wife's folks, suddenly heard a loud "park here", swished into the parking lot and sat there shaking in his auto until 11 p.m. and the "park here" crooner had gone home. Nevertheless we've missed this modern Dick Powell so far this season.

While on the subject of hockey, Montreal Maroons made a big capture when they landed Des Smith. He looks like the best new defenceman who has come into major league hockey in the past few years. Come to think of it, the Smiths, like the Jones boys, are once more very prominent in the N.H.L. There's Normie Smith, goalie with the Detroit Red Wings; Hooley Smith, playing centre for Dutton's Americans; Clint Smith, the new left winger with the New York Rangers, and of course Des Smith, with the Maroons.

As was stated at the first of this literary effort, we're just getting back to our newspaper work, so our column is somewhat brief this week, but just wait till next Thursday.

Now the maestro will render that beautiful ditty that commences, "There's the Review and me and the column makes three and we're happy to be together again." Good evening friends!

Eden W.A.

The Eden Women's Association met at the home of Mrs. E. May on Wednesday, Nov. 10, Mrs. Waite presiding.

Rev. T. D. Jones gave an interesting talk on the "Paradoxes of Jesus." Mrs. Hall spoke briefly on "Remembrance Day." Two missionary stories, read by Mrs. Sinclair, impressed on our minds the great need for Christian workers in the foreign countries.

An encouraging report of our Harvest Home Supper and Concert was given by the Treasurer. It was agreed to hold social evenings during the winter months.

At a meeting held recently at the home of Mrs. Sinclair the Association packed a very substantial bale for the needy.

The annual meeting will be held in December at the home of Mrs. A. May, Mrs. Sinclair and Mrs. Hamilton to have charge of the programme.

The ancient Greeks believed that lightning consisted of heavy spear-like projectiles which had been heated white-hot and cast at offending mortals and objects, with none too accurate aim, by their head god Zeus.

The primitive Germans attributed lightning to bolts thrown by a malicious god named Loki while the dull-witted war god, Thor, pounded on the sky with a hammer to make thunder. In fact, writes Dr. Thomas M. Beck in the Chicago Tribune, almost all primitive peoples believed lightning was a sort of material missile hurled by a vindictive god. This theory died out in Europe with the rise of Christianity, since it was difficult to reconcile the idea of lightning as a manifestation of divine wrath with the observation that it seemed to strike church steeples more often than anything else.

Still we should not smile too much at the mistaken beliefs of these long-dead Greeks and Germans. We are not very well informed on it ourselves. The average man knows that it consists of electricity, that it zigzags in Z-shaped straight lines, and that it never strikes twice in the same place. Armed with this knowledge, he is two-thirds wrong. Lightning is certainly a discharge of static electricity, as Benjamin Franklin showed many years ago.

But there is nothing at all straight about a bolt of lightning, although apparently this fact was not known until lightning was actually photographed. Actually it follows a meandering course like that of a river as shown on a map.

This figure is correct in other respects than appearance, for lightning is actually a river of electricity. Just as water follows the course of least resistance in flowing from a high altitude to a low, so does electricity move from a high to a low voltage.

Gates Fort, Bermuda, Is Named for Old Virginian

Ancient Gates fort, which is a mile and a half from St. George, Bermuda, and which antedates the landing of the Pilgrim Fathers by a decade, is the site of this ruined fortification, built by Sir Thomas Gates, governor of Virginia, shortly after he was shipwrecked there in 1609, and while his famous vessel Deliverance was being constructed to carry colonists on to their original destination, Jamestown.

Excavations made by members of the St. George Historical society, writes a St. George, Bermuda, correspondent in the Detroit Free Press, disclosed the original plan of the fort which had been buried with solidified sand. Embrasures were restored, old guns re-mounted in positions from which their gaunt muzzles spelled authority to invading Spaniards, French, Dutch and Portuguese, and later to blockade runners and ships from the North and South which used Bermuda as a base for supplies during the Civil war.

St. George itself is the oldest English settlement on this side of the Atlantic.

Rivers Flow Underground

Although it is frequently printed that Barbados has no rivers, this assertion is entirely untrue. There are a number of rivers, but they all flow underground. From these subterranean streams the towns are supplied with pure water. It is nevertheless true that one may travel from end to end and from side to side of the island and never see a stream or pond worthy of the name. So easy is it to tap one of the many subterranean rivers of Barbados that upward of 300 miles of pipes carry the water to all towns and hamlets on the island.

"Going to Putney on a Pig"

The saying "Going to Putney on a Pig" had its beginning in the playful chaff on the road to the University Boat race. In the early days of the race, says a writer in Pearson's London Weekly, it was usual to use all kinds of vehicles to get to Putney, including the small cart drawn by two dogs, the costermonger's barrow and donkey, and every other type of conveyance. The singularity of some of the turn-outs, no doubt, suggested the comical idea of going to the race on a pig.

Salt-Cellar a Massive Piece

In medieval days the family saler, or salt-cellar, was a massive piece of silver, placed half-way up the long table at which the head of the family and his guests and retainers dined. Persons of distinction sat nearer the head of the table, above the salt-cellar; the more humble folk near the foot, below it. So came the expression of compliment or respect, "to sit above the salt."

Dutch Traders Successful

Of the many attempts made by European nations to trade with Japan in the Sixteenth, Seventeenth and Eighteenth centuries all failed excepting that by the Dutch, who accepting that by the Dutch, who had a curious arrangement whereby the necessary Japanese interpreters were trained to carry on an oral conversation in Dutch, but were forbidden to learn to read or write Dutch under penalty of death.

The Open Column

Streetsville residents who want to see improvement in the school accommodation of the village may well view with alarm, or at least with some apprehension of trouble to come, the most recent rumpus over secondary education which has come to life in the county council.

Last week four by-laws were presented for first readings, creating high school districts in the townships of Albion, Caledon, Chinguacousy and Toronto Gore, because, the representatives of these respective and respectable municipalities claimed, the citizens of the said townships were paying too much to send their young hopefuls to high school.

E. D. Maguire, after fighting a brisk battle against the by-laws, declared that, if they were finally passed, and received the approval of the Department of Education, his township would have no alternative but the building of a high school in Toronto Township for the tutelage of Toronto Township pupils.

Which would wreak more than a little havoc with the plans of the Streetsville high and public school boards to build a new school. A large percentage of the pupils of Streetsville high school come from Toronto Township, and, if these pupils were taken to a township school, there would certainly be no point in building a new and larger Streetsville school for secondary scholars, although the need of increased public school accommodation would remain.

In view of the fact that the village school boards are asking for a vote on the erection of a new school, ratepayers of the village had best take into consideration the following posabilities: if an amicable agreement could be made with Toronto Township, whether other townships created their own high school districts or not, a new school would become even more desirable than at the present time; if the township insists on building a school of its own, a new school in Streetsville would be out of the question; and, thirdly, the most sensible way out of the difficulty would be to provide for the construction of a new school, when the question comes to a vote in January, and leave the decision to the school boards and the village council as to whether it would be a sound proposition to build the new school. No decision could be reached on the latter problem until the county council has threshed out the high school question, and the cat has jumped one way or the other in Toronto Township.

Mr. Maguire's proposal to build a high school in Toronto Township, made, no doubt, in good faith, would be faced by too many financial difficulties to be a serious threat, for the simple reason that Toronto Township has been compelled to eschew capital expenditure for the past few years, and any measure that would involve the expenditure of from $150,000 to $200,000 would not merely have to gain the approval of heavily taxed citizens of the township, but would also have to be wormed into the affections of the banker swho keep a finger on the Toronto Township pulse.

SKUNK IN DISTRESS FINDS HELP SCARCE

Erindale.—Country noises are not city noises, a local resident who moved here recently from Toronto is ready to admit. Last night the new citizen heard a strange clanking sound at the rear of his home.

Taking a flashlight he set out to investigate. Opening the rear door cautiously he shone the beam towards the garbage heap whence came the noise. The beam showed a black animal with a shiny silver head. Puzzled for a moment he decided that a stray cat had caught its head in a can. He was all set to aid the visitor until closer investigation showed the black and white stripes. It was a skunk.

HISTORY OF THRESHING OUTFITS

He is a strangely self-centred man who does not remember with gratitude what he owes to the pioneers of Canada. A worthy and heroic race were they who came into the new land when the circumstances and outlook were far other than they are today. There were often privations and but little of ease and luxury in their lives. But they were cheered in the midst of hard toil and narrow surroundings by visions of the future. They saw the homes that were to be and the coming of better days. And they toiled on with unfailing courage in the hope that they might leave a worthy heritage to their children. And who will say that they did not lay the foundation truly and well? They not only made homes, but, side by side with these, they reared the humble little school-house and the unpretentious Church. It means much to Canada that the pioneers in the midst of their struggles cared for more than material things, and believed that life is only rounded out and complete when God is taken into its working plan.

One of the greatest problems the pioneers had to face was after the grain was perfected by nature, to separate the grain from the straw. This was a most important process. In biblical times, we read the ox that trod out the corn must not be muzzled. A glance over the methods of threshing in Ontario since the stalwart pioneers wielded the flail is interesting in itself. Many farmers of the present day have never seen a flail. It consists of a stick of polished wood, about the size of a fork handle, and four feet long. To this was attached a similar piece about three and a half feet long, being attached to the handle in an ingenious manner that would allow it to turn as it was swung in the air. For years after threshing machines were fairly common peas were threshed with the flail, this method breaking less than the swiftly-revolving cylinder, making the peas much more valuable for seed. This work was generally done in the winter, men becoming quite expert, some claiming to be able to thresh 40 bushels a day.

Twenty bushels was, however, considered to be a good day's work. Instead of the ox being driven over the grain to tread it from the straw, a man wielding the flail to pound it out was considered a great improvement. It was about the year 1825 before any one mechanical contrivance figured in threshing operations. These were crude affairs. The cylinders at first were of wood, turned true with iron staples driven in to serve as teeth. Soon, however, iron cylinders were used. These were driven by horses hitched to arms going around in a circle. This method knocked the grain from the straw in a fairly thorough manner, but did not separate it, this having to be done by hand, tossing the straw with a fork, then tossing the grain and chaff with a hand-made basswood scoop shovel on a windy day, in this manner getting the grain fairly clean. These machines were quickly improved on, decks being invented to separate the straw, then a shoe with fans to clean the grain. For a long time after reaching this stage the machine did not elevate the straw, simply delivering it on the ground behind the machine. To fork this by hand on a high stack was a laborious task. When an elevator or straw-carrier was invented it was hailed as the last word in improvement. These at first were short, but soon were made more efficient. To stand at the head of a carrier all day was the hardest and dirtiest work about the machine and had always to be done by the hired man attached to the farm where the threshing was being done. Until about 1880 threshing was done by horsepower in Ontario. Five teams hitched to arms going in a circle drove the separator. The separator, up to this date, was built to stand on the barn floor, having to be loaded on a low truck when the job was done and unloaded at the next barn.

This loading was heavy work after a hard day's work but these machines were much easier to get the stuff up to, also to clean up the floor, as they were much lower than those built on trucks. The ten horsepower was also unloaded and staked to the ground and were very heavy to load on the waggon. An ingenious method was introduced by which a long rack was made for the waggon, and the horsepower raised by two men and carried under the waggon, easier for the men to load, but much heavier for the horses to move on the road. In certain sections of the country horsepowers were used for threshing for a long time after 1880, separators being built on trucks, never unloaded. They could never be placed as firmly for heavy work as the old style with the frame on the floor. About 1880 steam was introduced. The first engines were portable, ten and twelve horsepower driving separators built on trucks, men hailing this as a cinch that at night they had not to load either separator or horsepower. Portable engines were generally used until about 1902, when the blower superseded the straw-carrier and self-feeder and band cutter were attached. Until this time feeding was done by hand and threshers took great pride in their skill as feeders. The automatic feeder and bandcutter did this work much more efficiently. It at once took away all the former glory from these occupations. To drive these machines large engines were required, these being too heavy to haul around with horses, tractors being used. Then the inventors tackled another problem. In Ontario most of the straw was fed and was run through a cutting box before feeding. How to thresh and cut the straw at the same time was the problem to solve. About 1903 inventors all over the country wrestled with this problem. At first all endeavored to cut the sheaves first, then thresh them afterwards. This, however, was impracticable as all the cut straw went through the decks, making it impossible to clean the grain. Since the system has been perfected to thresh the grain first then run the straw through a compartment at the rear of the machine, where a cylinder with knives attached cuts the straw.

A machine today will thresh and cut from 50 to 60 loads of grain in ten hours. This requires an engine of 22 horsepower.

In the sixties threshing machines were supposed to have reached perfection, Joseph Brothers of Milton was famous for his horsepowers and separators. A. Mr. McDonald of Acton had acted as his agent for years, but started to sell the "Climax", built by McPherson of Fingal, Ontario. A bitter rivalry sprang up between these two men. A match was arranged to take place on the farm of Wm. Moore, Lot 12, Concession 3, in August, 1871. Each machine was to thresh wheat for one hour, speed and clean threshing both to count. Robert Shortreed, John McDougall and others were appointed time-keepers and measurers. The day was fine and an immense crowd assembled. The farm looked like Milton fair grounds. The Climax man had his first trial. A big Scotsman had been brought from West Elgin, who fed the full hour. The band cutter, dropper and mow men had been carefully selected, a different gang for each machine. The powers were driven by five teams each, and the very best teams had been secured. The Climax machine did her hour in splendid shape. When time was called the crowd picked up the power and separator as if they were toys and carried them away. Then the Milton separator and horsepower were put in position and set in a few minutes. John Bailey, Jimmy Downs and George Brownridge divided the hour between them as feeders. Andy Brownridge drove. Five splendid teams had been secured. One of them were Andrew Henderson's team from the mountain, Tom Brownridge's team from Omagh, William Elliott's and Malcolm McPherson's two teams of blacks. Andy Brownridge knew each horse by name. After the cylinder began to hum he cracked his whip once, but after that he caught the lash and kept it down, soothing each horse by name, for fear they would tear the machine to pieces. So much grain was wasted by both machines that the referee called it a draw and the wager was given back.

John H. Weylie was attacked by a bull one day last week. It hurled him in the air and he had one leg broken.

The red light on the new broadcasting station at Hornby can easily be seen from the Main street of Streetsville.

Mr. and Mrs. George Wilson of Montreal suffered the loss of their baby recently. George is the son of Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Wilson, Streetsville, who attended the funeral.

Some mean person put strychnine on a piece of meat and left it where some animal would get it. Norman Potts' collie dog picked it up and was poisoned. Dr. Reed attended the dog and it has recovered.

Streetsville is certainly getting its name up for doing fiendish tricks.

Caleb Hammer, photographer, is dead at Islington, in his ninetieth year.

Rev. J. Y. Fraser and Mrs. Fraser called on friends in Streetsville last week.

Mr. McArthur of Martintown, father of Mr. C. P. McArthur, B.A., was in Streetsville Saturday.

Mr. J. E. Bailey, drover, is driving a fine new delivery truck.

Streetsville High School is preparing for the annual Commencement exercises, which will be held after New Years.

Whilst many points report snow in quantities, Streetsville has only had a light fall thus far and the ground has cleared, never having been completely covered.

The floral offerings at the United church altar have been very beautiful all the summer and autumn and the committee responsible thank all who have helped in this service at the church. Last Sunday a basket of yellow roses was much appreciated, as well as a pot of chrysanthemums. The former were brought by Mrs. W. N. Atkinson and were a gift from Graydon Clipperton, her son, now in Nakina, far to the north.

We would like to draw the attention of our readers to a little book now for sale in the village, called "Friends on the Road". It is a compilation of some of the writings which appeared originally in this paper under the name of Cecil Parker, which was the pen-name of our friend, the late Howard Grant Purchase. Those who have read the book feel that it will have a gripping interest and influence. It is attractively bound and illustrated and would make, we are sure, a very acceptable Christmas gift. All the proceeds from the sale of it will go to help a Chinese boy in whom Howard was interested.

The price is 25 cents and the book may be obtained at MacPherson's, Hewgill's or Falconer's.

Preparations for a high school reunion have been under way for weeks and every old pupil for the last 25 years has been invited to join to do honor to a teacher who has served the school for almost as many years and who has recently resigned, as well as to bring together former residents of the village with those of the present and to have a good time.

Over a hundred have signified their intention to be present and one is expected from New York for this outstanding event.

The reunion will be held Friday evening this week, and will be a memorable event.

THE PERKINS BULL COLLECTION

In the midst of the glitter, the noise, the bustle, and all the aggressive modernity of the Royal Winter Fair, the Perkins Bull Historical exhibit struck another note. It was a mute witness of the things that have been, without which what is could never have come into being.

There were arrayed the tools and implements of laborious pioneers, the fine craftsmanship of skilled workers in the hand age before machinery, and the utensils of housewives who knew not "modern conveniences".

The crowds continually surrounding the Perkins Bull exhibit attested the interest it aroused. Innumerable questions were asked and valuable additions to the collection proffered.

CHAPTER XII

Dusty was too late by seconds. He knew it was useless even as he tugged at the ring in the cover of the hatch. It was jammed tightly, and there was no time now to pry it loose. He was well aware of Sakara's desperate intention. Perception had come to him when he saw her poised by the open hatch where the explosive cargo was stored.

He raced back to Janet. No time now for explanations. It would take Sakara but a moment to carry out her fiendish plan to wreak destruction on the ship and all aboard—including herself.

Dusty caught Janet in his arms and plunged toward the rail. His only thought was to save this girl that he loved. There was not a second to spare—no time to warn the others aboard. He caught a life preserver from the rail as he leaped overboard with Janet.

They sank deep into the sea, and he fought his way to the surface with his free arm. The life preserver bobbed before them and he caught at it as he released Janet.

"Swim!" he shouted. "Away from the ship. As you've never swum before!"

Janet struck out strongly. Dusty was hard put to stay beside her, hampered as he was by the life preserver in his left hand. But he knew they must drive on and on, away from the fated yacht. The force of the explosion would be terrific.

Then, he realized that, even if they should escape the explosion, they would probably meet death by drowning, for they were far from shore. Or by the sharks! He flinched at the thought as he swam on, shoulder to shoulder with Janet.

Strange, he thought fleetingly, how precious life had suddenly become. Always he had laughed defiance at death. All that was changed now. The girl who swam beside him had given to life a new sweetness.

Rescue or Capture

Then—the explosion came. A terrific roar. The sea surged angrily, throwing them up, then leaping out to drag them back. Janet clung to Dusty in wordless terror.

There had been a blinding flash. Pieces of blazing debris were hurled several hundred feet into the sky. Then darkness. And silence.

"Oh!" Janet shuddered. "Those poor men—and Gregory!"

"We couldn't help them," Dusty told her somberly. "Try not to think of it," he urged.

"I . . . I will try," Janet lifted her chin bravely. "What about us?" she demanded.

"We're safe enough. All we have to do is hang onto this life preserver."

Janet did not believe him. There was something in his voice.

"I'm glad it's not cold," she said gallantly.

"We'll surely be picked up by a passing ship," Dusty lied.

"So long as we have each other," Janet murmured, "nothing seems to matter."

Dusty clasped her hand as it gripped the canvas-covered float.

"I can go to death happily after hearing that."

"Why you . . . I thought you just said we'd surely be rescued."

"You will be," he grunted. "It will hardly be rescue for me. Capture, rather." His lips twisted in a thin smile.

"Oh."

"You see . . . " His voice was very gentle. "This rather upsets my plans. I'd . . . " He groped awkwardly for words. "I'd planned a different ending. I meant to return your father's yacht after discharging the cargo . . . and take the consequences. I calculated that returning the yacht and you, safe and sound, might dispose of the worst of the charges against me."

"What charges?"

"Of piracy and kidnapping," Dusty told her grimly.

"Nonsense!" Janet spoke impetuously. "They'll release you when I tell my story."

"I'm afraid your story will have little weight with the authorities."

It must not be, Janet told herself passionately.

"Don't let it bother you," Dusty told her gently. "It's been coming to me a long time. The only thing is . . . I sort of hate to have it happen now."

She didn't ask him why. She knew what he meant.

"Isn't that a light?" she asked suddenly.

He followed her gaze, then stiffened.

"A ship!" he exclaimed.

They clung together as the faint throb of a motor came across the water.

"Must have been nearby and seen the explosion," Dusty muttered. "They've come to pick up survivors. We'll swim toward them and yell."

Did It Single-Handed

Thus, the Coast Guard cutter found them. Clinging together and to the life preserver. A boat was lowered to take them aboard, and the captain met them at the rail. He started as he recognized Dusty.

"Lanion!" he exclaimed. "We heard and saw the explosion . . . . what has happened, man?"

"That was the Fleetwing," Dusty told him. "This, Captain Doig, is Miss Duane."

"Bless my soul!" the captain exclaimed. "Then you did it, Lanion! And none of us knew you'd even started work on the case. The last I heard was that the Department of Justice was trying to get you to help them!"

"What's that?" Dsty wondered if he'd heard aright.

"Might have known you weren't one to let grass grow under your feet. But why didn't you call on us for aid? You were a fool to try it single-handed."

"Well, it worked out successfully, didn't it?" Dusty said happily as the truth dawned on him.

"It certainly did! I guess it's hard for you to realize that you were working on the side of the law for once in your life, eh?" Captain Doig laughed. "Get along with you now and into some dry clothes. I'll radio the news ashore . . . then I'll get the whole story from you."

"So?" Janet laughed delightedly as they went below. "You are a hero!"

Dusty's face clouded. "They'll sing another song when they learn the truth."

"How will they ever know?" she asked promptly. "The Fleetwing went down with all hands. Nothing can be gained now by changing their opinion."

"That's right," Dusty straightened his shoulders. "No one knows the truth."

"You're forgetting me," Janet murmured.

"No, I'm not." Dusty faced her in the companionway. "What is the price of your silence?"

"A million kisses." Her arms stole about his neck as he began payment.

Relaxed Living Enhances Beauty

Maintenance of Loveliness, Doctor Says, Possible Only With Normal Life

Dr. Charles H. Goodrich, president of the State Medical Society, said at Albany, N.Y., last week that the existence and maintenance of human beauty "is dependent upon normal workings of the body and mind together."

In an address to the New York State Federation of Women's Clubs, Dr. Goodrich told the delegates "Increased rest, diminished drive, proper diet equally distributed, a calmer view of life and duty and perhaps a little medicine can restore your graceful curves, your color and youh easy breathing."

Dr. Goodrich said that worry "makes lines in the face and relaxes posture."

Christmas Cake Made Early

It seems to happen to us every year and every year we are just as surprised as though it had never happened before when we discover that there are only a few more days until Christmas. Then comes the last minute rush of buying, tying up parcels, sending someone a card which we forgot to do before and all the hundred and one things that have to be done in order to make tl Christmas season a successful and happy one.

Many housewives, in fact, feel that it's hardly worth all the bother, but a lot of the hectic rush of the Christmas season can be saved by thinking ahead of time. This may seem an odd time to give you Christmas recipes but by making your Christmas cake now, you have more leisure and time to think of other things later. Besides, a really good cake needs three weeks in which to mellow. The rich and good ingredients which go into it must have time in which to blend and let the flavour permeate.

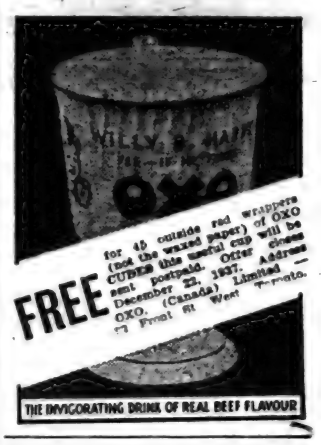
Here is a recipe which is easy to follow and makes a beautiful big cake. It keeps well and that is a necessity when you think of the number of times during the Christmas season when you will be entertaining. Then when Christmas is over, if you have any of the cake left, it can be used to add a de luxe touch to meals or parties.

Christmas Fruit Cake (10 eggs)

1 pound (4½ cups) sifted cake flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon cloves
½ teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon mace
1 pound butter or other shortening
1 pound brown sugar
10 eggs, well beaten
½ pound candied cherries
1 cup honey
1 cup molasses
½ pound candied pineapple
1 pound dates, seeded and sliced
1 pound raisins
1 pound currants
½ pound citron, thinly sliced
½ pound candied orange and lemon peel
½ pound nut meats, chopped
½ cup sweet cider.

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and spices, and sift together three times. Cream shortening thoroughly, add sugar gradually, and cream together until light and fluffy. Add eggs, fruits, peel, nuts, honey, molasses, and cider. Add flour gradually. Bake in four pans, 8x8x2 inches, lined with greased paper, in slow oven (250 deg. F.) 3 to 3½ hours. Makes 10 pounds fruit cake. Small loaves may be baked 2½ hours, or until done.

Makes 10 pounds fruit cake. To store, brush lightly with port or brandy, wrap in waxed paper, and keep in air-tight container. Or brush with grape juice, wrap and store.



Chili Con Carne
(A Real Mexican Recipe)

4 tablespoons shortening or salad oil
2½ cups finely chopped onion
4 cloves garlic (finely-choped)
2 pounds shoulder of mutton
1 pound lean pork
Seasoned flour
1 tablespoon chili powder
½ teaspoon thyme or ground bay leaves
1 can red kidney beans (optional)
1 can cream of tomato soup
½ tablespoon salt
4 cups boiling water
2 Oxo cubes
1 cup chopped ripe olives

Brown onion and garlic in hot fat or salad oil. Transfer to deep stewpot. Cut mutton and pork in 1-inch cubes, coat with seasoned flour, and brown in pan in which onion and garlic were cooked. Add chili powder, thyme, salt, cream of tomato soup, and the boiling water in which the Oxo has been dissolved. Turn into kettle containing onion and garlic, and simmer gently until meat is very tender. One hour before the meat is cooked, add olives and kidney beans (if used). Serve the chili very hot.

Note 1—If mixture becomes too dry, add water.

Note 2—Five cups water and tomato juice may replace the 1 can of soup and 4 cups boiling water.

Ripened Cheese Preserves Food

Expert Says It Will Keep Oil-Containing Edibles from Turning Rancid

Ripe cheese will prevent foodstuffs containing oils from turning rancid, it is revealed in a patent just granted to Mayne R. Coe of Washington, D.C., an agriculture research worker.

Mr. Coe, who dedicates his patent to the free use of the public in the United States, has discovered that a certain enzyme, known as catalase, which is present in the cheese is the agent that keeps rancidity in check. Instead of cheese, he may use this enzyme itself.

Keeps Fresh Long Time

Besides preserving the oil-containing foodstuffs, a little bit of ripened cheese added to cottonseed or corn oil and lard will keep them "fresh" for long periods.

Rancidity, explains the inventor of the new oil and fat preserving method, is due to the action of light and oxygen from the air on certain reactive substances in the oils and fats. As a result of this action hydrogen peroxide is formed. It is this powerful oxidizer banding with the oxygen and light which produces compounds in the oils and fats which are responsible for rancidity.

Does Not Affect Taste

What the ripe cheese, or rather the catalase contained therein, does, is attack and decompose the hydrogen peroxide to ordinary water and oxygen before it has a chance to produce any rancid compounds.

The amount of cheese added to obtain this preserving action is so small that it does not affect the original taste of the food.

Knitting Tips

A Guide for the Beginner

Always buy sufficient wool to finish your garment. Sometimes shades vary a little. Don't try too difficult a pattern if you are a beginner—you'll only get disheartened!

Even knitting gives a professional look to children's or women's woollies. Firm wools and a solid pattern should be chosen for suits and dresses, so that you do not get a sagging skirt. Good coloring, shape and careful knitting are telling points in knitted designs.

If you are not an even knitter choose a boucle yarn. Stitches do not show up so much.

Join wool at the end of a row, not in the middle. Keep your seams neat by sewing from one knitted stitch to the stitch exactly opposite. Seams should be well pressed; but remember that pressing spoils a raised pattern.

Many knitted sweaters and suits are finished with flaps instead of real pockets; this gives a neat finish. Never add bitty trimmings to woollies. Make sure they suit the style before being tempted to try "odd" buttons.

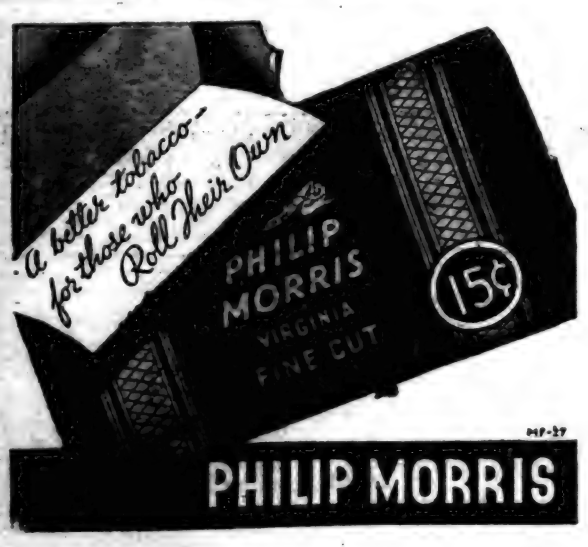
Knit washable garments at an easy tension to allow for slight shrinkage. Tiny embroidered flowers give a party look to a child's knitted frock.

Where instructions are given for 34-inch bust and No. 9 needles, use a size 8 needle and the garment will then fit a 36-inch bust. Sew ribbon behind buttons and your knitting won't pull out of shape.

To ensure slick shoulder seams, sew a piece of tape 3½ to 4 inches to prevent stretching. Use a good quality wool and lengthen the life of your woollies.

Plain skirts—dead straight and knitted in two or four panels—are fashionable. Where there is a plain edge, knit into the back of stitches to give firmness.

Zippers are a smart finish; obtainable in all colors.



Barter

Today I shall go to the market place
With the grapes I have gleaned from the vine;
I shall barter the treasure that I call mine
For a length, perhaps, of lace,

For a pottery bowl, for a silver chain,
For a pearl from the cool green sea;
Some wonderful things I shall bring with me
To count as my season's gain!

There was one who stood in the market's throng
And chanted a mystical theme—
I gave the Summer's fruit for his dream
And the memory of his son.

LESSON IX.

Christian Fruitfulness—John 15:1-16

Golden Text.—Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit; and so shall ye be my disciples. John 15:8.

The Lesson In Its Setting

Time — Thursday evening, April 6, A.D. 30.

Place—Probably in the upper room, where the Lord's Supper was instituted.

The beautiful discourse concerning the vine and the branches is a part of his wonderful revelation to his disciples on the night before his crucifixion, Thursday evening of Passion Week. This long discourse begins with chapter 13, extends through chapter 16, and is followed by chapter 17, which records the high-priestly prayer of our Lord which he uttered that night, shortly before his arrest.

1. I am the true vine. The nation of Israel was often, in the Old Testament, likened to a vine (Ps. 80:8-16; Isa. 5:1-7; Jer. 2:21; Ezek. 19: 10-14). Of course the vine here referred to is the grape vine, which was so extensively cultivated in Palestine. This is the seventh and last of the famous declarations of Christ occurring in the Gospel of John, and only in the Gospel of John, beginning with the two significant words "I am." When Christ speaks of himself as the true vine, he assigns to himself a place no other person in the universe ever had before, or ever can have again. There are not many vines, but one. In that vine, life flows, and apart from that vine there is no true life.

If We Are To Bear Fruit

The husbandman expresses a relationship of possession and care on the one side, and of dependence and submission on the other.

2. Every branch in me that beareth not fruit, he taketh it away.

As the fruitless branch has no living connection with the vine, no more can the fruitless, professing Christian with Christ. How, and when the husbandman takes the fruitless branch away is left unmentioned; there is not one definite way or time, the process may be gradual. And every branch that beareth fruit, he cleanseth it, that it may bear more fruit.

3. Already ye are clean because of the word which I have spoken unto you. Everything which had been conveyed in his word had been an agent of purity, and had tended to make them clean. His revelations cleansed their minds like a sweet, fresh mountain stream flowing into a stagnant pool. And when the mind is cleansed, the heart begins to share the cleansing.

4. Abide in me, and I in you. As the branch cannot bear fruit of itself, except it abide in the vine; so neither can ye, except ye abide in me. 5. I am the vine, ye are the branches: He that abideth in me, and I in him, the same beareth much fruit: for apart from me ye can do nothing. That peerless expositor, Dr. Alexander Maclaren, has said that, by Christ abiding in us and his words abiding in us, "something a great deal more than a mere acceptance of Christ is meant. It means the whole of the conscious nature of Christ being saturated with Christ's words, his desires, his understanding, his affections, his will, all being steeped in the great truths which the Master spoke."

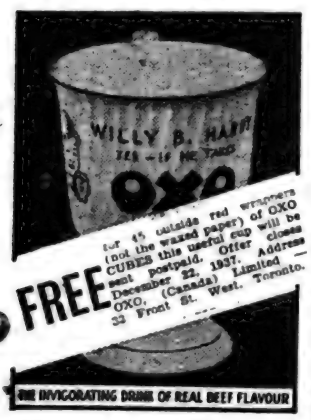
We can do many things without abiding in Christ—we can go to church, we can contribute heavily to Christian causes, we can offer prayer, and be good students of the Scriptures. But there is one thing we cannot do, unless our life and service spring from our union with the Lord Jesus, and that is, we cannot bear fruit.

6. If a man abide not in me, he is cast forth as a branch, and is withered; and they gather them, and cast them into the fire, and they are burned.

Abiding in Christ

7. If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ask whatsoever ye will, and it shall be done unto you. 8. Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit; and so shall ye be my disciples. If we are to live a true prayer life with the love, and the power, and the experience of prayer marking it, there must be no question about the abiding, and, if we abide, there need be no question about the liberty of asking what we will and the certainty of its being done. God is glorified among men when those who are Christians are seen to bear fruit, to live such a life, that the

9. Even as the Father hath loved me, I also have loved you: abide ye world cannot help but think of God and give him the glory.
in my love. 10. If ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in my love; even as I have kept my Father's commandments, and abide in his love. Here are two fundamental facts, which nothing can ever change, clearly announced by our Lord: first, that God loves Christ, and, secondly, that Christ loves us. What our Lord is urging upon his followers is that they should realize in their own lives these mighty truths and abide in the love which Christ has for them.



11. These things have I spoken unto you, that my joy may be in you, and that your joy may be made full. It is very, very significant that the Lord Jesus, with a single exception, never speaks of his own joy until the darkest night of his life, the night of his betrayal. The Lord Jesus had a joy that night which no one could take away from him because of at least four things: his knowledge of God's over-ruling and guidance in everything that was happening to him; in his consciousness of the Father's love; in his realization that he was doing the work of God, the greatest work that anyone could ever do, laying down his life for men; and, finally, in the conviction that he was, in his death, going home to his Father from whom he had come. Now, though in a different degree, we have exactly the same springs of joy, and we have them because of the words which Jesus has given us: we know that all things work together for good, that our lives are divinely planned, that suffering has been foreseen by God, and will never destroy our souls; profoundly do we know that we are loved by the Father, and by the Son, and that nothing will ever separate us from that love; we too have a divinely bestowed purpose in our lives—namely, the bearing of fruit; finally, we know that when we depart from this life, we shall be at home with the Father.

12. This is my commandment, that ye love one another, even as I have loved you. 13. Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends.

Friendship's Privileges

V. Friendship with Christ and its Privileges, John 15: 14, 15. 14. Ye are my friends, if ye do the things which I command you. 15. No longer do I call you servants; for the servant knoweth not what his lord doeth: but I have called you friends. "The liberty to claim the friendship of Jesus, the power to enjoy it, the grace to prove it in all its blessings—all come to us as we do the things he commands us." For all things that I heard from my Father I have made known unto you. These twelve men were Christ's confidants. He opened his heart to them. He kept nothing back from them.

16. Ye did not choose me, but I chose you, and appointed you. "The stability of the connection of friendship between the Lord and his disciples is assured by the fact that its origin lies with the Lord and not with man. That whatsoever ye shall ask of the Father in my name, he may give you. "These are the closing words of the parable of the Vine. The whole mystery of the Vine and its branches leads up to the other mystery—that whatsoever we ask in His name the Father gives! Our faith in the teaching and the truth of the parable, in the truth and the life of the Vine, must prove itself by power in prayer. The life of abiding and obedience, of love and joy, of cleansing and fruit-bearing, will surely lead to the power of prevailing prayer."

Is This Your Birthday?

By A. R. WEIR

What the STARS foretell for those born on November 26, 27, 28, 29, and 30 and Dec. 1st and 2nd.

GENERAL—If the date of your birth is listed above, the sun was in the Sign Sagittarius when you were born. This makes you enthusiastic, hopeful and optimistic by nature. You should avoid carelessness. You love harmony, truth and justice and are greatly given to demonstration of your affection, having a nature that is remarkably expressive. It would be to your advantage to guard against unkind speech when you are aroused.

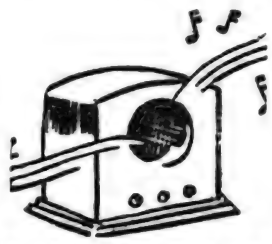
NOW FIND YOUR OWN BIRTH DATE

NOV. 26—Your lucky number is 4. The keynote of your planet is Prosperity which this year is indicated in your business and financial prospects though some annoyances go with it which are soon overcome. Social activities, however, are not so brightly defined though you are too optimistic naturally to allow them to influence you.

NOVEMBER 27.—Thursday is the most favorable day in the week for you. Some very important developments are shown in your business affairs bringing a considerable increase in your income. You should cultivate respect for authority and control your impetuosity.

NOVEMBER 28.—The 4th, 13th, 22nd and 31st are your lucky days. This year is important for business affairs. There should be a slow, steady improvement bringing more prosperity and success. Be cautious in your correspondence.

NOVEMBER 29.—There is a strong love of drama in your nature and you should be particularly clever in comedy or drama. The years 1937 and 1939 are good years for you. You will receive some favorable news and be very successful while on an important journey.



NOVEMBER 30.—This is a changeable period for you financially and difficulties with elderly people should be avoided, also disputes with workmates though a gain and an agreement is shown. Much happiness is denoted socially. Do not forget that your main success in life will come through personal application and hard work.

DECEMBER 1.—While you may have trouble in connection with property and public companies, yet these will be easily overcome and you will gain by a loan or legacy. There ma be a removal of residence. Give your love of harmony the upper hand when things are a bit muddled.

DECEMBER 2.—On the whole, the coming year will be brilliant and successful both financially and socially. Even relatives will benefit you. Control your carless tendencies even though you are of a happy-go-lucky temperament.

If your Birth Date is not listed above and you would like your personal horoscope, or if ou wish a complete horoscope for any date listed above, send 10c (coin preferred) to A. R. Weir, 73 Adelaide St. W., Toronto, Ont. Please print your name, address and birth date plainly.

RADIO HEADLINERS OF THE WEEK

By FRANK DENNIS

Hello Again! A couple of weeks ago we told you we were going to give you a little history on the life of a radio production man. Well, we are sorry for the delay, but today we will make amends. The subject of our little story is Maurice Rapkin, program director for CKCL, Toronto. "Rap" as he is known to his friends, is about five foot ten, fair complexion, has a ducky little moustache, and knows about as much of the production of a radio program as anyone in the Dominion. Playing the radio game for about ten years Rap started as an announcer and has worked himself into one of the most important positions in any radio station. A production man's life is no bed of roses. He is handed the script and from there, he is on his own. The selection of talent, the rehearsing, working in the sound effects, timing, and having the whole business click is enough to turn anybody's hair grey . . . and yet on top of this all, we've seen Rap tear up the entire script and sit down and write a brand new one that was many times better.

According to Rap, the toughest part of the job is the selection of talent—getting men that work harmoniously together and vocalists whose voices blend with the music and are particularly suited to the type of program. On countless occasions he has had to go to outside ranks to get a particular type of voice. Although a comparatively young man, Rap has started many youngsters on the way to the top of the ladder—Charles Fitzgerald, now appearing in English movies . . . Mr. and Mrs. Cully, playing vaudeville in England . . . The Three Bachelors also in England . . . The Three C's now known as The Dalton Brothers heard on Major Bowes CBS feature Capitol Family . . . Wishart Campbell . . . The Campbell Sisters who appeared with Horace Heidt and now returned to Toronto . . . and many others. Among the thousands of scripts he has written, are The Kruschen "Listener" Series, and the MacDonald Hot Spot Review. His present pride and joys are the Community Sing Songs held Sunday nights at 9.00 o'clock over CKCL and Eno Crime Clues. . . .

Roly's Gossip Program

Roly Young, Movie commentator of the Globe and Mail, Toronto, is heard every Monday, Wednesday and Friday on CRCT, 7.30 p.m. in an absolutely red hot gossip program. If any of Cinemaland's notables are around town, Tune in to Roly Young and you can bet even money that they will appear on the program . . .

Just had a chat with Roy Locksley, program director for CFRB and he slips us some very interesting dope. It seems that there are some very long series of programs on the air—for example Opportunity Lane at 4.30 p.m. daily has a record of some 131 shows. We understand that it goes off the air shortly. The six o'clock Musical Interlude will have a tremendous birthday party on the air sometime in February next, at which time some 250 odd programs have been presented. The Birthday Party will make one year of continuous broadcasting. The 45th week of Songs of Old Sweet Home, was heard Sunday at 5.30 p.m. Claire Wallace is well on in her second year of bringing gossip to female listeners at 6.15 p.m. nightly. The tops of all time is the Mining Broadcaster, each night at 7 o'clock. This feature has reached over the 1,450 mark, which means about four years of consistent broadcasting. Lloyd Moore's Farm Broadcast at 7.10 a.m. every morning takes its place in and among these top rankers . . . .

CFRB reports the return of Black Horse Tavern every Monday and Friday. This feature created an enormous listening audience during the last season, and due to the great demand for its return, the sponsors again present this feature. . . . The transcription people in Toronto report a new show on hand—"By Candle Light." We never thought much of transcriptions as a whole, but when we lent an ear to this particular feature—our opinion has turned completely topsy-turvy. "By Candle Light" brings to the audience a delightful quarter hour of unusual radio entertainment, featuring songs by Sylvia Jones (you probably know her by the grand job of singing she did with Jack Oakie's College Program and Hollywood Hotel), John Lake (of The Hit Parade Fame) and Ruby Lloyd, organist. You will probably be hearing this feature through your local station within the next week or so.

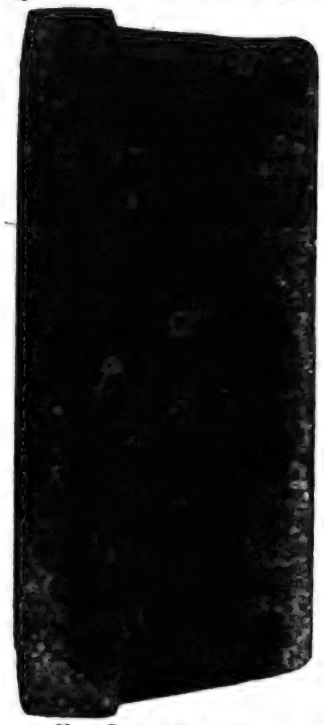
Deaf Drivers Safe

Deafness is not a handicap when it comes to driving a car. On the contrary, a deaf motorist is usually much more observant and quicker in reactions than a driver with normal hearing, according to tests and observations carrid out by the British Automobile Association.

It is now an offence to sound a horn at night, in England, and this has made drivers rely more on sight than on hearing. There are many stone-deaf drivers in the country, and observation seems to prove that their ability is just as high as that of the normal drivers.



Giant Bulb, Memorial to Edison

This is an electric light bulb, but it would not fit in your floor lamp. Its size—it is 14 feet high—makes it impossible for such purposes, and it is also a trifle heavy. It is made of 6,000 pounds of glass, and a steel skeleton of the same weight is included in the ensemble. The bulb is to surmount the $10,000 memorial to Thomas A. Edison at Menlo Park, N.J.

UNITED CHURCH NOTES

Mr. A. E. McBride, chairman of the M. and M. committee for the Toronto Conference of the United Church, gave an inspiring account of the work of the church at home and abroad, showing that God has work for consecrated hands. Touching stories of grit and results of service gave one to see that the days of heroism are with us today as richly as ever in the storied past.

This address was given at the United church, Streetsville, last Sunday morning and completes the presentation for the year of work of the church at home and abroad. Whilst much was unveiled of the activities of the church, the full story can never be told. We can but illustrate the work and human endeavour.

What has been said, however, ought to stimulate everyone, for it proves that the church is on the march today an dsecuring results of the utmost value.

C.G.I.T.

Regular meeting of the Canadian Girls in Training was held on Monday evening in the United church basement. Miss Edna Stephens' group was in charge of the program, with Miss Brenda Redick acting as chair-lady. The program consisted of the devotional exercises, business concerning the Conclave, and Misses Beth Evans and Joanne Jourdan gave readings, while Miss Mary Crawford contributed a piano solo.

The girls then divided into their respective groups, where they practiced bandaging a broken finger and wrist. After this games were enjoyed by all.

The Young People of the United church met on Monday night. Mr. Herb Hersom, the president, presided over the meeting. The program was under the literary department, with Miss Jean Temple as convener. The first part of the program was about the great author, Charles W. Gordon, whose pen-name was Ralph Connor. A contest on guessing the names of some of his books was very interesting. Then Jean took us to Scotland, where we studied about the life of Robert Burns. Slides of Scotland were shown. It was decided by the meeting to divide the society into two sides, with Miss Edna Stephens and Mr. Norman Potts as captains. So, come one, come all and join the mighty throng, because it is certain that either one of the captains would be delighted to have you on their side.

Snider's

The November meeting of the Wesley Church W.M.S. was held on Wednesday at the home of Mrs. A. R. Lunan, with an attendance of 25. Mrs. Cameron Pickering presided for the program, which she had arranged, and which centered around the theme of "Prayer". This was also the subject of the talk of the guest speaker, Miss Leila Featherstone, of Bethel Church Auxiliary. Mrs. H. S. Lovering sang a solo. The autumn thankoffering was received. Arrangements were made to send a bale to several friends in the west, the freight to be paid by subscriptions from individual members.

Several members of the community attended the Royal Winter Fair on Saturday.

Gordon Hackley, one of the exhibitors of cattle from Manitoba at the Royal, was a visitor on Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. B. Conover.

The electric light power was off for several hours on Sunday owing to necessary repairs. The subscribers did not experience very much inconvenience.

The two children of Mr. and Mrs. Watt were christened on Sunday morning at the service at St. Peter's Church, Erindale, by the Rev. G. F. Banks.

Miss Ruth Clifton was a guest for the week-end with Miss L. Conover, Dundas highway.

Miss Edith Lunau and Mrs. George Fish, Oakville, visited on Wednesday at the home of their brother, A. R. Lunau and Mrs. Lunau.

Mr. and Mrs. C. Pickering and family and Miss R. Clifton attended the fowl dinner given by the Victoria Square United Church recently.

JUVENILE NOTES

By Simpson

At a meeting of Streetsville Juvenile Hockey Team last Monday evening the following men were appointed to the club executive: President, H. Q. Burns; vice-pres., A. E. Buckle; sec.-treas., J. S. Rice; manager and coach, C R. Evans; captain, George Schnurr

A committee of six men were appointed to aid as much as they are able the foregoing officers. The following men form this committee: Wix Atkinson, Len Lee, Austin Graydon, Rev. T. D. Jones, Mr. F. G. Reid.

It is a well-known fact that in any organization the bulk of the work always falls on one or two members. It has been that way in the Streetsville Juvenile Club also. However, this season it is going to be different. The reward for your contradictory attitude will be a winning team. It would certainly be so if the men who were appointed to positions on the club executive would act in their appointed capacity with some degree of enthusiasm for the success of the team—not only a hockey team but a Streetsville team.

Last season the team was playing for experience—this season they are in there to win. The team's big problem last season was shortage of players. The T. H. League officials stated that this caused Streetsville to lose the league title. However, this obstacle is being removed by the addition of a few players from nearby centres. They are not strangers to Streetsville, as they were valuable assets to the lacrosse team last summer. You will know them when you see them—fighting for their adopted team.

Of course, everyone knows that a hockey team needs more than air on which to function. With this thought in mind contact any member of the club and see if there is not some other way in which you could help the team besides casting pessimistic prophecies on its success.

The Streetsville team hopes to play all their games at Ravina Rink in West Toronto. In order to accomplish this the Streetsville team has to sell season tickets to their fans. These will be on sale soon. It gives you access to all Streetsville games, in addition to that you see four other teams in action on the same evening. Buy a season ticket, attend all the games and in this way you will boost the team both financially and morally.

So get out your fur-lined shoe laces, fans, and prepare to stand by your representatives in the struggle for the juvenile honors in the Toronto Hockey League.

CARD OF THANKS

Mrs. J. P. Beattie and family wish to thank their many friends and neighbors, also Mrs. R.H.Greig, Mrs W. Atkinson, and the Choir of St Andrew's Church for their kindness and sympathy in their recent sad bereavement.

Streetsville Boys Now Sergeants

As a result of four weeks intensive training last June with the R.C.R. at Camp Niagara Cpl. Frank Hollings head and Cpl. Herbert Wilson of the Lorne Scots, were awarded certificates this week promoting them to rank of Sergeant. We believe they are two of the youngest boys in Canada to hold this rank, and this is something of which they may be proud.

Women's Institute

The regular meeting of Women's Institute was held in the Club room on Thursday, Nov. 18th. Miss Mabel Graydon presided. Mrs. J.A. Schnick gave a very interesting account of her trip to California and Alaska, which was greatly appreciated.. Mrs C. H. Falconer spoke on Health and Child Welfare. Mrs. E. F. Redick was the Hostess for the afternoon. Dainty refreshments were served at the close of the meeting.

The regular meeting of the A.Y.P A. was held on Monday evening in the Parish Hall. An encouraging attendance displayed an increasing interest in the Association, and made us feel that we are on our way to a good year. Considerable business was transacted, including election of officers for the ensuing year. The new Executive consists of: President A. Arch; Vice President, Mrs E. S. Ottley; Secretary, Mary Crozier; Treasurer, Edgar Steggall. Delegate to Local Council, Jack Wright.

After the business was concluded a social half hour was held, refresh ments being served to send the mem bers happily on their way home.

Coming

Under the auspices of three of the Streetsville Churches—St. Andrew's Presbyterian, Streetsville United and Trinity Church of England, a Grand Concert has been arranged for Wed, January 19th, to be held in St. Andrews Presbyterian Church. The program will be given by Mrs. Wilma Stevenson Dohler pianist, with the Toronto Symphony Orchestra, assisted by Miss Evaleen Kilby, contralto soloist at St. Paul's Church, Bloor St, Toronto. This promises to be the outstanding musical event of the season in Streets ville. Please keep the date open

The Village Council held a special meeting Monday night and gave the By-Law to raise $65,000 to build a combined school two readings. Then there was a halt. Owing to what happened at Peel County Council the Village Council thought it better not take the vote on the Bill in January. They called in some members of the school boards, who agreed to let the matter rest for the present. The Council and the High school Board will try to get together about school matters.

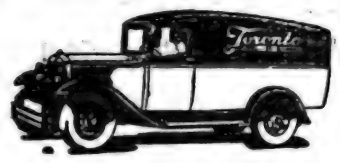
UNITED CHURCH NOTES

The Young People's League of the United Church, under the presidency of Mr. Herb Hersom, met Monday night and had an extensive program. First, a sing song. Then a devotional period. Then business. After this the Literary Convener, Miss Jean Temple, took charge and presented an interesting program, featuring Sir Walter Scott, and Mr Robt Burns, introducing a few points about the lives of the men and then showing pictures of scenes in Scotland associated with their work. It was an interesting evening

The Canadian Girls in Training group met Monday evening in the United Church and decided to hold their proposed conclave Wednesday Dec. 1st. The Groups are at work preparing for the event and it promises to be a lively program.

COMMUNITY CLUB



The Community Club met at the the home of Mrs. N. McCracken on Wed, Nov. 17. President in chair. Minutes were read and some letters of thanks for fruit received. It was decided to have a party in Streets ville Dec 10th. The roll call was answered by "What Qualities a Woman should have." Three papers were given by, Mrs Ball, on Famous Women of the Bible ; Mrs. W. Workman, Famous Women of History, and Mrs. Steen, Famous Women of To-Day. After this the names were drawn for Xmas. Gifts. The hostess then served a dainty lunch .... Next meeting to be held at Mrs. Coulson's Thursday, Dec 2nd.

Ninth Line

Mr. Wm. Nunan of Ninth Line Trafalgar, had a moving bee, on Tuesday, when he moved the house he bought from Mr. Stanley Hall of the Tenth Line, to his own farm to replace the one recently destroyed by fire. The neighbors turned out in large numbers as they always do in this district to help a man who needs assistance. They put the skids under that building, hitched on six tractors and had it placed in position near where the old one stood, in remark ably short time. The house is 20x20 of frame construction, and ready to move into.

THE DOG TAX AND LIVE STOCK PROTECTION ACT

This legislation protects live stock owners against the ravages of dogs

This Act requires:—

The taxing of dogs and the issuing of dog tags.

—where live stock (Cattle and Sheep) are injured, the owner shall notify the local Valuer or the Reeve of the Municipality within forty-eight hours after discovery of the damage.

—the local Valuer must make two reports, one for the Municipality, and one for the owner of the livestock.

—if either of these is not satisfied with the report, he may appeal to the Minister of Agriculture for another Valuer by depositing $25.00. This money is returned if the appeal is successful but is forfeited if the appeal is lost.

—the award made by the Valuer appointed by the Minister is final.

but . . . . . is it ?

With your car safely in the garage, seems as though you are prepared for anything that can happen. Don't even need a telephone any more.

BUT . . . ARE YOU CERTAIN?

Sickness, fire, accident, whatever it may be — and some of these things come occasionally to all of us — is your car quick enough, sure enough? Maybe the roads are blocked. . . . Maybe a tire is flat . . .

In emergency what you need most is a TELEPHONE. Don't wait for something to happen to find that out!

NEW LOW RATES
for farm telephone service are now in effect!

Inequal Inequality

Talking Out of Turn

Not so loud about Germany's colonies, Mr. Blackshirt Mussolini. When you geeva da Tyrol back to Austria there will be plenty of time to talk about what the Mistress of the Seas ought to do regarding Germany. —Hamilton Spectator.

Dionne Reciprocity

Papa Dionne bought the Christmas presents for the Quints in the United States. That is only reciprocity, the U.S.A. having contribute much to Papa in the wherewithal with which to buy presents.—St. Catharines Standard.

Kings And Dictators

Three kings recently dined together in Buckingham Palace, but it is not believed that the legs of the three dictators, Stalin, Hitler and Mussolini, will ever be assembled under one mahogany.—Brantford Expositor.

Doleful Thought

A constant theme of pulpit, press and platform in these days of world-wide strife and dissension is the threat and the possibility of the collapse of civilization. May it not be that the collapse has already arrived?—Halifax Herald.

The Money Rolls In

Beet and grain cheques are making life brighter for the man on the land in Southwestern Alberta. After all, wealth comes from production, though there are times in the ebb and flow of prices when production brings less than the grower is entitled to receive. —Lethbridge Herald.

A Silly Custom

An Essex (England) rector finds fault with confetti at weddings and in future will require a deposit of five shillings. If no confetti is thrown in the churchyard, the deposit will be returned. But if confetti is thrown, enough of the deposit will be used to pay for cleaning up the mess.

We are all for the rector in this matter. Confetti-throwing is a silly and annoying custom. It causes serious embarrassment in many cases. And it certainly litters up churches, homes, yards and railway stations. Though some light-hearted persons may complain, nothing would be lost if confetti were abolished.—Windsor Daily Star.

Most Dangerous Motorist

The most dangerous motorist is neither the drunk nor incompetent but the exhibitionist—the chap who has an exaggerated sense of his own importance when he gets behind the steering wheel, and insists on driving with that sense of his importance as his ruling motive.

This verdict is returned by Dr. C. H. Watson, of the American National Safety Council.

"Safety is a question of performance," says Dr. Watson. "Because people know what they should do, does not mean that they will do it."

One needs to drive only a little while to understand the truth of what Dr. Watson says. The man who weaves in and out of traffic lanes, passes other cars on curves or hills, cuts in suddenly, crashes lights and ignores stop signs, is displaying all the stigmata of the man who has set himself up on a pedestal. He also provides the set-up for most of our accidents.—Guelph Mercury.

British Oppose Gable For Role

LONDON—A plan to star Clark Gable in a million-dollar movie about the British air force which was to be made here with the co-operation of the Air Ministry, has aroused opposition in official circles.

The Air Ministry wants a British actor in the chief role, whereas the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Corp., which planned to start production early next year at the Denham Studios, claims that no suitable English star is available.

Strong disapproval of the idea of bringing Gable to England for the role now is being manifested in various quarters. Some members of parliament even were reported to be urging the Air Ministry to refuse all aid in making the film, unless a British actor were given the lead.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer argued that the only Englishman capable of "selling," the air movie in the United States would be Robert Donat, but he is engaged already in making a film version of "The Citadel."

Rome-Berlin Axis

What, then, is the truth about Mussolini's policy, in which the outpourings of his tied press have their part?

He is playing at power-politics. He believes that his situation is tactically very strong, and can be further exploited by a shrewd diplomacy. And so he is making use of every device of bluff, every resource which has nuisance value, every manoeuvre which a troubled European situation opens up to him, in order to extend his power and buttress his position.

He derives considerable assistance from the fact that his fellow-dictator, Hitler, is playing exactly the same game. We have, therefore, that remarkable joint bluff, the Rome-Berlin axis. Germany and Italy, divided ultimately by divergent interests, rig up a facade of unity. This is the Rome-Berlin axis. It is made of plaster, not of steel. —London Evening Standard.

Australia Looks at Canada

Sir Harry and Lady Chauvel came back by the Canadian route. Sir Harry saw nothing of the army and air force in Canada, the staff being mostly away on manoeuvres, which were too far afield for him to visit. He saw a great deal of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, of which his old friend, Major-General Sir James MacBrien, is commissioner. They are a very fine body of men, and their detachment at the Coronation shared the honor with our own men of the best reception of all the Dominion troops in the procession. They have a very attractive uniform, and were mounted on their own horses, which made a lot of difference. Sir Harry was impressed with the evidence of prosperity which met them everywhere in Canada except in the western prairies. He found Canadians much more concerned at the world situation than we are, and everywhere he went he was asked what the people of Australia thought about it. —Australasian (Melbourne).

Practises Tarzan, Scares Citizens

But He Turns Out to Be a Mild Fellow Wearing Tiger Skin — He Wants to Go Into Movies

Blood-chilling cries which frightened residents on several occasions, now echo no more through Brookside Park, Cleveland, since "Tarzan" fell into the hands of bluecoats.

"Tarzan" had been seen swinging about the trees dressed in a tiger-skin breech-clout and shouting wildly.

But he turned out to be a short, mild mannered, blue-eyed 37-year-old man with a 44-inch hirsute barrel chest and movie ambitions.

Excuses Himself

Police waylaid him as he walked home from work at a bakery. He was proud to display his complete change of Tarzan costume — one a real tiger skin, the other of striped velvet.

"I was practising Tarzan," the barrel-chested one told the policemen. "I am very sorry when I scare people. When I am in the woods practising and I happen to run into anybody I just run out and excuse myself for scaring them."

After watching "Tarzan" flex his muscles and throw out his chest for a time, the police decided that he was not a menace — just an eccentric practising for the movies.

SWITZERLAND IDEAL NATION: GOOD EXAMPLE FOR CANADA

Declares M. Henri Bourassa, In Address to Montreal Junior Board of Trade—"It Is Time Now to Correct Our Errors of The Past."

"Canada cannot be an English country. It cannot be a French country. Neither can it be an adjunct of the United States. It must be a combination, a union of what is best in the traditions of all our ancestors, of what will be best for our children," Henri Bourassa told members of the Montreal Junior Board of Trade and several thousand other Canadians last week.

Modern Switzerland was taken by Mr. Bourassa as the ideal nation, the complexities of its structure far outranking those of Canada, says the Montreal Star. Canada has nine provinces; Switzerland has 23 cantons. Canada has two languages; Switzerland has four. Yet the loyalty of the Swiss is first to God, as should be the loyalty of any nation, and second to Switzerland, regardless of the national ancestry of the individual.

Rebirth Of Moral Power Needed

"The nation that is Switzerland has been my ideal for 40 years, my ideal for Canada," Mr. Bourassa declared, "and if there are enough of you young men with a true Christian sense of brotherhood, then that dream can become a reality."

"The greatest crime of our modern times is the abdication of mental and spiritual power to the power of finance," Mr. Bourassa said, "and until there is a rebirth of moral power there can be no social reconstruction. Instead of the state being the servant of capital, as is the case today, capital should be the servant of the state."

Mistakes Canada Has Made

"Canada as a nation, through its leaders, committed many errors in the past. The depopulation of the rural areas is one example. But a country can repair its errors and look to the future. Individuals and families must live within their means, that, so living, they may be able to contribute to the welfare of their state.

"There is today a great cleavage between Canada's East and Canada's West. The nationalist policy which was in force immediately following Confederation was too ambitious for a young nation. The over-industrialization of Eastern Canada did much to broaden the cleavage between East and West.

Depopulation Of Rural Areas

"Just when things were going to correct themselves a little, in the natural course of events, came the War. In that war Canada lost many thousands of the youth she needed to develop her lands, to say nothing of the economic and social problems which were created. The war aided the depopulation of the rural areas by the offering of ridiculous wages in the urban centres.

Must Have National Unity

"After the war, we were even crazier with our craze for production and growing, with the result that when Europe ceased to buy our grain and our industrial products, the bottom fell out of everything. The western provinces are today practically bankrupt, and things are bad elsewhere.

"But Canada can grow, as I have told you. There must be, however, a growth of national unity. There must be a closer understanding between French and English. There must be an acknowledgement of the fatherhood of Almighty God. There must first be loyalty to God, and secondly loyalty to Canada, not to any part of it, but to Canada," Mr. Bourassa concluded.

"No civilization can stand up against the social resentment and class conflict which come from a silly maldistribution of wealth, labor and leisure."—George Bernard Shaw.

"America is much more susceptible to the financial effects of a war scare, and indeed more prone to the scare itself."—Sir Josiah Stamp.

Australia Buying Canadian Paper

Contract Made For 200,000 Tons Over Period of Seven Years; Will Help Stabilize Industry.

A stabilizing effect on the newsprint export market was expected this week from a huge deal that guarantees Canada about 75 per cent. of the newsprint purchases of Australia and New Zealand for the seven years beginning Jan. 1, 1939.

Canadian paper company officials said the newly-negotiated contract, giving seven of this country's paper companies the major slice of the 200,000 tons a year Antiodean market, could be depended upon not only to steady the market for this country alone but also to have the same effect on overseas newsprint, trade in general.

Newspapermen's Contract

A group of Australasian publishers have contracted for the Canadian paper. William Dunstan, general manager of the Melbourne Herald and the Weekly Times, who conducted the negotiations on their behalf, said their price for the seven-year stretch would be based on the price of Canadian newsprint in New York.

The Canadian paper group, Dunstan said, would have access to between 75 and 80 per cent. of the total market up to 1942. After that, its tonnage would be reduced by whatever amount was turned out by a paper mill planned for Tasmania, expected to begin production that year.

Up to now, there has been no agreement of the kind with the Antiodean publishers. They have bought their newsprint from Canadian and English mills in varying quantities and at varying prices.

Wed in Mourning

LONDON.—His bride of a few hours in tears and wearing mourning, Grand Duke Ludwig of Hesse started for Ostend this week-end on a sad honeymoon—to claim the bodies of his entire immediate family, who perished in a flaming airplane there.

The Grand Duke and his bride, Miss Margaret Campbell Geddes, daughter of Sir Auckland Geddes, were married at St. Peter's Church in Eaton Square. It was a strange wedding. Rejoicing was replaced by sorrow and the wedding gowns with sombre black.

Canada's Death Rate

OTTAWA.—Canada's 1936 death roll was 106,617, according to preliminary figures published in the annual report of the National Health Department. This represented a ration of 9.7 per thousand of population.

The highest rate was in Prince Edward Island, 11.1, and the lowest in Saskatchewan, 6.7.

The Quints' Education

NEW YORK.—When the Dionne quintuplets reach school-age, possibly in a year and a half, when they will be five, they will learn their A. B.C.'s in a classroom built with the money their fame brought them.

Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe said here that their education would be interfered with if they went to a regular school like other children. He told a press conference that because the five little sisters of Callander, Ont, "are in the same class as princesses, fated to live in the spotlight all their lives," they would have to be educated by private tutors.

Labor "Ginger" Party

LONDON.—The Labor Party this week announced its new front bench to put more "ginger" in its attacks on the Government. But it turned out to be much the same front bench that has faced the National Government across the House of Commons since the 1935 election, and even before.

A "ginger group" of twelve was elected to sit with Clement Attlee, Leader of the Opposition; Arthur Greenwood, Deputy Leader; the party Whips, and the Executive Committee.

Plans Another Election

DUBLIN.—Minister of Commerce Sean Lemass hinted this week that President Eamon de Valera of the Irish Free State was planning a general election to seek an absolute majority in the Dail Eireann.

Japs Make for Nanking

SHANGHAI.—Warships of Japan's third battle fleet this week-end blasted away Chinese obstructions in the channel of the Yangtse River above Shanghai opening the way for a naval bombardment of China's devastated central capital—Nanking.

The Chinese, fearing more Japanese aerial bombings in advance of the impeding naval attacks, hastened their partial evacuation of the capital and made last-minute changes in their plans to continue the war, despite the crushing defeats they have suffered around Shanghai and in the northern Provinces. They said seventy Japanese warships were in the lower Yangtse.

Airmail In Alaska

WASHINGTON — The United States postal officials said this week they would open bids Dec. 15 for airmail contracts providing weekly service between Juneau, Alaska, Whitehorse, Yukon, and Fairbanks, Alaska. Officials said the mail would be flown once a week between Juneau and Whitehorse and on a similar schedule between Whitehorse and Fairbanks.

Police Funds Increased

ROME.—Italy's political police funds for the current fiscal year were increased by approximately $400,000 under a decree published this week-end. The original appropriation was $950,000. The announcement followed trials in which sixty-one persons received prison sentences for Communist and anti-Fascist activity.

Winners at Royal

TORONTO—To United States and Manitoba went the top awards in the female classes as the judging of the largest showing of Belgian horses that has ever been forwarded at the Royal Winter Fair was completed.

Senior and grand champion mare was the 3-year-old Aida de Bierbeek, shown by Sugar Grove Farm, Aurora, Ill. Their yearling filly, Madelene Supreme, was the reserve junior champion, and they also had the winner of the class of sixteen yeld mares.

France's "Hooded Men"

PARIS.—Discovery of enough high explosives to blow up one-fourth of Paris and secret "fortresses" crammed with machine guns and hand grenades this week-end spurred a nation-wide round-up of France's "hooded men" allegedly organizing for a Rightist revolution.

Authorities charged that the hooded terrorists, known as "Les Cagoulards," received support from the Spanish insurgents and other Rightist regimes.

Killed in Crossing Crash

VINELAND, ONT. — Six persons, three young men and three girls, all between the ages of 16 and 20, met death here when their auto was struck by a C.N.R. freight train on a level crossing on Vineland Station Road, off No. 8 highway.

The girls and one man were killed instantly, it was believed. A second youth died a few minutes later, while lying in the wreckage, while the third died while being rushed to St. Catharines Hospital.

The three boys, all members of the Welland Sea Cadets, were identified several hours later, as James Fisher, 36 Merritt Street; Robert Colley, Edgar Street, and Steve Sutch, Slade Street, all of Welland.

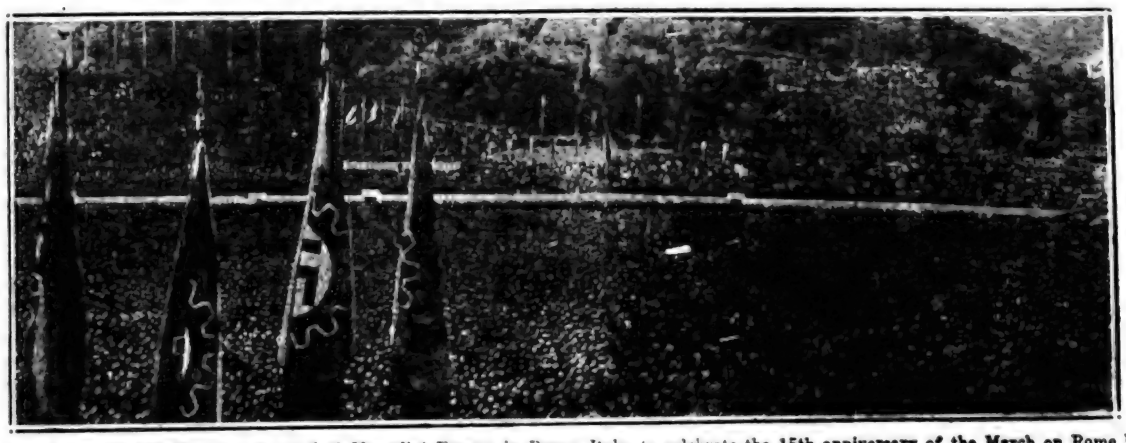
News Parade

Commentary on the Highlights of the Week's News . . . by Peter Randal

POOR SPORTS: The November season of pheasant shoots brings its annual crop of cruelty stories, tales of "sportsmen" who "fish" for birds by placing baited hooks on wire fences, or drive wounded birds into the lake forcing them to drown. In Essex County Court this week, William Ferguson, Pelee Island farmer, denounced the hunters as "maniacs" and "savages," claiming that two men had shot his chickens along with wild pheasants. Another story tells of two hunters who ignored a "No Trespassing" sign on a certain farmer's property, pursued a pheasant to the farmer's very back door, turned deaf ears to his pleas that they spare its life. The bird was a family pet, tame for many years. Poor sportsmanship, we call it. More game wardens are needed who will take an active interest in their job and put a stop to such vandalism.

THOSE ELECTION SPEECHES: The Canadian Broadcasting Commission is celebrating its first birthday with a conference on the many and complex problems which have come before the board during the past year. One of the most important questions to be discussed is the broadcasting of political speeches during election campaigns, those speeches that were such a headache to nine-tenths of the people who listened in this September and October. Many these are who actually enjoyed the broadcasts, who appear grateful for the political information they derived therefrom, but judging by the number of protests received by Major W. E. Gladstone Murray, the Commission's General Manager, it is pretty generally felt that the candidates and their backers were wasting both time and money in monopolizing the air waves.

VACANT SPOTS: Speaking in Winnipeg last week, Right Hon. R. B. Bennett declared that the British Dominions must build up their populations and fill in the vacant spots towards which the jealous eyes of other less fortunate countries are now turning. Question: How shall we fill these "vacant spots" in a hurry? Mr. Bennett's solution to the problem is Empire co-operation, by which he means, no doubt, encouragement of emigration from the more crowded areas of Britain's domains.



CONSPIRACY IN FRANCE: — France, one of Europe's few remaining democracies, has her own troubles. Since the fall of Blum's Popular Front government this summer, they have increased a hundred fold in view of the fact that the present administration headed by Premier Camille Chautemps is neither definitely of the Left nor of the Right, but is at the mercy of both factions. Every now and then Rightist agitators, believed to be backed by Fascist interests, are arrested when authorities come upon a cache of arms, a bomb-proof shelter. Rumors are now current that the Rightists are preparing a "putsch" against the government.

Too many issues are involved for Blum's Socialists to attempt at this time to regain the seat of government. A revolution such as that of 1789 would have to be faced, with international complications too drastic to contemplate.

CANADIAN CAPITAL: We have been hearing a great deal the past few years about the domination of Canadian industry by American capital. Refutation of that idea is made this week by the Secretary of the Canadian Bank of Commerce, D. H. Ward, who addressed a service club in Leicester, England. Says Mr. Ward: Of every $100 invested in Canadian industry, $70.60 is Canadian, $21.14 American and $7.92 from the United Kingdom. He declares that there are about 1,400 United States controlled or affiliated companies in Canada, but only 68 per cent. of them are manufacturing concerns. Of capital invested in these companies, only 38 per cent. is in manufacturing. The minority interest in these companies, coming to about 22 per cent., is chiefly Canadian, he says. Cheering news, this! We may now begin to hold up our heads.

PASSING THE BUCK: It's happened again! Deadlocked, the Nine-Power Conference meeting at Brussels to settle the question of the Sino-Jap conflict, had to give up trying to mediate in toto. In the first place, they were powerless because Japan refused to have anything to do with the Conference, would consider none of its proposals. When Ambassador Norman Davis of the United States made a rather non-committal speech inferring that action should be taken against Japan, it was immediately seized upon as the opening all had been waiting for. Foreign Minister Anthony Eden immediately let it be known that Britain would follow the American lead. The United States then accepted the appointment as Committee of One, backed by Britain and France, to take fitting steps to end the war in China. But before the United States can institute any steps, Congress will have to be agreeable. Do you think they will do anything? Frankly, we don't.

Eight Reasons Why Business is Better

Increased Farm Wealth Is One of Them — Executive Sees Bright Future

The sunshine is more than a match for the clouds on the business horizon, Russell T. Kelley, Hamilton, Ont., president of the Ontario Associated Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce, told the annual meeting at Toronto.

Mr. Kelley had many reasons for his business optimism. He listed eight chief ones. These were:

The empire trade treaties of 1932 and 1937 mean Canada will share an ever-increasing intra-empire trade.

The reciprocal trade agreement with the United States will result in an increasing volume of business as that nation becomes more urban.

From Mines and Farms

An estimated increase of $60,000,000 in the income of Ontario farmers.

Wealth produced from Ontario's mines promises to set a record in 1937.

Paper prices are satisfactory. The agreed price of $50 a ton for newsprint for the first half of 1938 will help.

Lumber shipments are well ahead of 1936.

Dividends for the 10 months ending Oct. 31 totalled $219,600,000, an increase of $41,300,000 over 1936.

A substantial increase in tourist traffic in 1937, likely to result in a $300,000,000 income, the second best on record.

Machines Will Fly At Higher Altitudes

Future Air Liners May Cruise At 20,000 to 25,000 Feet

High altitude flying in sealed, supercharged cabins, with speeds approaching 250 miles an hour, probably will be offered the traveler on American air transport lines in another 18 months.

A survey of the research work accomplished to date indicated that the air lines are satisfied with both motor performance and cabin experiments, the latter involving the use of equipment to maintain air pressure similar to that only a few thousand feet above sea level.

250 Miles An Hour

Air liners will cruise at 20,000 to 25,000 feet. Operating speeds will range from 235 to 250 miles an hour, as against the current 190 miles an hour.

Thirty-five passengers will be accommodated in seat planes and 20 in sleeper planes.

The coast-to-coast elapsed time bids fair to be cut from 17 hours to 14 hours or less westbound, and from 15 hours and 30 minutes to 12 hours eastward bound.

"Over-Weather" Air

Meantime, fresh assaults on the final problem of increased speed and increased safety are under way. The safety factor, in addition to improvements in airway aids and perfection of machine and instruments, involves the utilization of the rarer "over-weather" air at high altitudes.

D. W. Tomlinson, upper-air explorer for Transcontinental & Western Air, reports that weather conditions from 20,000 to 25,000 feet will be rarer and visibility unlimited by transport operation 95 per cent. of the time.

Flood Control Program Urged

Provincial Government Will Be Asked to Undertake It

The Provincial Government will be asked to name a board of qualified engineers and other competent persons to devise a long-range flood control, drought prevention and reforestation program for Southern and Western Ontario.

Ontario Associated Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce meeting at Toronto heard William Porter, London, Ont., farm paper editor, tell of the troubles that have followed the cutting of forests and the depletion of swamps and then adopted resolutions calling on the province to act.

If every available sapling were planted for the next 25 years the land that cannot now be used profitably for agriculture would not be filled, Mr. Porter said. The music of trees falling had become sweet to those who settled Ontario and now the penalty was being paid in drought and flood.

Along Canada's Mining Highway

The focus of mining interest in Eastern Canada, is the rapidly unfolding diamond drilling picture on the Barber Larder property, situated to the West of Kerr Addison and to the East of Omega, in and Larder Lake district of Ontario. Barber Larder is conceded in mining circles to give promise of a major mining operation.

R. S. Potter, President and big owner in Barber Larder, is one of the best known prospectors and developers of mining properties, having entered the North country thirty years ago. Mr. Potter's well warranted success with Barber Larder will assist other mining ventures. He has already announced the reopening of the Lacoma Gold Mining property, in the Province of Quebec.

Artists' Honeymoon Resumed

[illegible] New York, and his bride of six months ago, Rose Bampton, noted soprano, are shown above at the Windsor Station as they arrive at Montreal on a resumed honeymoon. For three months Miss Brampton had to fill concert and operatic engagements in Europe, while Mr. Pelletier had other professional engagements on this continent.

HAVE YOU HEARD

Think it was Ella Wheeler Wilcox who divided humanity into two classes —those who lift and those who lean . . . Good enough! . . . If sitdowners are included as leaners . . . Personally favor a division into assenters and dissenters . . . More simply, head nodders and head shakers . . . Or yes-men and no-men . . . Assenters generally have the best time . . . In politics they get all the gravy . . . In business they 'get by smoothly, avoiding arguments . . . Must have been one of these who coined that excellent slogan, "The customer is always right" . . . Millions assent to it, saving themselves much brow-wrinkling.

. . . But if there never had been any dissenters where do you think the world would be? . . . Pick out your favorite historical hero and you'll find him dissenting from something he thought wrong . . . Many are born dissenters, like this ink-worm, others get that way from having their illusions dissipated . . . Young folks, as a rule, assent, older ones dissent. . . Which should be enough to provide material for a literary debate.

Young Man—"Will you marry me?"
Heiress—"No, I'm afraid not."
Young Man—"Oh, come on, be a sport."

Worry is the price you have to pay for being an intelligent human being instead of being an animal.

A tourist visiting a country fair, stopped by a merry-go-round. Presently he noticed a little man seated on one of the wooden horses. What struck him as strange was that every time the merry-go-round stopped the little man made no move to get off the horse.

At length curiosity overcame the tourist, and when next the man on the horse stopped opposite him he said: "Pardon me, sir, but do you enjoy going round and round like this?"

The unhappy one grimaced. "Not a bit," he replied.

THE ROLL OF A NATION

Ogden's Fine Cut has the taste that appeals to Canada's roll-your-owners from coast to coast—the fragrant flavour that makes each puff a prideful pleasure. With a package of Ogden's—and "Chantecler" or "Vogue" papers—you'll quickly see why this mild, cool fine cut is the "roll" of the nation. 15c now buys a bigger package of Ogden's.

OGDEN'S FINE CUT

"Then why do you do it?" asked the tourist.

"The man who owns this contraption owes me five dollars," informed the little man, "and this is the only way I can get it."

There are a number of persons who never get next to themselves—and we don't blame them.

Saul—"I was so hungry that the moment I got in I began eating the tables."

Paul—"Do you expect us to believe that? What sort of tables?"

Saul—"Why, vege-tables, of course."

"People are pretty much the same the world over," asserts a writer. Aw, don't be so pessimistic.

Diner—"Waiter, look at the ends of this sausage."

Waiter—"What's wrong with them, sir?"

Diner—"They're very close together, aren't they?"

Our fathers and mothers called them "tramps" and "bums." Now we soft-soap them as "transients".

MAKE YOUR LIVER Produce its bile

Your liver has a big job to do. Make it do what it is supposed to. Its job is to produce 18 to 36 fluid ounces of bile every day and send it through the system. If it fails down on its job you suffer. AND HOW!

The most effective stimulant for the liver known to medical science is calomel, which in small doses is of the highest use in congestive conditions, especially those due to over-eating, over indulgence in alcohol, lack of exercise, etc. Tanol Tablets contain a certain proportion of calomel, blended with cascara and other medicines. They are mild and harmless. But your liver understands and takes the hint. For sale at all druggists. 50c. (B)

Is Your Paper Paid for?

The SPORTS BROADCAST

By Al Ryckman

How's that for coming through in the pinches? Captain Eyston streaks to a new speed mark, so the Ottawa Roughriders step out and win a playoff game. You can't keep the Bytowners down.

That was a marvellous fixture of something or other that the Riders and the Argos served up last Saturday. We do not know just what it was, but our operators inform us it was simply too, too wonderful for words.

In spots the field was a bit slippery and thus the outside wings could not get traction, and they were taking the corners as though they needed the aid of an umbrella. So the ball carrier who kept driving and failed to knife his way along, often ripped through for amazing gains.

Play swept from end to end in such speedy fashion, that for once a rugby game actually was swift enough to keep up with a radio announcer's comments.

Vimy Herman played the most useful game he has ever turned in around the capital city. His deadly placement kicking at the opportune moments and a convert thrown in for good measure certainly helped the Ottawa cause considerably.

Andy Tommy, running with his shoulders back like a cadet on parade, took enough hard jolts to kill the average citizen, but kept getting up without even changing the expression on his face (an Argo supporter told us this morning). Incidentally, Andy, notched the winners' lone touchdown.

Although the final score was 15-11 for the home squad, the old maestro is still betting the bank roll on Argonauts to take the series (Cooksville papers please copy).

NOTES AND SUCH

To put away the cables for this morning and get back to our own neighbourhood, we think the wrestling card this evening down at the Carlton Street Gardens should be all to the jolly old mustard. It all depends on Jack Dempsey and this Clark gent. The latter a Scotchman, who's full name is George Clark of the old Clark Clan, has shown himself to be a very stylish employee with a few good holds, but he will certainly be in for a very rousing evening when he tackles Steve Casey this P.M., since Mrs. Casey's little boy "Crusher" has quite a reputation and does not desire to lose said reputation. How good Dempsey may be as a wrestling referee is more than we can say. The Queensbury Club (who are staging the affair) claim this will be Toronto's top-notch wrestling bout of the season—i.e. with the one-time heavyweight champ as the third man in the ring. Anyhow as a fair guess, we pick Dempsey (the day's best bet) on our side.

Speaking of hockey, as we eventually will—remember when the American cities first came into the big time set-up? And Uncle Sam's sport cobblers (as Oscar calls them) went for the stories of how the Indian tribes played the settlers on the open air rinks in the Bad Lands of Ontario for the Allan Cup and all the rest of the wild and woolly stuff.

The same thing appears to be happening over 'ome (England and Scotland), judging by the press despatches from London. We want no tall tales of how the Wembley Lions ride to hounds in fall practice or week-end by shooting grouse at Lord Dillswater's Manor with shots from a hockey stick. Nor do we require any bits of gossip from California scribes concerning our methods of attending N.H.L. contests in dog-sleighs.

Therefore having exhausted our dollar ninety-eight words, we will now stickhandle over to Woolworth's lunch counter, sink a couple of doughnuts and learn the details of the Santa Claus Parade (that calls for a penalty shot!)

ADDRESS TO DORIC LODGE

Doric Lodge A.F. & A.M., No. 316, Weston, held their old folk's night on Thursday, 18th November, Mr. Wm. Perkins Bull, K.C., being the guest speaker.

In his address, Mr. Bull traced the long and chequered course of the Masonic Order from the time when Moses was the Grand Master of the Israelites of the Exodus, through the building of Solomon's Temple, Nebuchadnezzar, Cyrus, Charles Martell of France, Edward I of England, to the discovery of America and the foundation of the first Canadian lodges.

He recalled the names of many pioneer Masons of Niagara, Peel, and York, and of the lodges they founded, and reminded his hearers of the duties and privileges of the Order.

In presenting the vote of thanks to Mr. Bull the worshipful master characterized the meeting as one of the largest and most important in the history of the lodge.

District News

Mrs. C. G. Quennell visted with her daughter, Mrs. J. C. Shearer, Kemptville, last week.

Provincial Officer G. E. Broughton of Peterboro is now patrolling the Lake Shore Road through Peel and York Counties.

A new theatre was opened at Port Credit last Thursday evening.

Caledon and Chinguacousy Townships will elect their Councils for 1938 on the first Monday in December.

A son was born at Peel Memorial Hospital on Nov. 16th, to Mr. and Mrs. J. H. McCauley, Norval.

Rev. S. Lundie, Port Credit, pastor of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of his ordination into the ministry on Nov. 24th. He preached 25 years in Ireland and 25 in Canada.

D. G. McGregor, Brampton, was nearly asphyxiated by gas while attending to a furnace. Chief Herkes saved his life by pulling him out into the open after he had collapsed.

Nominations for Mayor and Council of Oakville will be held Friday evening, Nov. 26th, with elections Monday, Dec. 6th.

A stray deer was noticed north of Milton by local men Saturday night. As there is no open season for shooting deer in Halton County the men had to forego the pleasure of bagging any venison. They should go to Muskoka for that pleasure.

ENGAGEMENTS

Mr. and Mrs. John Donaldson of Caledon, Ontario, announce the engagement of their daughter, Christine Margaret, to Mr. John Donald Bull, son of Magistrate and Mrs. L. J. C. Bull of Norval, Ontario, the marriage to take place on Saturday, December 4th, in Inglewood United Church.

PORT CREDIT

Thomas B. (Tim) Stewart, aged 26, of Port Credit, suffered serious injuries when the car he was driving crashed into the rear of a heavy oil truck driven by Edward Stone, also of Port Credit. The accident occurred about a mile east of here on the Lake Shore Highway.

Stewart was returning from Toronto at the time, and it is thought that he fell asleep at the wheel. The terrific impact threw him half way through the windshield, inflicting severe injuries about the head and face. He also suffered two fractured knees.

Given first aid at the scene by Dr. G. H. Watson of Lakeview, the injured man was rushed to St. Joseph's Hospital, Toronto, where he was reported as being still unconscious and in a very serious condition.

Provincial Officer Stanley Batt is seeking the driver of a car which cut in and forced him to take to the ditch to avoid a collision, on the Lake Shore Highway here. The officer narrowly escaped injury. Following the fleeing car for more than two miles at more than ninety miles an hour, Officer Batt was finally outdistanced on the rougher stretch of highway west of the village.

Eden W.A.

A successful crokinole social was held last Friday evening at the home of Mr. A. G. and Mr. E. Waite, Eden. The party, numbering around 50, had the run of the home and made merry.

The competition was keen and a change was made in the method of finding winning players. The players were asked to keep a record of every game and of the winning score. The person with the highest score was the winner.

The ladies' prize went to a gentleman playing as a lady, Mr. Elmer Waite. The men's prize went to Mr. Wilmer Mason.

Another competition was the guessing of the seeds in the pumpkin. The prize went to Mrs. Cecil Dowling, who was within nine of the correct figure. A dainty lunch was served and everyone felt that the evening had been most enjoyable.

Many Common Words Are Records of Past Events

Many words in common use are records of events or personalities of the past. In some cases, states a writer in London Tit-Bits Magazine, the meaning has not changed since it was first introduced, in others the passage of years has altered its form altogether.

When we light a "bonfire," we give no thought to St. John, in whose honor in the Fifteenth century fires made from clean bones (bones-fires) were lit.

The "Jerusalem" artichoke has nothing to do with Palestine; its proper name is the girasole (sunflower) artichoke. Carelessness and popular appeal has given it its more romantic name, and even soup made from artichokes is known as Palestine soup.

"Rotten Row," in Hyde park, London, was originally known as the Route du Roi, being the Plantagenet kings' road from Westminster to the royal forests. "Pall Mall" received its name because a game in which a palle, or iron ball, was struck through an iron ring with a mall or mallet, was played there.

We use the phrase "to the bitter end" as though referring to the harsh dregs of wine or medicine. Originally it was a nautical expression meaning the end of a ship's cable, that part of it which is abaft the bitts—two pieces of timber to which the cable was attached when the ship rode at anchor.

Pair of Dog Tongs Held as Welsh Church Relic

The church at Clynnog Fawr, a few miles down the coast from Carnarvon, Wales, preserves as one of its curiosities a pair of dog tongs, used in the old days for seizing fighting dogs and throwing them out of church.

In the past it was a common thing for Welsh sheep dogs to follow their masters to church and curl up in the pew, sleeping through the service. Occasionally, as the Welsh used to say, "the devil would enter into them" and there would be a fight, until the dog tongs, shaped like coal tongs with large teeth, were taken down from the wall and used to eject the fighting animals.

One Welsh parson, it is said, used to take his dog Tango to church, where it would sleep in front of the lectern while its master conducted the worship. One day the dog spied an enemy, a farmer's dog, in the congregation and a terrific fight began.

The dog tongs were useless and the fight became so exciting that the church service was suspended and everyone gathered round to watch. Above the noise of the battle, visitors to this region about Mount Snowden are always told, the parson's voice could be heard shouting, "Three to one on Tango!"

Formerly a pair of dog tongs could be found in most of the churches in this section. They are now quite rare and those at Clynnog Fawr are one of the curiosities to see in Wales.

Oldest Woman's Club in U. S.

The Ladies' Education Society of Jacksonville, Ill., is the oldest woman's club in the United States, says the Chicago Tribune. The Jacksonville society was organized in 1833. The second oldest society was the Maternal association, organized in 1838, consisting of all the white women of the Northwest. The club came to a tragic end with the killing by the Indians of its secretary, Mrs. Narcissie Whitman. The third club was the Alpha Delphian of Alfred, N. Y., started in 1846. The fourth is the Ladies Physiological Society of Boston, organized in 1848. So strong was the opposition to any woman's club in Boston that no woman was brave enough to preside, and for the first two years Professor Bronson of Harvard occupied the chair at its meetings.

Isle of St. Michael

The Island of St. Michael, termed "Lake of Seven Cities," comprises 297 square miles and is 830 miles west of Portugal. Once famous as the first stopping place for Spanish galleons on their return from the West Indies, the harbor city of Ponta Delgada, of nearly 250,000 population, presents a mixture of descendants from Phoenician and Carthaginian traders to an aristocracy descendant from Portuguese navigators.

Operated by Fingers

Puppets are operated by the fingers (marionettes by strings) and sometimes require large staffs of operators for there can be as many as 40 "actors." The operator sits underneath the stage and holds the puppets above his head. The stage sets are often as elaborate and complicated as in a theater and the operator has to be careful to judge his distances correctly. It is also no easy matter to keep the voices and the action consistent.

Selfishness Destroys Happiness

When we avoid our neighbor who is suffering, when we wrap ourselves in the cold blanket of selfishness, we forget the possibilities of real happiness, for true happiness comes only through sympathy and by comparison. The sufferings of others softens our hearts and makes us sensible to our own blessings.

The Open Column

A new argument has been advanced by members of the county council concerning the conduct of that august body. For some years past, the Open Column has been attempting to draw attention to the promise that the county council is a somewhat expensive luxury, in view of the small amount of work accomplished by the council at a cost of about $100 per day.

Now, several of the councillors have suggested that the current rate of pay, $4.50 per day for each councillor, is not enough. They consider that such remuneration is beneath their dignity. Apparently, however, there has been no consideration of the council's dignity in the holding of four-day sessions to put through work that might well have been completed in two. But the argument, it would seem, is that, if the councils were given a more honorable honorarium, they might dash off their work in less time, and feel that they had been proprly reimbursed.

It has also been suggested that Peel might adopt Halton's method of conducting county business, meeting for one day each month. There would be little difference in the cost to the tax-payer, although, if the day-a-month system was adopted, it would shorten the days for which the council is paid from 16 to 12, always assuming that business was transacted in the one day per month on which the council met.

Another fallacy which had best soon be wiped from the council's methods is the inevitable protest, when a matter is brought up at the final session of the year, that the council "is in its dying minutes", and, consequently, nothing can be done but let the council die in peace. The council, presumably, cannot dictate to the council of the following year. Which is arrant nonsense, for every major expenditure of each council limits the spending powers of the succeeding councils until debentures have been paid off, and each act of each council serves, in some degree, to set a precedent for the direction of later councils. Some of them extremely silly precedents.

25 YEARS AGO

(From The Review, Dec. 5, 1912)

Port Credit people are discussing the advisability of being incorporated as a village. In other words, they have growing pains.

A daughter was born on November 23 to Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Atkinson.

T. B. Greer of Toronto and Mildred Irene Kane of Port Credit were married on November 25.

William L. McKenzie died in Streetsville on November 24. He leaves one son and three daughters.

Henry J. Twigg, Toronto, and Mabel Maude Maye were married on November 23, at the Methodist Church parsonage by Rev. T. W. Leggott.

A son was born on December 2 to Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Steen, town line, Toronto township.

Rev. Mr. Fish of Owen Sound gave an address in the Oddfellows' Hall Thursday night, and helped to initiate candidates into the Orange Lodge on Friday night.

A motion to grant a licence for a poolroom in Streetsville was made at the regular meeting of Council Monday evening. It failed to carry by a vote of three to two.

Early History Halton County

By SANDY

Men Made Money Out of Hop Crops

A large section of Ontario was settled about 1818,'19, and '20. Since that time an almost unbelievable amount of wealth has been extracted from the soil. There has also been a great diversity of crops that have proved money-makers during these years. John Moose, just above Stewartown, in Esquesing township, began growing hops. The unusually large profits attracted the attention of the farmers, and soon the hop fields covered the whole district surrounding the village of Georgetown.

Hops were planted in hills, 750 to an acre. They are perennial herbs, having to be planted one year, the first crop being available the next, a field yielding good crops for nine or ten years, after being established.

The crop was manured each year, and carefully plowed, cultivated and hoed, the crop depending very much on the amount of cultivating given. Early in the spring two hop poles were erected at each hill, 1,500 to the acre These poles were of cedar, about 15 to 20 ft. long. Holes in the ground for the insertion of these poles were made with crowbars. The holes were about 1½ feet deep, and it was very heavy work handling the crowbar. The poles cost about thirty dollars per thousand. The early autumn days were times of great activity in the hop fields. The poles were taken down and armies of women, girls and children, would be engaged in hop-picking. Boxes containing six bushels, were used for picking. At one time the pickers would fill one of these boxes for 20 cents, the price gradually going up to 50 cts. per box. As times became better, pickers became hard to get, and Indians were secured. One year, Smith Bessy had two gangs of Indians, these belonging to hostile tribes with the result that several bitter fights ensued. A very important part of the business was drying the hops before being boiled. This had to be done at once, or they would heat, become discolored and be spoiled. Hop kilns were erected on every farm. These were generally about 22 ft. square and 24 ft. high, this being surmounted by a conical roof. Some large growers would have two kilns 22x44 feet each, divided into two compartments and a pressing-room between. About fourteen feet above the floor there was a ceiling of slats. Over the slats sacking would be stretched. On this hops, fresh-picked would be spread about two feet deep. The kilns would be boarded generally, with half-inch, by seven inch, siding outside, and lathed and plastered inside. Large box stoves, two in each compartment, capable of burning four-foot cordwood with rows of pipes in the tightly-plastered kilns, would make the heat intense, about seven or eight hours being sufficient to dry a layer of hops. Brimstone was put on the top of the stoves, this giving a good color to the hops.

Now down the outside stairway the hops were carried down to the pressing house. Hop sacking was put in the press. Heavy lever pressure was used so that each bale would weigh at least two hundred pounds. An average crop would be about six hundred pounds an acre. Old-timers speak of eight hundred pounds an acre, and one year is spoken of when a thousand pound an acre was secured, but this was very unusual. One year hops sold for a dollar a pound, some years seventy cents per pound, but about thirty cents per pound was the average price. One year Smith Bessy had twenty two acres yielding six tons, for which he received $3,600. But the usual thing happened, immense acres were devoted to hops, brewers began using cheaper substitutes, yeast manufacturers did the same, and the price dropped to six cents per pound, very much below the cost of production. One by one the growers dropped out, the poles were piled up, and the kilns were pulled down. There has been sunshine and shadow in farm operations, some of prosperity, some of hard times. But the hop growing of over a century ago was for a time the peak of agricultural prosperity.

Lost a Home Found Another

Neighbors Show Brotherly Love for Nunan Family

Not what neighbors say, but what neighbors do,
Is our subject this week for the Streetsville Review,
When disasters come to us, with losses and cares,
The neighbors jump in with all kinds of repairs.

In that disastrous fire Nunan's spirit was broke,
When their house and contents went up in smoke,
For the only things they were able to save,
Was the fruit in the cellar that was rescued by Dave.

The old Ninth Line is a great neighborhood,
When disasters come they all act so good,
In times of trouble the only thing that we need
Is some one who is able and willing to lead.

Nunans looked so disconsolate, they didn't know,
What they were going to do, or where they could go,
Then Dave Dowling, in a welcome voice said,
Come with us; until other arrangements are made.

No one seems to bother with that troublesome word "If",
But just leave all the arrangement to Cliff,
Then George and Cliff started out the next day,
To see what neighbors would do, not what they would say.

The reception they got, filled their hearts with delight,
The report was encouraging they sent out that night,
At May's the Community Club used all their power,
At quilting bee and a miscellaneous shower.

The committee and Nunans started looking around,
To see if a suitable house could be found,
When they came to a house owned by Stanley Hall,
The pretty little house just suited them all.

Then Charlie McCarron gathered the neighbors next day,
And put the house on skids, like an old fashioned sleigh,
Through the fields with the house, they got along fine,
To Herb Morris' gate, beside the highway, the old 9th line.

That night we found out what was holding them back,
It was the telegraph wires to low, on the railroad track,
The neighbors got wondering, but no one seemed to know,
If the house was too high, or the wires were too low.

So they called the London officials to see what could be done,
Then experts were sent to the crossing at half-past one,
To raise the wires over the chimney, required courage and skill,
So Leo Sanford and Allen Workmen just filled the bill.

On the rest of the journey there was no delay,
Charlie McCarron walked backwards directing the way,
On the ninth line with six tractors, going all in a row,
It was a wonderful sight, like a great picture show.

There was Wilfred Thompson, Arthur McCarron, and Stan Hall,
Jim Hamilton, Fred McCarron, with Cliff May, leading all,
At half-past four the house was placed on the farm,
For all the leaders' arrangements had worked like a charm.

The next day the ladies house-cleaning operations began,
Painting, papering, scrubbing, was part of their plan,
Nunans send thanks to all helpers, these kind-hearted actors,
With extra thanks to the men who came with their tractors.

In the year 1937, this second day of November,
That fire, and the wind, we will always remember,
But on the 24th in a new house we found them,
With all modern luxuries and comforts around them.

SANDY.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hemmingway, of Toronto, celebrated their golden wedding last Sunday. They lived for some time at Port Credit.

"GERRY" NIGHT

Last Friday evening (November 26, 1937) saw one of the most interesting and colorful gatherings in the history of the village. Nearly two hundred former pupils of Mr. H. W. Gerhart packed the Oddfellows' Hall to express their appreciation of his many years of service to the local high school.

The program consisted of a banquet and speeches, followed by dancing with Billy Nelson's orchestra.

The banquet-hall was a riot of black and yellow streamers, the school colours. The tables carried the same colours with the added beauty of yellow chrysanthemums. Placed on the platform was a large picture of the guest himself under a stage-length banner proclaiming "GERRY" NIGHT. Brightly coloured school crests completed the decorations.

The chairman's duties were taken ably and humourously by H. E. "Ted" Cook, B.A., the village solicitor. A toast to the school proposed by Mrs. Thomas Keyes, Bolton, was responded to by Dr. George King, Milton. A roll-call was taken with each member rising to tell his name, place of residence, and year of entering the school. Mrs. Jas. C. Shearer, Kemptville, was given the prize for coming the longest distance, while Fletcher Thomas, B.S.A., St. Thomas; Blanche Hisey, B.A., Huntsville; Lorimer Watson, Mildand; George Longwell, Welland; and Sydney Cox, Oshawa, received honourable mention.

Ex-teachers of the school expressed their respects for their former colleague: Mr. C. P. McArthur, Brampton; Mr. and Mrs. Stirling Jeffries, Weston; Miss G. Bovaird, Toronto; Miss B. Cliff, Fort Erie. Telegrams were read from Mrs. George Morrisson, Kincadine, and Miss B. Jackson, Toronto. From among his pupils, several added their praises; Weylie Walker, B.Sc., Toronto; Fletcher Thomas, B.S.A., St. Thomas; Reg. C. Bruce, B.A., Elora; Alex. V. Longwell, Beamsville; Dr. Oliver Steen, Streetsville.

Mrs. George King, Milton; Mrs. Frank Noble, Streetsville; and Gladys Stewart, Cooksville; read a few of the letters received from distant points. Letters were on hand from every district in the province as well as from; Wilfrid Dunton, B.Sc., Lille, France; Dr. Joseph Thomas, M.A., M.B., Port Alberni, B.C.; Jean McCaugherty, R.N., New York City; Grant Darker, M.A., Ph.D., Cambridge, Mass.; Evelyn McDonald, R.N., Buffalo; Dr. Samuel Ross, Detroit; Howard Bird, Melville, Sask.; George Wilson, B.A., Montreal; John Brannen, B.Sc., Flin Flon, Man.

Mr. M. A. Sorsoleil, former Deputy-Minister of Welfare, gave an appropriate address on "Schools and School-Masters".

The feature of the evening followed when F. W. "Ted" McCuaig, of Islington, told briefly and simply of the many years Mr. Gerhart had given to the youth of the district as a teacher and friend. He assured him of his pupils' loyalty and admiration and asked him to accept as tokens of their appreciation a watch and an easy chair. The beautiful watch of solid gold was inscribed: H. W. GERHART, from his pupils at Streetsville High School 1913-1937. November 26, 1937. Alexina Sinclair brought forward a basket of flowers for Mrs. Gerhart.

Apparently deeply moved, Mr. Gerhart expressed his gratitude for all that had been said and done for him during the evening. He told of many incidents which were recalled by the familiar faces before him. In closing, he said that the hands of the watch marking off the twenty-four hours of the day would always remind him of his twenty-four happy years in Streetsville.

JUVENILE NOTES

In last week's "Review", we mentioned the addition to the Streetsville team of a few players from near-by centres. In this issue we want to tell you about a player whom we think will keep the Streestville boys busy, in trying to keep up to him. His name is Kempshead and he hails from Georgetown. He was the star player in the Georgetown league, two seasons ago. Last season, he played Junior O.H.A. with the Georgetown team. However, he is still eligible to play Juvenile hockey and has decided to do so—for Streetsville.

From Cooksville, two players are going to try out for Streetsville—one is the husky "Jim" Walterhouse. He played lacrosse for Streetsville last summer and we can hardly wait to see the effect his extra weight will have on Streetsville's opponents.

The season tickets for the Streetsville games sell for $1 and will be on sale shortly.

Love Thy Neighbor

Sir Evelyn Wrench, founder of the English Speaking Union, pronounced a profound truth in Toronto when he declared: "After 25 years of travelling about the world, I have come to realize that the only way to save humanity is to put into effect the simple doctrine of the Founder of Christianity—love thy neighbor." — Stratford Beacon-Herald.

Advice to Parents

It is perhaps too much to expect the sons and daughters of today to find as much interest and entertainment in family tasks as members of earlier generations did. There are too many competing interests. But the girl who learns to cook and keep house and the boy who masters the intricacies of the family furnace or learns to shovel walks or mow lawns with speed and completeness have learned lessons which are as valuable as any on their school curriculum. Perhaps parents have overlooked the possibilities of such homework. Children do not have to be drudges but they might actually learn to like work. — London Free Press.

Attractive Highways

The old method of clearing out every vestige of natural growth and leaving a bare, ugly scar across the face of nature is giving way to new ideas of conserving highway beauty. It took a long time for the highway builders to come to this better point of view. In the past, considerations of natural beauty too often have been disregarded as unimportant and impractical. They are neither. Increased use of the automobile in leisure time and recreational activities, as well as for purely business purposes, makes it important that highways, while being made safe and durable, convenient and time-saving, should be attractive, restful and enjoyable. — Listowel Banner.

They Don't Vibrate

Women as a rule do not make good radio announcers and this is not due to any inherent lack of ability but rather to a physical characteristic. The average woman's voice lacks the vibrant tones of the male vocal organs. . . . There are exceptions, of course, and there are male radio announcers who have mistaken their metier, but broadly speaking this is a calling not particularly suitable for women. There are many women professional radio performers who are a great success, but it does not necessarily follow that most of them would make good radio announcers. — Toronto Telegram.

Success at Farming

The idea that "any fool can farm" —successfully—is in some minds, but it is a tragic myth. The man or woman who hopes to make a success of life in the country districts and on the land must have a greater diversity of knowledge than the person who makes a success of his or her affairs in urban communities. Indeed, the person who knows little or nothing about land activities is astonished to discover how resourceful even farm children are and the multitude of things they can do before they are well into their 'teens. Certainly, if we are to have an expansion of successful farming in this province, the old idea that "any fool can farm" must be driven from the minds of some in official circles.—Halifax Herald.

Suggests Eating Oysters To Attain World Peace

COLCHESTER, England.—A suggestion that world peace might be attained by eating oysters was made by Sir Holman Gregory, former recorder of London, at the local feast celebrating opening of the oyster season.

"Nowadays," he declared, "the world is bubbling and boiling, and there seems no chance of settling down. What a pity it is that we cannot cultivate enough oysters to give to our politicians throughout the world and get them in the state of mind that we are in at this moment."

THE EMPIRE

The Ones To Decide

The war in China, like all wars, is a terrible thing, and peace is the natural ambition. But it should be remembered that it is China and not the Brussels Conference who is fighting, united and determined, against aggression, and so long as the Japanese continue this aggression only China can say when she has had enough. It is not a boxing match in which diplomats have the right to throw a towel into the ring. If Japan refuses to offer reasonable terms, or if China refuses to accept those that are offered, a new situation will arise. In that case it will be the duty of the Conference not to conceal it. — Manchester Guardian.

Britain Broadcasts

In the present century a series of foreign agencies has come into being whose manipulation of news items, we regret to say, has shown a distinct anti-British bias. The same applies to the radio medium. The microphone has been prostituted to ulterior motives by other countries in scandalous fashion. The air is poisoned daily and nightly with mendacious messages and with what is worse—garbled versions and half-truths. The nationals of several countries read and hear only what dictators and government controllers desire them to receive and digest. The minds of these people are filled with distorted "intelligence" concerning Great Britain and the Empire. We would be slow to advocate that Britain in turn should use the radio as an agency for propaganda. The broadcasting of news, however, should achieve its own end.—Belfast Telegraph.

Sleeper's Brain Waves Studied

Four Stages of Going-to-Sleep Process Are Scientifically Recorded

We do not go to sleep at any particular moment. There is a wide variety of gradation between being asleep and being awake. Different parts of the brain go to sleep at different times and to different degrees, so that it is difficult to determine whether we are asleep or awake or to what extent at any given moment. These are the conclusions resulting from an investigation of the brain waves that we give off during the transition period.

The investigation has been carried on as a joint project at Havard University Medical School.

Spindle-Shaped Waves

Four stages of going-to-sleep processes were indicated by the brain waves. The first finds the body at rest, but awake; in the second there is an intermediate drowsy or floating state; the third is also an intermediate state, merging into sleep, and then comes real sleep. The disappearance of the large "alpha" waves is the first indication of the going-to-sleep process. In the intermediate state irregular waves appear, and the sleep state is characterized by sharp spindle-shaped waves with a frequency of about ten a second.

Suicide Succeeds At Fourth Attempt

An angler, while fishing from a small boat under a bridge over the Marne, France, was disturbed by a huge splash, and found that a man had fallen into the river from above. The angler promptly pulled him out and set him ashore.

A few minutes later there was another splash. The same man had fallen in again. Once more the angler rescued him. But when the man jumped in a third time, the angler angrily gave the fellow a piece of his mind.

"If you start scaring the fish again I shall give you a thick ear," he growled.

The would-be suicide then went off to a willow, a hundred yards away, and hanged himself. A passer-by notified the police, who hurried to the spot and then stormed at the angler for not having cut down the body as soon as he had noticed it.

"Oh, I'm sorry," he replied, "but I thought the man was hanging himself up to dry."

Estimated Cost of War Mounts From Day to Day

An Army Division in Combat Fires Away $333,000 In 24 Hours—Seen as Excellent Reason For Not Repeating World Conflict.

The cost of war has gone up, along with a lot of other things, since nations did their figuring in 1918.

If the World War cost an estimated $190,000,000,000—and with interruptions to trade, property destruction and the like, this figure has been added up to $340,000,000,000 — it is now apparent that any war of today on the same scale could boost these figures considerably.

New and improved weapons, more expensive construction and higher cost of materials are chiefly responsible. Soldiers' wages have not gone up much, but their wages are only a small factor in the whole complicated picture of modern warfare.

Bombs Cost $400—$800

Basically, there are certain war costs that can be judged fairly accurately in view of World War experience. Ammunition, as it is being consumed in China and Spain, for example, can be estimated to cost from $800 to $1,000 a ton, or roughly 50 cents a pound for all kinds of ammunition, from small arms to shrapnel and air bombs.

An army of six divisions, or 150,000 men, with 300 field guns, might well do away with 2,000 tons of artillery ammunition. 1,000 tons of small arms ammunition and 100 tons of air bombs in the first day of fighting in a major effort.

Which boils down to the fact that six divisions, in a day of really heavy action, can shoot away $2,000,000 worth of ammunition. Every round fired from a 75 mm. gun costs slightly under $10. Shrapnel costs about $14 a pound. An airplane that lets go of two 1,000-pound bombs sets off more than $800 worth of destructive power.

$12,500 A Torpedo

On the naval side of warfare there are such costs to consider as $12,500 for a modern torpedo, while a 14-inch shell complete with detonating charge costs about $120.

What it costs to carry out an air bombing expedition these days needs a lot of fancy figuring to ascertain. It can be assumed, however, that a bombardment group of sixty bombers would release up to 100 tons of explosive during an important day's fighting, at $800 a ton. This is without consideration for cost of airplanes shot down.

Additional to all these costs would be all the varied costs of weapons, transportation, food, communication and the like, plus a host of intangible factors which might increase the costs to the point of doubling them and more.

At $60,000,000 a Battleship

Decidedly expensive at the present time is the cost of preparing for war. Modern battleships, fully equipped, cost $60,000,000, where they once cost $30,000,000. The United States Army's new "flying fortress" bombers cost $250,000 each. Britain's rearmament program of $7,500,000,000 for five years is about as much as Britain spent during four years of the World War.

Inestimable Property Destruction

Property destruction in modern warfare is a question which experts say has had only a partial answer in bombardments in Spain and China. So vast are its possibilities that major powers of the world are likely to think long and seriously before they go to war.

Sporting Comment

By KEN EDWARDS

This week as promised, we continue with the "official boxing rules":

1. A contestant shall be deemed "down" when:
(a) Any part of his body other than his feet is on the ring floor;
(b) He is hanging helplessly over the ropes;
(c) Rising from "down" position.

• • • •

NOTE: A boxer hanging over the ropes is not officially "down" until so pronounced by the referee, who can count the boxer out either on the ropes or on the floor.

• • • •

No match shall be of more than 10 rounds in length without special permission of the Commission and such rounds shall be of not more than three minutes duration, with one minute intermission between rounds.

• • • •

In the event of a foul, intentional or otherwise, which prevents a man from continuing, the Commission may, in its discretion, impound the entire purse of the perpetrator of said foul, or any part of said purse for disposal.

• • • •

And so, my friends till next week,
—Good-bye
—Good luck.

To Aid Paralysis Recovery

TORONTO. — Appointment of two physiotherapists, to assist in the ultimate recovery of infantile paralysis victims now suffering from some degree of paralyis, was recommended this week by the Board of Control.

News In Review

May Surrender Nanking

The belief grew this week-end that the Chinese might relinquish Nanking to Japan with only face-saving rearguard action in order to spare the Capital from destructive bombardment. Many Chinese Government officials were understood to favor such a course which would protect hundreds of millions of dollars invested in magnificent new buildings and expensive highways.

Meanwhile, five of the largest Chinese morning newspapers, with a combined circulation of 400,000 suspended publication in Shanghai because of the pressure of Japanese demanding full authority in the city and suppression of all anti-Japanism.

Hits At Stock Exchange

WASHINGTON.—The Roosevelt Administration cracked down on Wall Street this week-end, serving an ultimatum that the stock exchange must re-organize or be regulated much more drastically.

"Adequate safeguards" must be thrown about this and other exchanges, either by the marts themselves or the Securities Commission, said William O. Douglas, Chairman of the Commission.

Terrorist Hanged

JERUSALEM. — The newly-created military tribunal at Haifa passed sentence of death by hanging on one of Palestine's most dangerous Arab terrorists this week-end as large contingents of troops and police went into action following a new series of disturbances.

Says Recession Temporary

DETROIT.—Henry Ford, in an interview here, said that the present business recession is "temporary and artificial."

"No one," he said, "need look at next year with any uncertainty. The present slow-down is not a set-back; it's the pause before another climb. Two things helped to bring it on just now and one of them was the uncertainty of business regarding political interference, but Congress is taking care of that. The other was the stock market fluctuation.

Preparing Railroads

MOSCOW.—Dictator Joseph V. Stalin has issued an urgent order to restore the strategic Trans-Siberian Railroad to "efficient operation," supposedly in preparation for any hostilities with Japan in Outer Mongolia, it was revealed here.

New Lieutenant-Governor

OTTAWA.—Albert Matthews, member of a Toronto brokerage firm bearing his name and brother of Hon. R. C. Matthews, Minister of National Revenue in the Bennett Government, this week was named Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario. He succeeds Hon. Dr. H. A. Bruce, who announced his resignation last week. The appointment became effective Nov. 30.

Territorials Re-organized

LONDON.—Fundamental changes in the organization of Great Britain's territorial army to bring it up to the level of a regular force which can be used in the front line immediately on the outbreak of war were announced this week by Leslie Hore-Belisha, Secretary for War.

Air Force In Plot

PARIS. — The terroristic plot of "Les Cagoulards" (Hooded Men) to overthrow the Government by revolution, set up a Fascist dictatorship and ultimately restore the monarchy, led investigators this week to the high command of the French air force.

Within eighteen hours after Minister of Interior Marx Dormoy announced that the sensational expose involved leaders of the defense forces' agents of the Surete Nationale seized General Edouard Duseigneur, retired Commander of the air force.

Hitler's Demands

LONDON.—Chancellor Hitler was reported this week by diplomatic sources to have asked Viscount Halifax during their conversations in Germany for three definite commitments, all regarded as inacceptable to Great Britain.

These sources said Hitler asked for:

1—British recognition that Germany has "special interests" in Central Europe.

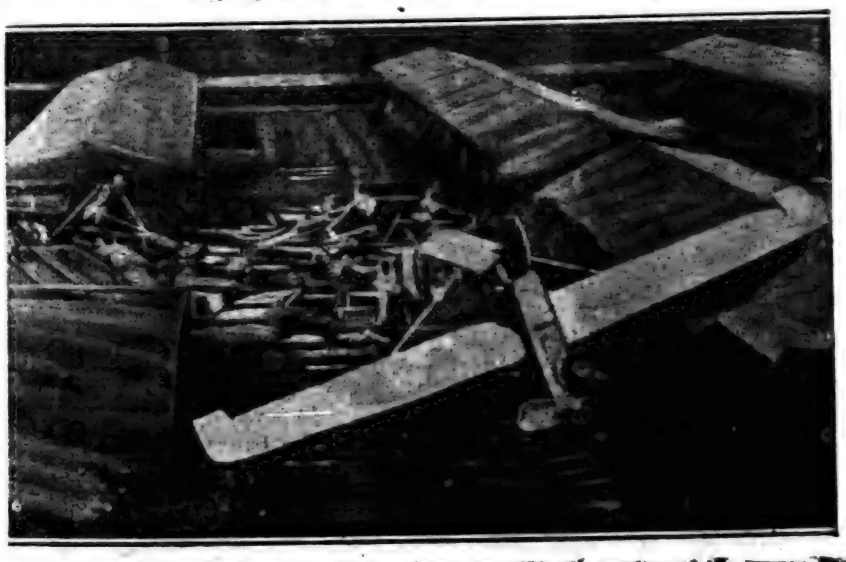
2—Abandonment of Britain's attempt to obtain a general European settlement.

3—Agreement that the question of colonies and all other questions concerning Germany be settled bilaterally and without connection with the League of Nations.

"Clarion" Office Raided

MONTREAL. — Quebec Provincial Police raided the Montreal office of the Toronto newspaper, "The Daily Clarion" this week-end and seized 700 copies of the paper along with other publications and documents.

In the Park Avenue office, police said, they found also a few copies of the Montreal French weekly, Clarte (light), whose office and printing plant were locked up a fortnight ago under Quebec's "padlock" law aimed at stamping out Communistic propaganda.



Disastrous Jamaican Floods

KINGSTON, Jamaica.— Fears that death toll in disastrous floods sweeping Jamaica would reach 100 or more were held this week-end after receipt of a message stating that a raging river torrent had swept through the village of Portland, taking twenty lives.

Strikers Refuse

WALKERTON, Ont.—The 100 striking employees of the Canadian Spool and Bobbin Company this week turned down the proposal of settlement made by Company President William Shaw and pickets continued to patrol around both plants of the factory, while production remained at a standstill.

Royalty Met Death in This Plane

This was the wreckage of the Belgian airliner in which five members of the German Royal House of Hesse, died when the plane, carrying them to the wedding of Prince Ludwig of Hesse, in London, struck a smokestack at Ostend, Belgium, and crashed in flames. Six others were killed in the crash.

Commentary on the Highlights of the Week's News . . . by Peter Randal

WHEAT INSTITUTE: Deploring the fact that Canada has never had a definite wheat policy, has left the marketing abroad of Canadian wheat almost entirely to chance, Henry L. Griffin, Director of the Research Department of United Grain Growers Limited, is urging upon the Royal Grain Inquiry Commission, the formation of a Wheat Institute to conduct research in uses of Canadian wheat. The immediate purpose of the institute would be to increase Canada's export trade in wheat. Trade relations would have to be studied, research made concerning markets, direct advertising done. Sooner or later a market plan for wheat would lead to planned marketing of all other farm products.

TENSION EASED: Since Britain's commercial recognition last month of Gen. Franco's ascendancy in Spain, tension has gradually been easing off in the civil war crisis there. Three other factors have in the meantime operated to reduce the situation to its quietest since July 1936:—Franco's willingness to establish, if he wins the war, a pro-British monarchy in Spain; withdrawal of Russian participation in the conflict; departure of 20,000 Italian troops from Spain and from the Balearics, a bad danger-spot. It is expected that other powers will shortly rush to recognize Franco, with Japan, Portugal, Austria, Hungary and Poland in the lead. It's all just dandy, except that the poor Spanish Government (Loyalist) is left out in the cold.

STATION NEAR POLE: Interest in the potentialities of Canada's Arctic areas was given a big lift this summer by Baron Tweedsmuir's tour of the Northwest Territories, and by the penetration into those distant regions of ten separate scientific expeditions. The secrets of the North have a greater drawing power than ever. Now a proposal comes that the Dominion Government build and maintain a scientific station somewhere near the centre of the Arctic Archipelago, a headquarters from which expeditions could operate. The Department of Mines and Resources have the matter under consideration and will probably discuss it with leading scientists interested in Arctic exploration. The site proposed for the station is on the northern end of Boothia Peninsula, the most northerly mainland on the Continent. 'Twill come in handy a few years hence when we begin spending our week-ends at the Pole.

$1500 INCOME: A survey undertaken in the smaller cities of the United States reveals that the annual income of the typical American family is close to $1,500. From $156 to $288 of this goes for rent, the greater part of the remainder buys food and clothing for the family. The average size of families on relief in nineteen cities ranges from 3.4 to 5.1, while for non-relief families the average is 3.2 to 4.5. Interesting figures, those, from which a number of far-reaching conclusions may be drawn. Colorful sidelight on the story comes from another report, made by a commission of economists and statisticians financed by the U.S. Government, which shows that the potential income of every family in the country amounts to $4,400. There's a leakage, somewhere, of $2,900, which certain authorities attribute to economic waste.

FASCISM IN AMERICA: Brazil's fifth Constitution was proclaimed last week by President Vargas, naming himself as Supreme Head of the State with dictatorial powers. The democratic world was startled and a little apprehensive at this manifestation of growing Fascism, the establishment of America's first totalitarian state. The new decree abolishes Parliament, replacing it with two impotent, hand-picked bodies which can be jailed or dismissed at will; puts industry, agriculture, commerce, transport and banking under a new corporative "Council of National Economy", also dismissable. The main hope of democratic countries is that the new Brazilian set-up will prove just another dictatorship of the Latin-American pattern with none of the rampant imperialism of the true Fascist state, (such as Italy and Germany.)

HIS BACK ACHED FOR 4 YEARS

Kruschen Put Him Right

For four years, this man's back ached almost continuously. Now, at 57, he starts the day fresh as a daisy, and his back aches no more. Read his story:—

"I had continuous backache for four years. I looked on the black side of everything. Now, I write with extreme gratitude for what Kruschen Salts has done for me. The freshness with which I start my day's work is perfectly marvellous. After seven days of Kruschen, I felt better and could get up immediately, without any special effort. I am 57, and my early morning dose of Kruschen is my salvation."—J.T.

The kidneys are the filters of the human machine. If they become sluggish, impurities find their way into the blood-stream and produce troublesome symptoms — backache, rheumatism, and depression.

The numerous salts in Kruschen quickly coax your kidneys back to healthy normal action. As an immediate result, you experience relief from those old dragging pains. As you persevere, you lose your pains altogether.

Seeks $2,500,000 From Ex-Emporer

Suit Planned Against Haile Selassie For Alleged Oil Deal

LONDON.—A damage suit for $2,500,000 against the former Emperor Haile Selassie which—if it does nothing else—may show how much cash the Negus of Ethiopia has on hand, has been filed in British courts.

Leo Chertok, who claimed to have arranged a deal for Ethiopian oil concessions between the Emperor and the Standard Oil Company of New York during the last days of resistance to Italy's invading army, is behind it.

He said it would be for alleged damages sustained by the downfall of negotiations on the supposed oil deal and includes 28,000 pounds (about $140,000) which Chertook says the ex-Emperor owes him.

He said if the suit is successful he will then institute bankruptcy proceedings designed to force a declaration of Haile Selassie's legal assets and liabilities, and clear up his financial status.

Claim Poverty Stricken

Another result of the suit, Chertok explained, will be to determine whether Haile Selassie still is Emperor of Ethiopia.

"Haile Selassie claims he is poverty stricken," Chertok said, "and hasn't sufficient food or enough water for his bath. I know different. They have plenty of money.

"I personally saw stored in London sacks of gold stacked to the ceiling. I have since been informed the gold has been delivered to Selassie."

Color of Hair Not Proof of Identity

LONDON, ONT.—With drug store complexions and such things to baffle the mere male the color of a woman's hair is no longer dependable as a means of court identification.

A witness in a civil action at the non-jury sittings of the Supreme Court here, told Justice McFarland he was positive the woman to whom he was referring was not the one who had just stepped from the witness box.

"The woman I saw had fair hair," he said. "This one has dark hair."

"They've been known to change," commented Justice McFarland.

Penitentiary Takes To Broadcasting

Convicts in the State Penitentiary at Melbourne, Australia, went on the air recently, in the first radio broadcast of its kind in Victoria.

From the prison concert hall, before an audience of 800 inmates, the convicts presented a typical "variety" program.

The audience yelled in appreciation when one of the performers announced gravely: "We must decline any other radio engagements because we will be fully occupied here for the next few months."

Grain Thefts Oust Cattle Rustling

Are Becoming a Growing Menace On the Prairies, Mounties Reveal

Grain thieves have taken the place of cattle and horse rustlers as the most detested criminals on the Western plains, according to the annual report of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

So prevalent has grain stealing become and so difficult is it to check that increased penalties for the offences are being proposed. The report states the Saskatchewan attorney general is proposing the minimum penalty should be raised to imprisonment for one year.

Hard to Identify

Cattle and horse rustling in former years was kept in check by the severity of the sentence imposed, from three to 14 years.

"The identification of stolen cattle and horses was a much easier matter than that of grain," says the report. "Brands and natural marks on animals were often a means of identification. The identification of wheat is a difficult matter except for the outstanding expert.

A Mean Thief

"The old cattle rustler was somewhat of a sportsman compared to the mean wheat thief of today. In his maraudings he took a sporting chance and sometimes stopped a bullet from the rifle of the rancher or his cowboys and was even, in the U.S.A., occasionally lynched when caught by them.

"To effectively stop the depredations of grain thieves it is considered they should, on conviction, be much more severely dealt with than they are at the present time. Otherwise the practice which is already very extensive will grow to alarming proportions."

Hundreds of Cases Known

In Saskatchewan 245 cases of grain theft were brought before the courts in the year under review and 207 convictions were obtained. The average sentence was approximately six months.

In Alberta 126 convictions were obtained out of 297 complaints received.

HAVE YOU HEARD

A woman who formerly resided here comes back after many years to see her friends — finds what, to her, is an embarrassing condition, to wit: A few of these friends are not on speaking terms and she has to exercise care in making social engagements — That is what's usually termed small town stuff, though it can be duplicated everywhere, since cities are only aggregations of small burgs — Nevertheless it is a deplorable condition. It can be remedied materially by cultivating a greater toleration and a wider viewpoint. Trouble with most of us is this: Our minds are local — they don't reach out beyond neighborhood limits and if they did they would be slower in making harsh judgments on the human units around them. High authority says none are perfect in this world. And good citizenship consists mainly in being charitable and getting along with imperfect folks like ourselves.

"Tortured with Liver Trouble and Rheumatic Pains"

There is nothing like deep-seated liver trouble and rheumatic pains to pull you down. Here is a letter from a man who was enduring pain and misery, unnecessarily. He writes:

"I have distributed a supply of Fynnon Salt to a few friends who were suffering from kidney trouble, gout, etc. They have now said goodbye to their complaints. As for myself—I was practically born with liver trouble and rheumatism. Since taking Fynnon Salt I feel like a new man and my only complaint seems to be 'a grand appetite' and a body full of energy".

Fynnon Salt neutralises the Uric Acid that causes rheumatic pains, gout, lumbago, sciatica, etc. Fynnon Salt brings quick relief from pain—limbs feel supple and free once again. A ½ teaspoonful of Fynnon Salt in a tumblerful of water every morning equals in medicinal effect three large glasses of the mineral spring waters found at famous British spas.

Now, in your own home, you can obtain similar benefits from a large 75c package of Fynnon Salt. Get it from your druggist, today. If you have any difficulty getting supplies, write: Laurentian Agencies, St. Gabriel Street, Montreal.

JUST BEING HAPPY

Just being happy is a fine thing to do,
Look on the bright side rather than the blue,
Sad or sunny musing
Is largely in your choosing,
And just being happy is a brave work and true.
Just being happy helps other souls along,
Their burdens may be heavy and they not strong,
Your own skies will lighten
If others' skies you brighten
By just being happy with a heart full of song.

Some experiences which appear to be disasters become, in retrospect, a veritable life-saver.

The prosecuting attorney had encountered a rather difficult witness. At length, exasperated by the man's evasive answers, he asked him whether he was acquainted with any of the jury.

"Yes, sir," replied the witness; "more than half of them."

"Are you willing to swear that you know more than half of them?" demanded the man of the law.

The other thought quickly.

"If it comes to that," he replied, "I am willing to swear that I know more than all of 'em put together!"

Colored Parson — "Brother Jones, that was the best chicken ah evah et. Whereat did you all obtain such a delectable fowl?"

Brother Jones — "Pahson, when yo' preaches a good sermon does Ah ask whereat yo' obtained it? Ah craves de same fo-bearance from you."

It wouldn't matter greatly what people did in following the dictation of their consciences if they were not so insistent upon everybody else following them too.

It is bad to be absent-minded:

"It is funny I do not remember limping when I left home," said the absent-minded professor as he walked down the street, with one foot on the curb and the other in the gutter.

A young flying officer, stationed somewhere in Egypt, while flying near the Great Pyramids, carrying out exercises in navigation, and working with a sextant to discover his exact position, suddenly turned to the pilot, and said, "Take off your hat!"

"Why?" asked the pilot.

"Because, according to my calculations, we are now inside St. Paul's Cathedral."

A man-about-town might be described as a fellow who can be perfectly attired for any occasion without even smelling of moth balls.

In an unfamiliar atmosphere the professor was trying to make conversation.

Professor — "The Romans were fond of card games."

Sweet Young Thing — "Oh, yes, I know; wasn't it a man called Horatius who held the first bridge party?"

A sign in a resturant reads: "What foods these morsels be!"

Mrs. M. — "My baby is so delicate that I have to let my husband dress it."

Mrs. P. — "Can he do it better than you?"

Mrs. M. — "Oh yes. He's a packer in a china factory."

Deep Plowing Smothers Grasshoppers' Eggs

Grasshopper eggs are now in the ground, like seeds for next year's crop of troubles, and farmers are concerned how to destroy as many as possible. They must be plowed under deep, advises F. Gray Butcher, extension entomologist and plant pathologist of North Dakota Agricultural College.

Disking and shallow cultivation will not bury them deeply enough to smother the young 'hoppers when they emerge next Spring.

Some of the eggs may be killed by exposure to the frozen drought of Winter, but that will not account for any important percentage of them. Best of all is to watch the crowds of young grasshoppers in Spring and give them a timely Borgia banquet of poisoned bran.

DO YOU FEEL SLUGGISH?
Maybe you need more bile

When you feel you haven't a friend in the world and life is not worth a red cent—that's the time your liver is getting you down. Don't fall for it. Make your liver behave.

Tanol Tablets will do the job. They act directly on the liver, stimulating the liver's production of bile. Comprising a special blend of certain laxatives, Tanol Tablets include a small proportion of calomel, probably the most effective liver stimulant known. In a day or two your liver is at work again as well as ever and you feel at friends with the wide, wide world. All druggists have Tanol Tablets, 50c. (C)

GIRLS WHO HAVE NO BOY FRIENDS
Quick Easy Way to Get Charm

Girls who don't attract boy friends wonder why. Beautiful, perfect features are not the reason. Cleopatra and famous women were often ugly. Have nice skin, plenty of animation, and watch out for your figure—you'll be surprised how popular you are. So many girls have poor complexions—no life—their figure slipping, and don't realize it. Take "Fruit-a-tives" and you'll soon be amazed how different and how attractive you've become. It purifies your blood, makes the skin pores work, gets rid of waste and poisons, gives you new energy, prevents flabby tissue from forming. "Fruit-a-tives" gives you new charm. 25c, 50c.

TRINITY CHURCH NOTES

The A.Y.P.A. of Trinity Church met on Monday evening, November 22, in the Parish Hall with the Vice-President, Arthur Arch, in charge. Devotional exercises were conducted by Dorothy Graydon and Jack Wright. During a lengthy business discussion, the members decided to go out Carol Singing on Christmas Eve to the homes of the aged and shut-ins, a practice of the last number of years. Our first Fire-side Hour and Discussion Group is to be held after the evening service on Sunday, December 5. It is hoped that such a gathering will be held once a month. The members are planning to attend the annual fellowship rally of the Peel Deanery and District Local Council, to be held at Clarke Memorial Hall, on Thursday, December 2. After the conclusion of all business, Rev. Mr. Ottley conducted the nomination and election of officers, which resulted as follows: Hon. Pres., Rev. Mr. Ottley; President, Mr. Arthur Arch; Vice-Pres., Mrs. Ottley; Secretary, Miss Mary Crozier; Treasurer, Mr. Edgar Steggall; L. C. Rep., Mr Jack Wright and Miss Mary Crozier.

These officers take office the first meeting in January, 1938. This part of the meeting closed with hymn and prayer. A social half-hour was then enjoyed, which consisted of games and the serving of lunch.

The next meeting of the A.Y.P.A. will be held on Monday evening, Dec. 13, when the programme is to be in charge of the Extension Committee of the Local Council. In answer to the roll call, each one of our own members is to give a small gift, not more than 25c value, suitable for gift for a member of the Sunday School, to be given at the annual Christmas tree concert. It is hoped that as many as possible will be present at this special meeting.

The members of the A.Y.P.A. hope to present their play, "Home Ties" on December 15 in the Parish Hall.

CARD OF THANKS

Streetsville,
Nov. 22, 1937

This 13th annual meeting of the Streetsville Overseas Veterans' Club (Post 139, Canadian Legion), held November 16th, places on record its deep appreciation and sincere thanks to the undermentioned for their assistance in carrying out the annual Armistice service at the Cenotaph and at Trinity Church.

To the O.C., other officers, N.C.O.'s and other ranks of "A" Company, the Lorne Scots (Peel, Dufferin and Halton) Regiment, for providing escort, band and bugler.

To the rector of Trinity Church for his inspiring address;

To the organist, choir and choristers for their help in the musical portion of the service.

We also wish to express our deep appreciation to the businessmen, citizens, school children and committee for the great effort and support given in behalf of our annual poppy day campaign.

Yours sincerely,
G. H. RICHES,
President.
R. E. HOLLINGSHEAD,
Secretary-Treasurer.

UNITED CHURCH NEWS

The teen-age young people of the United church are busy with preparations for a conclave and it promises to be a unique evening beginning with a supper. There will be competitions in table setting, group yells, group songs, home craft and first aid and then for relaxation, stunts and games.

Certainly the members are keenly interested and the night ought to be a rich success.

The Christmas concert of the Sunday School of the United church has always been a popular event, and this year the program is to be a little different from usual.

The first part of the program will be provided by the Juniors of the Beginners' and Primary Departments and then a pageant from the Ryerson Library of Pageants and Plays will be presented. It is already well under way and with orchestra and choir assisting it should be a successful event.

Spring Seeding
For 1938

The Ontario Department of Agriculture has just completed a careful survey of the seed situation for the spring seeding of 1938. This survey indicates that there is now sufficient oats and barley in the province to look after the 1938 seed requirements provided, of course, that every farmer will immediately have the best of his grain cleaned and set aside for his seed. Many farmers appear to think that because their grain this year is off colour and a little under standard in weight that it will not make suitable seed, but tests already made show that when this off-coloured and under-weight grain has been thoroughly cleaned up to a 50% cut in some instances, good seed was secured which germinated as high as 90%. If this work is done now the cleaned out grain can be used for feed.

With this in view the Department feels that if Ontario farmers follow out some such policy there will be no great shortage of seed next spring. They will have seed of known variety and origin and will not be obliged when spring comes to buy unknown seed, probably at very high prices or use weedy ungerminated feed grain.

Many farmers have a fanning mill of some description, which with a little repair and an extra screen or two, will clean grains. The correct screens, of course, are important, and should any farmer be in doubt, the Department will be glad to furnish this information on request. Where farmers live within driving and trucking distance of power cleaning plants that have scourers and carter disc machines, it will pay them to have their cleaning done at one of these plants.

What is most important is that farmers start now so tht the cleaning and germinating can be done properly and not leave it until a spring rush develops. Germination tests are slow and often more than one test is necessary for satisfactory results.

To make a germination test in your home, put a piece of blotting paper on a plate with just enough water to keep it damp. Spread a definite number of seeds, say 100 on top of the blotting paper, and cover with another piece of blotting paper. Put this in a fairly warm place, about room temperature (70 degrees Fah.), keeping the blotting paper moist throughout the test. At the end of six to ten days, if it is oats, barley or wheat, count the healthy normal sprouts (not just everything that sprouts) and from this calculate the percentage germination.

Should you desire to have this germination made by the Dominion Seed Department, then it will be necessary to send a one pound sample of your seed properly labelled, addressed to—Dominion Seed Branch, 86 Collier street, Toronto, for all samples in South-western Ontario from and including Ontario Co., Muskoka & Parry Sound Districts; for Eastern Ontario all the area East and North of the above mentioned line should be addressed to—Dominion Seed Branch, Jackson Building, Ottawa.

ERINDALE

The Women's Association of Erindale United church held their November meeting at the home of Mrs. H. McGill. The W.A , St. Peter's Anglican church, were their guests for this meeting, also many others. Mrs. J. Hyde presided in her usual gracious manner. Mrs. (Rev.) Spencer, of Clarkson, took the devotional part. During the reading of the minutes, we noted one item in particular—the presentation at the previous meeting of a silver tea service to Mrs. Harry Robbinson (nee May McGill), who had been church organist for several years. After the business part was concluded, Mrs. Lindsay gave a humorous reading, then Mrs. J. T. O'Neil, the guest speaker, gave a very interesting and comprehensive word picture of her trip to England. The speaker had pictures of the various places she visited, and gave us a great deal of valuable information about these. A hearty vote of thanks was tendered Mrs. O'Neil for her splendid address. Mrs. Ryland, Pres. of St. Peter's W.A. gave a very warm vote of thanks to the United church ladies for their invitation to visit with them and hear this address, also to the hostess, who so graciously opened her home for the occasion. The meeting was closed by singing a hymn and the Mizpah benediction. A delicious lunch was served by the hostess. A sale of miscellaneous articles was held after the meeting.

Mr. Dewart Carpenter, who suffered burns from gasoline a few weeks ago, has returned to his home and is recovering nicely.

Mr. and Mrs. Garnet McGill, of Port Credit, visited with their aunt, Mrs. J. Hardy, on Sunday.

The Erindale Women's Institute held a very successful "bridge" at Mrs. H. S. Hunter's, Streetsville road, last Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hunter are moving to the city for the winter.

TRINITY CHURCH NOTES

The annual Bazaar of the Willing Workers, held on Wednesday, Dec.1 was a great success. The stalls in the Parish Hall were decorated in red and white, with evergreen, and made even more attractive the excellent goods of all kinds that were for sale. A varied lunch was served on the platform. The Girls' Auxiliary also had three booths for Christmas Gifts; cards, and plants were sold. Our thanks are due to those ladies whose tireless energy prepared for the Bazaar, and to the congregation and general public whose support made it such a great success.

TRINITY CHURCH NOTES

Young People are invited to a special Young People's service in Trinity Church on Sunday evening. The sermon will be entitled "The Race of Life," and be especially designed for youth. After the service a "Fireside Hour" will be held in the Parish Hall. Here, at the request of some members of the A. Y. P. A. there will be a "question period," when the Rector will attempt to answer any questions you may care to ask. So if you have problems or doubts about the Church, the Bible the services etc, bring them along—or better still, hand them in to the Rector before Sunday. You need not sign your name. Just present your question, by mail or otherwise..

Following this, some of the old familiar hymns and carols will sung, and refreshments served.

Don't forget the A.Y.P.A. Play on Wednesday Dec. 15th. It is an amusing comedy - drama entitled—"Home Ties" and should well repay your attendance.

Under the auspices of three of the Streetsville Churches—St. Andrew's Presbyterian, Streetsville United and Trinity Church of England, a Grand Concert has been arranged for Wed, January 19th, to be held in St. Andrews Presbyterian Church. The program will be given by Mrs. Wilma Stevenson Dohler pianist, with the Toronto Symphony Orchestra, and others.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD
MAKE THE GOOD ONES BIG

Enlarging enables you to vary your print size. When you get a good shot like this, have it enlarged

SUMMER is about over and by now you should have a drawer full of prints—pictures of week-end outings and the vacation tour, sunsets and maybe seashores, the family's younger generation in sunsuits or bathing suits, capering about the lawn spray or digging furiously in a sandpile; all sorts of pictures rich with memories of a grand season.

The question now is—what are you going to do about them? Let them lie loose in the drawer where nobody will see them? Or, will you fix them up to be seen as pictures should be?

The least you can do is mount them in an album so they won't be lost. And if you have some really good ones, you might try your hand at a "scrapbook," edited just as the modern picture magazines are.

Have you ever studied these magazines and wondered why their pages are so interesting? Have you wondered why your own snapshots do not have the same snap and flash?

It's really very simple—a matter of size as much as anything else. When an art editor gets a picture that is especially good, he trims it down to include just the part he wants. Then he has it enlarged and "splashes" it over a whole magazine page, maybe two pages. Other pictures, not as good, are used in smaller size and the big "splash" picture carries them along.

Start separating your pictures into related groups. One group, for instance, could be the baby at the sandpile. There is that grand shot of him, intent on pouring sand out of a bucket half as big as he is, with the sun making a golden halo about his head and his little mouth pursed in utter concentration. Don't keep it small, for then you can barely see the details that are so dear. "Splash" it over a whole album page. If you don't do your own enlarging, your photofinisher can do the work for you. Then take your other pictures of baby and sandpile and arrange them informally on the opposite album page.

With this method, you can produce layouts that have the real professional touch. Be hard-boiled in your editing. Don't be afraid to trim away parts of a picture. Use four strips of white card in planning the "trim" and shift them about like a frame over the picture until it is limited to just the part you want. Then have just that part enlarged. Nearly all good pictures are better for such trimming and it has brought many a dull photograph to life.

Reeve Foster 80th Birthday

Mr. S. H. Foster, Reeve of Streetsville, observed his eightieth birthday on Nov. 30th, and is enjoying good health. Silas Hunting Foster was born in LanarkCounty, Ontario. He received a good education and when still a young man,he went to Toronto and worked for several big firms there. He was engaged with the Maple Leaf Milling Company as an accountant for a long time, and upon relinquishing that position he came to Streetsville in 1924, having lived at Dixie for a number of years. He was engaged with the McCarthy Milling Co., here until Jan. 3, 1936, when he had the misfortune to fall on some ice near the mill and break his hip. After some weeks spent in Peel Memorial Hospital he was able to return home.

Mr. Foster is our first citizen. He served as Councillor from May to December, 1932, was elected Reeve in January, 1933, and is still Reeve —five years. He likes to have the office, and may be Reeve again next year.

He served on the HighSchool Board in 1929 30 31, and is a valuable man to the village.

He is ex officio, a member of the Public Library Board and of the Public Utilities Commission. He is also our representative in the Peel County Council.

He is a Conservative in politics and attends the Presbyterian Church The Review extends congratulations to Mr. Foster, and wishes him many more happy years.

THE DOG TAX AND LIVE STOCK PROTECTION ACT

This legislation protects live stock owners against the ravages of dogs

This Act requires:—

The taxing of dogs and the issuing of dog tags.

—where live stock (Cattle and Sheep) are injured, the owner shall notify the local Valuer or the Reeve of the Municipality within forty-eight hours after discovery of the damage.

—the local Valuer must make two reports, one for the Municipality, and one for the owner of the livestock.

—if either of these is not satisfied with the report, he may appeal to the Minister of Agriculture for another Valuer by depositing $25.00. This money is returned if the appeal is successful but is forfeited if the appeal is lost.

—the award made by the Valuer appointed by the Minister is final.

SKY GIRL

By NELLIE GRAF

CHAPTER I.

Elinor Ames adjusted her perky little toque of royal blue tricotine. She would, she reflected, put all her past life behind her. Literally, fly above it. Allow winds aloft to blow away her unhappiness.

Of course she would always love Norm—Dr. Norm Rogers. She closed her eyes a second as she thought of the last time she had been with him. His arms about her, lips pressed together, swept by the ecstasy of love. Love that was tempestuous, powerful and breathlessly dangerous.

Elinor opened her eyes to survey every detail of her neat air stewardess' uniform. She must look perfect her first day at the airport. Norm was gone now. Gone! To his new work in Atlantic City with the famous Dr. Peck.

He had said, "We'll have to postpone our marriage, honey, for a year or two. You see..."

"Your mother wants you to marry Francine Bayless," Elinor had retorted sharply. "Francine has money and social position. I'm just a nobody."

"Elinor, that isn't—"

"It is, Norm. Why, even your sister, Leola, talks about it."

"But you can come with me. Be my nurse until...."

Went Their Separate Ways

"Until love curdles in its own warmth? No. Norm we care too much. It's either marriage now or we go our separate ways."

And they had gone their separate ways. Gone from the hospital where, a few years ago, Elinor had come as a shy wistful girl who wanted to be a nurse. Gone from the place where she had met and loved the popular young interne, who had cheered her through back-breaking days of floor scrubbing and cleaning and had encouraged her through the stark realism of birth, disease and death.

Her thoughts went back to the proud day when she had earned the right to assist in an operation. Dr. Rogers had been the surgeon, smiling at her—calm and comforting—with utmost confidence. The qualms she felt had disappeared like magic. In the vivid light, with the smell of ether in their nostrils, they had worked silently and efficiently.

• • •

It was this same interne, Dr. Norman Rogers, who had been waiting the day she came out of the chapel, holding tight her diploma, quivering with the emotion of living and serving. The words of the kindly old doctor who had delivered the graduation address rang in her ears:

"Never forget, yours is the job to serve and save. There is healing in your very fingers." Elinor had stared at her hands, which had grown larger, but firmer and more capable. Healing in her fingers! It was such a nice thought.

He had also said, and his eyes seemed to be on Elinor then, "Always keep this viewpoint — whatever the day brings forth, be prepared for it."

Looking up, Elinor had seen Dr. Rogers waiting in the hall—waiting to tell her he loved her. Oh, it had been too much happiness. Happiness that gave no inkling of how much she would need to depend upon the old doctor's words.

• • •

Everything was changed now. Norm's father had died and left him to support his mother and Leola. They were used to living on a high scale, and there was very little left of the once ample Rogers' fortune. This had served as excuse for Norm's mother to bring out into the open her desire that he marry Francine Bayless.

Warm-hearted, impulsive, generous Leola had rebelled. She would not go back to that expensive school and she wouldn't allow Norm to support her. She'd get a job. She did not like society anyway, and she would never marry except for love. Certainly Norm had the same right, she had stated.

But Mrs. Rogers was an uncompromising woman, and she had won her point that Norm's marriage to Elinor be postponed. Lately his letters had been fewer and a certain coldness seemed to run through them like the distant rumble of wind before a storm.

"It's that Francine Bayless," Leola had raged, one day when she found Elinor feeling unusually blue. "I'll bet she has told Norm a lot of bunk about you and Jack Newton."

"Jack Newton!" Elinor had said in surprise.

"Yes." Leola's eyes had met Elinor's squarely. "Norm thought you were interested in Jack when you nursed him through pneumonia. It isn't every day a person has a chance to meet a handsome young aviator, much less to be with him as a nurse. Why, Norm told me the only man he ever was jealous of was Jack. Francine overheard the remark. She'll capitalize on it somehow."

"But I never thought—"

"You wouldn't." Leola had eyed her contemplatively. "You're so naive. Jack got you your chance to be an air stewardess— then insisted you be on his ship. It looks — well...."

Leola's expressive gesture finished the sentence.

"But Jack and I are— just good friends."

"That goes as far as you're concerned," Leola commented. "But as for Jack—you know I'm in love with him. For a long time he couldn't even see me because of you. And think of Judith Blair! If looks could kill, she would have annihilated you long ago. Jack was her boy-friend before he met you."

"But you and Jack, Leola—you're seeing him now. I—"

"Yes, and he has seemed interested. Now if I can just fan the wavering flame." Leola had hummed a popular tune and taken a few dance steps.

Elinor shook a warning finger at her. "You've got to be more serious than that," she had said to the laughing girl.

Slender, graceful, restless, Leola was only a slip of a girl. Her straight little nose was always held at an impudent angle. Grey eyes sparkled mischievously. Red curls combed in the most ridiculous way the current style allowed. Lips too red. Face too pale from lack of rouge and too much powder. As irresistible as she was daring and lovable.

• • •

Thrill of a New Career

Elinor sighed now as she recalled her conversation with Leola. Judith Blair hadn't been able to kill with looks, but she was always ready to make things unpleasant for Elinor. Judith was also a stewardess, and Elinor wanted to be friendly. But to date Judith had met all her advances with implacable hatred.

Oh, well, no use to continue worrying about Judith! Once again, Elinor surveyed herself in the mirror. It reflected a pretty, petite girl who, to meet the qualifications of an air stewardess, was not over one hundred and twenty pounds in weight; height under five feet four inches, not over twenty-five years old. Even, white teeth added zest to a charming smile.

She glanced at her watch. Time to get to the office of the Chief Stewardess.

For all the heartbreak of her parting from Norm, the new career before Elinor thrilled her. Much as she had, back in the hospital days, looked forward to dedicating herself to the cause of healing, so did she, as she walked toward the chief stewardess' office, dream of some valiant act of rescue high in the air. Another ship in danger among the clouds, herself out on a wing, signaling the way to escape.... It was a bit vague, melodramatic if you will. But Elinor thrilled at the vision.

When she reached the office, Sally Nelson, chief stewardess, was giving a talk on duties and jurisdictions. Sally and Elinor had taken an immediate liking to each other, and Elinor's main ambition now was to become as beloved and efficient a stewardess as Sally.

"You will report for duty Wednesday morning," Sally said to Elinor. "I'll be making the Dallas trip and you can go with me. You will make one or more trips after that before you are sent out alone."

As Elinor walked out of the hangar, she met Judith Blair. The girl's sullen, dark beauty seemed to flame into unspoken hate as they passed.

Short Cuts

Mud In Your Eye

If you are called on to get a speck of dirt out of someone's eye roll the lid on a matchstick and brush the dirt away with the corner of a clean handkerchief.

Table Problem

If you need an extra table in your living room, yet feel that the room would appear crowded, why not consider a tilt top table? They are excellent for games, puzzles, cards, and some may be used for a fire screen, and when not in use, fold back neatly against the wall. A beautifully grained and polished wood is handsome, but if you like a bright dash of color, look at tables with tops showing painted rural scenes or bouquets of splashy flowers.

Keeping Clothes Moist

Try lining the basket in which you put sprinkled clothes with rubber sheeting. It will keep the clothes from drying out too soon—and will take care of the possibility of anything catching on a rough basket.

Soft Floor for Comfort

Don't iron for hours standing on a hard floor. You'll be much more tired when the week's laundry is done than you would be if you stood on a rubber mat, or one made of thick linoleum.

Jewelry Cleaner

A non-abrasive toothpaste applied with a soft toothbrush is an effective jewelry cleaner. Be sure to rinse well with clear water.

SATISFYING The Sweet Tooth

Most of the time when you think of desserts for the family it means simple puddings or fruit but sometimes you feel in the mood for something good and sweet. Chocolate Fudge Drops are one of the best possible answers to that sugar craving. So turn to your cookie jar once in a while for end-of-the-meal sweetness.

These are grand just "as is" with hot coffee for the grown ups or milk for the children. Another use for them is in cookie sandwiches. Spread tart jam over the bottom of one cooky and place another one on top. Or still another use; with cream cheese. A square of cream cheese with a serving knife beside it and two of the little cookies. It makes a simple dessert but served like that it looks like a party.

CHOCOLATE FUDGE DROPS

- 1½ cups sifted cake flour
- ½ teaspoon soda
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- 4 tablespoons butter or other shortening
- ¾ cup brown sugar, firmly packed
- 1 egg, unbeaten
- 2 squares unsweetened chocolate, melted
- ½ cup sour milk or buttermilk
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- ½ cup broken walnut meats

Sift flour once, measure, add soda and salt, and sift together three times. Cream butter thoroughly, add sugar gradually, and cream together well. Add egg and beat throughly; then chocolate and blend. Add flour, alternately with milk, a small amount at a time, beating after each addition until smooth. Add vanilla and nuts. Drop from teaspoon on ungreased baking sheet and bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) 15 minutes. Use pecan or almond meats instead of walnut meats, or substitute chopped raisins or dates for nuts, if desired. Makes 4 dozen small drops. These little cookies, so quick to mix, have many uses and are favorites with old and young.

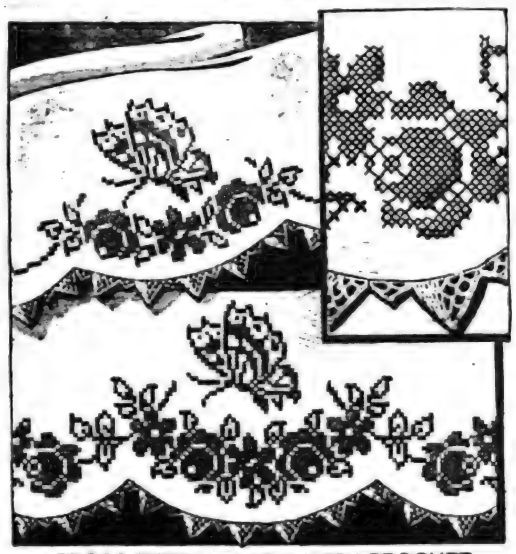
For special occasions, spread with Chocolate Orange Frosting, or a fluffy frosting.

CHOCOLATE ORANGE FROSTING

- 4 tablespoons butter
- 3 cups sifted confectioners' sugar
- 3 teaspoons grated orange rind
- 4 tablespoons orange juice
- ⅛ teaspoon salt
- 3 squares unsweetened chocolate, melted

Add orange rind to butter. Cream butter well; add part of sugar gradually, blending after each addition. Add salt, and chocolate and mix well. Add remaining sugar alternately with orange juice, until of right consistency to spread, beating after each addition until mixture is smooth.

Here is another dessert suggestion on the sweet side.—individual Chocolate Upside Down cakes which call for rich chocolate with apricots. Perhaps you have never tried this unusual combination but you'll find it simply delicious. If possible, bake these in glass, brown earthen or metal cups. Muffin pans can be used but the cakes are harder to remove from pans when these are used.



CHOCOLATE UPSIDE DOWN CAKES

- 1 cup sifted cake flour
- 1 teaspoon baking powder
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- ½ cup brown sugar, firmly packed
- ½ cup milk
- 3 tablespoons melted butter or other shortening
- 1 square unsweetened chocolate, melted
- ½ teaspoon vanilla

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and salt and sift together three times. Add sugar and mix. Add milk and butter and beat together thoroughly. Add melted chocolate and vanilla.

For topping — Place ½ teaspoon melted butter, 1 teaspoon brown sugar, and 1 apricot in each greased cup-cake pan or custard cup. Add cake batter, fill pans about ½ full. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) 30 minutes, or until done.

Won't Let Quints Be Guinea Pigs

Time Approaching When Five Little Girls Must Begin to Mingle With Other Children.

Dr. Allan R. Dafoe, medical guardian of the Dionne quintuplets, is looking forward to the time when the five sisters can be "taken from behind glass walls" and permitted to play around with neighbor children, just as less famous boys and girls.

"The time is approaching when the five girls must begin to mingle with other children in order to brush more intimately against life," Dr. Dafoe told an audience of women at Cincinnati, Ohio, last week.

Indifferent to Curious Gaze

"They must be taught to be indifferent to the gaze of the curious, to which they will be subjected as long as they live," he stated.

The next problem, said the doctor, is a plan for their education. The girls are receiving pre-kindergarten training under the direction of a private tutor and nurses, he said.

Each a Distinct Individual

"We will not allow them to become scientific guinea pigs," he added. "We try to remember that each of the quintuplets represents a distinct personality."

The country doctor who suddenly became a world figure when he delivered the quintuplets, was in Cincinnati as guest of the woman's exposition.

Sunday School Lesson

LESSON X

Christian Rest.—Matthew 11:28-30; Hebrews, Chapter 4:1-11

Golden Text—Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Matthew 11:28.

The Lesson in Its Setting

Time.—Our Lord's words of invitation were uttered in December, A.D. 29. The date of the writing of the epistle to the Hebrews cannot be definitely determined. It must be placed before the fall of Jerusalem, probably about 68 A.D.

Place.—Our Lord's words were uttered in Perae, east of the Jordan River, opposite Judaea. The place of the writing of the epistle to the Hebrews is disputed.

The late Dr. J. Stuart Holden of St. Paul's, London., says of Matt. 11: 28, 29: "This is perhaps the greatest word of the Evangel. It is majesty set to music for the lightening of overburdened and fevered lives. It is heaven's heart's ease for healing of sinning and sorrowful men. No other of all the gracious words which proceeded from his mouth is consecrated so entirely by the experience of thousands in every age as is this ever-new invitation of the Son of God to the sons of men.

28. Come unto me. There is love in this invitation, and urgency, and a consciousness of ability to meet the needs of those who will come. Come ye that labor and are heavy laden. 'Come unto Me, and I will give you rest!' All ye that are like over-cargoed boats, whose minds are burdened with anxieties and cares, or with the heavy and lumbering traditions of men, who are nigh to being swamped, living in perpetual fear of sumbission, 'Come unto Me, and I will give you rest.'

Rest is that heart harmony with God which qualifies men for life's engagements, for its ceaseless conflict and conquest, for its fruitful toil, and for its noblest and highest purposes. This is what Christ came to effect in men. This is the object of all His work and the interpretation of all His passion.

Invitation to Rest

29. Take my yoke upon you. . . . Christ takes upon Himself the one side of the yoke, and He invites you to come and occupy the empty place beside Him. He is the meek and lowly one. He has been accustomed to the yoke. This is the divine yoke-fellow of whom you are to learn, moving side by side with you, that you may imitate His patient endurance, His meekness and lowliness of spirit.

And learn of me. We are to learn of the Lord Jesus first, by studying the portrait of him as revealed in the Gospels, and then by living the Christlike life, as the Spirit of Christ dwells in us, teaching, strengthening, sanctifying and guiding us. For I am meek and lowly in heart. "The word 'meek' carries the idea of mildness and gentleness and the absence of self-vindication, and retaliation of injury, and so it carries with it the conception of unselfishness. What is it to be lowly in heart? The lowly-minded man is down in a humble sphere, where he is content if he can only serve." And ye shall find rest unto your souls. Here is a promise, but there are specific conditions which must be met before the promise can be fulfilled; we first come to Christ, then we take his yoke upon us, and then we learn of him. When we have done these three things, we shall no longer be seeking rest. We shall have it.

30. For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light. "The word rendered 'easy' means agreeable and serviceable. If Christ's yoke ever galls the neck, it is because we do not work steadily in it."

Rest For Christian Believers

1. Let us fear therefore. "It is because we know the Father, it is because we are redeemed by the precious blood of the Saviour, it is as the children of God and as the saints of Christ that we are to pass our earthly pilgrimage in fear. This is not the fear which dreads condemnation, but the fear of those who are saved and whom Christ has made free. Lest haply, a promise being left of entering into his rest, any one of you should seem to have come short of it. 2 For indeed we have had good tidings preached unto us, even as also they: but the word of hearing did not profit them, because it was not united by faith with them that heard. 3. For we who have believed do enter into that rest. Thomas Carlyle, in his life of Schiller, speaks of unrest as "the never failing inmate of every human breast." This is true of everyone outside of the Lord Jesus Christ, but in Christ, if the New Testament teaches anything, it teaches this, that, in believing, we are to have peace and joy. Here is one of the deepest, more precious themes of the word of God, something which cannot be analyzed, but must be entered into by experience.

Even as he hath said, As I sware in my wrath, They shall not enter into my rest. These words are taken from Psalm 95: 11, and they refer to God's words to Israel, especially as regards her entrance into the Promised Land. Had Israel fully followed the explicit instructions of God in the matter of exterminating enemy peoples, Israel would have had a complete rest from the exhausting, taxing, rebellious invasions and uprisings of these pagan peoples. But there is certainly a deeper meaning here in the matter of rest — a rest for the souls of the Israelites, a true resting in God.

Although the works were finished from the foundation of the world. 4. For he hath said somewhere of the seventh day on this wise, And God rested on the seventh day from all his works; 5. And in this place again, They shall not enter into my rest. These quotations are from Gen. 2:2 and Psalms 95:11. The rest of God is the expression of the perfect, divine complacency in the perfect, divine work.

A Special Day

6. Seeing therefore it remaineth that some should enter thereinto, and they to whom the good tidings were before preached failed to enter in because of disobedience. 7. He again defineth a certain day, To-day, saying in David so long a time afterward (even as hath been said before), To-day if ye shall hear his voice, harden not your hearts. 8. For if Joshua had given them rest, he would not have spoken afterward of another day. 9. There remaineth therefore a sabbath rest for the people of God. "We are not summoned to the heavy slumber which follows overtaxing toil, nor to inaction or indolence; but to the rest which is possible amid swift activity and strenuous work; it is perfect equilibrium between outgoings and incomings of life; it is a contented heart; it is peace that passeth all understanding, it is the repose of our will in the will of God."

10. For he that is entered into his rest hath himself also rested from his works, as God did from his. 11. Let us therefore give diligence to enter into that rest, that no man fall after the same example of disobedience. "The essence of sin is that sin centres in self instead of God. We try to help ourselves instead of throwing our burden of sin and care and sorrow upon the great Sinbearer and the Man of Sorrows, who was acquainted with grief. Now, when we come to Christ, we abandon all this self-help, and ask Him to be our helper; we abandon all this self-trust and lean on His finished work. We stop laboring to build up our own interests, and we are taken up with the interests of His kingdom. You shall never find rest until you find rest in ceasing from your own works, as God did from His, and entering into the Sabbath of rest that remains for the people of God, in this way."

Is This Your Birthday?

By A. R. WEIR

What the STARS foretell for those born on December 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, and 9

***

If the date of your birth is listed above, Sagittarius, the ninth sign of the Zodiac, is the sign under which you were born. This gives you a naturally happy, carefree and optimistic disposition. If you err at all it is on the side of hopefulness and optimism. Mix just a bit more concentration and determination with your efforts and you will be one rung higher on the ladder of success.

YOUR OWN BIRTHDATE:

DECEMBER 3—There should be a slow and steady improvement in your financial affairs bringing much more prosperity and happiness. Several long journeys are indicated and you should exercise caution when dealing with strangers as you have a tendency to overdo things.

DECEMBER 4—You are extremely restless and should curb your natural desire to see strange scenes and visit far-off countries. You should receive some important news from a long distance and much travel is indicated. Relatives and friends will help you and you will gain through intellectual people.

DECEMBER 5—Because you are a lover of sport and the open-air, you should walk as much as possible—it is your best tonic. While there are times when you can be irritable, without apparent reason, you have a naturally jovial disposition. You should benefit through some new work in which you are interested and the year is especially good for social matters.

DECEMBER 6—You are inclined to be rebellious by nature. Guard it and allow your philosophical turn of mind to govern. You are happiest when in complete harmony with your surroundings. Some new work will come your way and there will be many long journeys and much excitement and adventure.

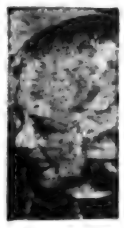
DECEMBER 7—You are sincere, happy-go-lucky and just a little bit careless. Many visits to places of amusement are indicated also a removal of residence and a pleasant holiday by water. Love affairs will prosper.

DECEMBER 8—You are quick to grasp the importance of new ideas and to adapt yourself to surroundings. Because of this you should have little difficulty in adjusting yourself to changes which are indicated in your business affairs. A woman will help you in business and you should be careful with correspondence.

DECEMBER 9—Like all Sagittarius people you long to travel, to explore new scenes and to know new people. There will be much more stability in your life and you should benefit by property and elderly people. The coming year will be very good for social and love affairs.

IF YOUR BIRTH DATE IS NOT LISTED ABOVE and you would like your personal Horoscope, or if you wish a complete Horoscope for any date listed above, send 10c (coin preferred) to A. R. Weir, 73 W. Adelaide St., Toronto, Ont. Please print your name, address and BIRTH DATE plainly.

Survived Rare Operation



The loss of the lobes of both her lungs has not erased the cheery smile of the seven-year-old Audrey Sheppard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clement Sheppard, Ville LaSalle, Montreal. This picture was taken in Children's Memorial Hospital, where Audrey is recovering after the first successful bilateral lobectomy in Montreal Medical History.

Movie Star Dust Radio

By VIRGINIA DALE

When motion picture producers do wander away from their office desks, they get the most promising ideas for pictures. For instance, it might never have occurred to the head man of the 20th Century-Fox studios to cast Shirley Temple and Sonja Henie in a film together if he hadn't happened to pass the ice rink where Miss Henie practices.

At first he was horror-stricken to find the company's precious child risking her neck trying to learn Sonja's whirlwind capers, but when he saw that she learned them as easily, and safely, as she does tap-dancing routines, he decided that she must do a skating picture with her teacher.

Sonja Henie

At Paramount, the big boss heard loud shrieks of hilarity coming from the portrait photographer's studio, and on investigation found W. C. Fields and John Barrymore clowning as Romeo and Juliet. Right away he was inspired to cast them together in a loony story called "Things Begin to Happen."

Grown-ups may well envy the school children of today who learn their history through such an exciting medium as the R. K. O. motion picture, "Victoria the Great." Filmed in England with Anna Neagle in the role of the queen, this picture was made with the hearty co-operation of government officials, so all the glory of real castles and authentic royal settings makes it a feast for the eyes.

Sixty years of her life are covered in this story, so it is a series of dramatic high spots. And so skillfully has the story been told, it is just the story of a woman's heart, a woman who was wilful and pathetic — with all her regal splendour.

Lanny Ross was all ready to sign a contract to make pictures for M-G-M, when it occurred to him that with Nelson Eddy and Allan Jones already singing on that lot, there wasn't very much room for another singer. So, the shrewd Lanny hustled over to Columbia Pictures' studios and arranged to make pictures for them instead. There he will be sure to get all the good singing roles.

Those folks you hear on Gabriel Heatter's "We, the People," program certainly enjoy the evening of that broadcast. After the first broadcast, Heatter takes the whole troupe of visitors across the street to dinner. Afterward, they return to the studio for the repeat western broadcast.

All the youngsters who were thrilled over Dick Merrill's ocean flights will want to arrive for the first showing and stay all day when 'Atlantic Flight' starring Dick Merrill himself comes to their local theatre. In the picture he is the same engaging, modest, casual young man that he was in the newsreels. And the picture boasts some hair-raising stunt flying.

All three of the Lane sisters are now working for Warner Brothers. Priscilla, who with her sister Rosemary, provided many bright moments in Waring's "Varsity Show," will do the same for the next "Gold Diggers" in support of Dick Powell. And Lola, who has been in pictures much longer than her sisters, will be seen in "Hollywood Hotel."

Turning down several coast-to-coast radio programs offered him, Henry Hull, the distinguished stage actor, is going to try motion pictures again. He will play a prominent role in M-G-M's "Marie Antoinette" in support of Norma Shearer. And about the time that picture is ready for the screen, another Marie Antoinette will be competing for attention. Deanna Durbin is going to play the role in a story written around her more tender years.

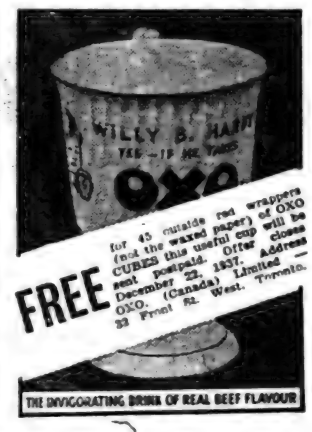
Every two hours an alarm clock rings in a North London, England bedroom, and Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Flewin get out of bed to feed three leopard cubs. Mr. Flewin is head keeper of the London Zoo lion House, and the three cubs are being brought up by hand.



Every night a car takes Mr. Flewin and the cubs to his home. Every morning the car takes them back to the zoo, and every two hours during the night and day an alarm clock sounds the warning that it is time for the cubs—two males and a female—to be fed.

Their mother, Peggy, was lured away from them immediately they were born—she has always eaten her previous litters before they were two days old, and this time the authorities were taking no chances.

Cat Mothers Them

After washing them and putting them on a hot-water bottle in a basket covered with a jersey to prevent them from falling out, Mr. Flewin prepared a special liquid food, sterilized some spoons in boiling water, fed the cubs with a few drops and then set the alarm clock.

The necessity for keeping the cubs warm led to an urgent appeal for a cat. An offer came from a zoo employee and the cubs snuggling up against the cat's warm fur, are no longer suffering from the absence of the mother.

ENGAGEMENTS

Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Sharpe of Inglewood wish to announce the engagement of their eldest daughter, Sarah Louise, to Mr. Arthur Edward Fulford of Toronto, only son of Mrs. B. Fulford and the late Mr. J. E. Fulford, the marriage to take place in latter part of November.

LET US SMILE

"Mother, isn't it funny that hats cost more than radios?"

Mother: "But they don't, dear. What makes you think so?"

"Well, a sign in a window back there said, 'Hats, $10 up,' and we just passed another window with a sign that says, 'Radios, $10 down'."

GEMS FROM LIFE'S SCRAP-BOOK

"CONSCIENCE"

"He will easily be content and at peace, whose conscience is pure."—Thomas A. Kempis.

"The man of integrity is one who makes it his constant rule to follow the road of duty, according as Truth and the voice of his conscience point it out to him."—Mary Baker Eddy.

"I feel within me a peace above all earthly dignities, a still and quiet conscience."—Shakespeare.

"A good conscience is a continual Christmas."—Franklin.

"A quiet conscience makes one so serene."—Byron.

"Cowardice asks, 'Is it safe?' Expediency asks, 'Is it politic?' Vanity asks, 'Is it popular?' but conscience asks, 'Is it right?'" —Punshon.

The SPORTS BROADCAST

By Al Ryckman

What a week-end! Argos win, Queen's win, Army wins and Buck Rogers revives Killer Kane.

Last Saturday with their backs to the score board down at Maple Leaf stadium, Argonauts played inspired football to take the Big Four championship from the Capitol city Senators as we predicted eight days in advance. Big Bob Isbister came out of the hospital just in time to kick the Toronto team to a victory. The big chap (a product of Hamilton—free ad.) not only hoisted the pigskin high, wide and handsome, but also tossed the forward pass to Cutler that netted a touchdown for the double blue machine. He also intercepted an Ottawa pass that certainly broke the hearts of the Bytown supporters, as well as the visiting players and one Mister Sprague.

To top the day' triumph at the Fleet street flats, the crowd swarmed on the field when the final whistle blew and carried Clary Burt off on their shoulders.

Meanwhile, up at Varsity stadium, the little boy blues of Toronto University and the Tricolour avalanche from Kingston were staging an overtime finish or finale. It brought out a fine display of all around ability from both teams. And certainly that grandstand climax featured by Queens was a wow.

However, the fans who attended the Big Four clash wished they could have taken in the academy loop final at the Bloor street bowl, while those at the college contest watched the score board to see what Argonauts were doing. Why in the name of good rugby, as a voice from cheap seats cried, couldn't they stage a double header starting at high noon. Well anyway the old maestro thinks said gent had something there. And imagine no free dinnerware at either game.

All of which has nothing to do with the fixture on hand this Saturday when a bunch from the oil academy, known as the Sarnia Imperials, drive down against our sculling oarsmen. So may the best team win and this time we mean it. But, oh you Argos!

The Toronto hockey customers have seen six National Hockey League teams at Maple Leaf Gardens so far this season. They have had a look at the champions from Detroit with their somewhat unsteady style of play. They had a glimpse of the New York Americans before said club really hit its stride and were somewhat disappointed at Bill Stewart's staggering band of Hawks from Chicago. The battling Bruins, from Boston gave a good demonstration of puck chasing at the local ice factory. In fact too good for our friend Mr. Irwin. The Maroons also put in an appearance (aside from King Clancy) that was about all. The sweeping speed of the Maple Leafs during November has brought such cheers from the home town fans, that we're kind of worried whether the walls of Conny Smythe's joint will hold together till after Christmas. This Saturday, come to think of it, Canadians will tangle with the locals which leaves Rangers the only sextet to show in our parts.

While on the subject of hockey, may we offer to the Streetsville team a large helping of success in their T.H.L. venture and trust that the same gent who guarded the twine last season will be on hand again this year. He was as Oscar Reckles, our champion yes-man claims, "a bit of alright".

And speaking of Oscar Reckles, we have with us to-day a note from said gent regarding the activities of the Fireside Snowshoe Club, whose members are busily engaged in collecting donations for the building of an annex to the main club house, to be known as the Igloo of Fame. A ski meet will be held before the January thaw sets in and a champion will be proclaimed. The award for this will be a beautiful set of icicles. More details later.

THE SKI ARTIST

Some gents just like to put on skis
And skim along in the wintry breeze.
The modern gals like the keen, clear air,
And even the snow that gets in their hair.
But as for us on yonder lea,
We generally hit a maple tree.
A voice cries "we've got something there".
So brother you can take our share.
—MINNIE McFINNEY.

Well winter is here dear solitary reader. Some conductor either dug up enough courage or got absent minded the other morning and put a little coal in the stove on his T.T.C. trolley.

Home-Made Glasses Used When Eyesight Grew Dim

Not for a moment must we believe that all of our ancestors' eyes were so perfect that some eye help was not needed, for many old spectacles testify that the tinkerer at least tinkered himself spectacles when the letters grew dim. Window glass was often the only lens available for the home-made frames and eye-charts did not come into existence until the 1860s. If a man had a forge he could hammer out a pair of iron frames, or twist some of pewter and make himself specs which could be "heired" for several generations, says a writer in the New York Sun.

But there were difficulties. Well enough, said the old tinkerer, to fix a contraption to hold two pieces of glass, but how to make 'em stick? A leather strap was one answer; two short sticks for "temples" running up under the hair was another; the straight bow with rings in the end holding strings for tying behind, another; then came bows which slid upon themselves; and finally, there was the bow which curved enough to fit the head and cling, without thong or string.

There was a time in the 1700s when lenses were extremely small, not for seeing but for giving the appearance of learning. In the 1830s we had gone back to these inch-long lenses, oblong, hexagonal and octagonal. Then some one thought of a frame which supported the lower half of the glass and left the upper part free, and we were on our way to the rimless specs. Another thought up green glasses and they were worn in shining steel frames; and some other made specs with fine wire which crisscrossed to form the nosepiece.

Moon Has Varying Pull on Oceans and Currents

According to a famous American astronomer, the moon has a tremendous effect upon the earth. It can, in fact, entirely alter the fortunes of mankind through its influence on the weather and oceans. Its other powers are still vague mysteries.

The solid earth actually shifts under the moon's gravitational pull, and for this reason a scientist declares that lovers under the moonlight are thrown off their balance in more ways than one.

Drouths, famines, and hurricanes can all be brought about by lunar action, and the ancient superstition concerning the moon's share in cold weather is based on solid fact, asserts a correspondent in Pearson's London Weekly.

In circling around the earth, the moon moves northward for just under nine years, and then swings southward for an equal period of time. This is a fixed and regular cycle. The northward movement brings unusually cold weather in Europe and the U. S. A., while the southward trend means mild conditions. This is because of the varying pull which the moon exerts on the oceans and their warm currents.

Panda, Asiatic Animal

Few if any mammals are more rare than the giant panda, an Asiatic animal of most unusual and striking appearance.

The giant panda has been characterized as an animal with a face like a raccoon, a body like a bear, and feet like a cat. While such descriptions are not scientifically accurate, they have some basis in fact, states an authority, adding also that the animal's teeth have a certain resemblance to those of a pig. The giant panda is about the size of a black bear, has a white head and body, large black circles around its eyes, black legs, and a broad black band around its shoulders.

Fashions in Early Days

Fashion played an important part in the early social life of this country. At exclusive dances and parties, called "assemblies," the fashionable gentlemen wore "Bolivar" frock coats of some gay colored cloth, blue, or green, or claret, with large lapels and gilded buttons. Their linen was ruffled; their "Cossack" trousers were voluminous in size and were tucked into high "Hessian" boots with gold tassels. They wore two and sometimes three waistcoats, each of different colors.

Ostrich Is Pampered

The most highly pampered farm animal in the world is the ostrich, owing to the sensitivity of its growing feathers. Of the numerous conditions that mar them and lessen their value, says Collier's Weekly, none is more incredible than the normal fluctuation in the blood pressure of the bird each day and night. This slight change is often "recorded" on the plumes in alternating densities.

First to Get U. S. Patent.

Senator John Ruggles of Maine was the first man to get a patent in the United States after the creation of the patent office in the department of state on July 4, 1836. It was for a system of cog gears. Dental plates were first patented in this country in 1840, the player piano in 1889, the dial telephone in 1892.—Time Magazine.

Many Common Words Are Records of Past Events

Many words in common use are records of events or personalities of the past. In some cases, states a writer in London Tit-Bits Magazine, the meaning has not changed since it was first introduced, in others the passage of years has altered its form altogether.

When we light a "bonfire," we give no thought to St. John, in whose honor in the Fifteenth century fires made from clean bones (bones-fires) were lit.

The "Jerusalem" artichoke has nothing to do with Palestine; its proper name is the girasole (sunflower) artichoke. Carelessness and popular appeal has given it its more romantic name, and even soup made from artichokes is known as Palestine soup.

"Rotten Row," in Hyde park, London, was originally known as the Route du Roi, being the Plantagenet kings' road from Westminster to the royal forests. "Pall Mall" received its name because a game in which a palle, or iron ball, was struck through an iron ring with a mall or mallet, was played there.

We use the phrase "to the bitter end" as though referring to the harsh dregs of wine or medicine. Originally it was a nautical expression meaning the end of a ship's cable, that part of it which is abaft the bitts—two pieces of timber to which the cable was attached when the ship rode at anchor.

Pair of Dog Tongs Held as Welsh Church Relic

The church at Clynnog Fawr, a few miles down the coast from Carnarvon, Wales, preserves as one of its curiosities a pair of dog tongs, used in the old days for seizing fighting dogs and throwing them out of church.

In the past it was a common thing for Welsh sheep dogs to follow their masters to church and curl up in the pew, sleeping through the service. Occasionally, as the Welsh used to say, "the devil would enter into them" and there would be a fight, until the dog tongs, shaped like coal tongs with large teeth, were taken down from the wall and used to eject the fighting animals.

One Welsh parson, it is said, used to take his dog Tango to church, where it would sleep in front of the lectern while its master conducted the worship. One day the dog spied an enemy, a farmer's dog, in the congregation and a terrific fight began.

The dog tongs were useless and the fight became so exciting that the church service was suspended and everyone gathered round to watch. Above the noise of the battle, visitors to this region about Mount Snowden are always told, the parson's voice could be heard shouting, "Three to one on Tango!"

Formerly a pair of dog tongs could be found in most of the churches in this section. They are now quite rare and those at Clynnog Fawr are one of the curiosities to see in Wales.

Oldest Woman's Club in U. S.

The Ladies' Education Society of Jacksonville, Ill., is the oldest woman's club in the United States, says the Chicago Tribune. The Jacksonville society was organized in 1833. The second oldest society was the Maternal association, organized in 1838, consisting of all the white women of the Northwest. The club came to a tragic end with the killing by the Indians of its secretary, Mrs. Narcissie Whitman. The third club was the Alpha Delphian of Alfred, N. Y., started in 1846. The fourth is the Ladies Physiological Society of Boston, organized in 1848. So strong was the opposition to any woman's club in Boston that no woman was brave enough to preside, and for the first two years Professor Bronson of Harvard occupied the chair at its meetings.

Isle of St. Michael

The Island of St. Michael, termed "Lake of Seven Cities," comprises 297 square miles and is 830 miles west of Portugal. Once famous as the first stopping place for Spanish galleons on their return from the West Indies, the harbor city of Ponta Delgada, of nearly 250,000 population, presents a mixture of descendants from Phoenician and Carthaginian traders to an aristocracy descendant from Portuguese navigators.

Operated by Fingers

Puppets are operated by the fingers (marionettes by strings) and sometimes require large staffs of operators for there can be as many as 40 "actors." The operator sits underneath the stage and holds the puppets above his head. The stage sets are often as elaborate and complicated as in a theater and the operator has to be careful to judge his distances correctly. It is also no easy matter to keep the voices and the action consistent.

Selfishness Destroys Happiness

When we avoid our neighbor who is suffering, when we wrap ourselves in the cold blanket of selfishness, we forget the possibilities of real happiness, for true happiness comes only through sympathy and by comparison. The sufferings of others softens our hearts and makes us sensible to our own blessings.

The Open Column

For some weeks past we have been studying the "no strain" system. This is nothing particularly new, psychologically, but its application as we have practiced it, is a bit different from most forms of mental control. The idea was first drawn to our attention by a ball player who kept hollering from left field, "No strain in there, keed, no strain". Meaning that the pitcher of the team was to take his time, keep his muscles slack, take a nice long wind-up, and drive the old apple right through the batter's mid-riff, or something like that.

So, after weeks and even months of concentrated mulling, we have developed a "no strain" system all our own. It must be all our own, because nobody with whom we have discussed the matter wants it.

It works something like this: An itinerant peddler comes to the door, selling shoe-laces. Previously, we had felt very guilty about telling him that we had all the shoe-laces we wanted, that we were flat broke, and that we were, really, very sorry about the whole thing.

But under the new system, we open the door with a merry smile, feeling not the least guilty, cast a contemptuous glance at the pitiful articles the poor devil is hopefully holding under our nose, and chortle, "Nope, we don't need anything today. Goodbye". Slamming the door in his disappointed face, we go about our own business, dismissing the whole matter from mind. The ability to forget all about anything at once is the chief feature of the "no strain" system.

Or, for instance, someone comes to the door asking donations for a foundling asylum. We snap the door open, listen to the request, retaining a fixed, cheerful grin. When the canvasser is temporarily winded, we promptly shout, "No, thanks, we haven't any foundlings. Nice day. Good-bye." And quickly shut the door.

The system, in a nutshell, is to be cheerfully insulting, so fast that the person insulted has not time to do any rebutting, to remove one's person from the immediate vicinity of embarrassment with the greatest possible speed, and to erase all thoughts of the subject at once from the memory. After all, there are too many people, today, who think that we should be responsible for this, that and the other when we have, really, no direct responsibility whatever. Of course, when the day comes that we need a little charitable assistance, we will at once abandon this system. Perhaps other people will have adopted it by then. We hope not.

ERINDALE

The members of Erindale Women's Institute held their monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. E. Donellan on the Streetsville Road. There was a splendid attendance and a number of guests present, the President, Mrs. Geo. Burke, welcomed the guests in her usual gracious manner.

The Roll Call, White Gifts, was well responded. Mrs. (Dr.) Watson gave a very interesting report on the annual convention recently held in Toronto, Miss Hickens of Scotland, who is visiting her niece, Miss Donellan, told how much she was enjoying her visit to Canada and the sincere welcome she has received from Canadians and the pleasure it was to her to have met them. A short "One Act Play" was given by Mrs. Mosley, School Nurse and Mrs. McLean. It was both educational and very amusing at times.

Mrs. W. Cooper, District Director gave a good report of the Summer Series.

Among the guests of the afternoon was Madame Stiles Allen, of England, the famous Dramatic Soprano, who gave a very interesting talk on the Institute work and told how much she was enjoying her visit to Canada and America and that the aim of the English speaking nations should be for Peace.

The President thanked all those who had made the afternoon so enjoyable and the meeting closed by singing God Save the King.

Tea was then served by the Committee, Miss Donnelan, Mrs. J. Crozier and Mrs. Percy Adamson.

Confirmation Service will be held at 2.30 p.m. at St. Peter's Church by the Suffragen Bishop of Toronto on Sunday, Dec. 12th.

Madame Stiles Allen of England is visiting h cousin, Mrs. J. T. O'Neil.

A number of members of Erindale A.Y.P.A. attended the annual rally of Peel Deanery, which was held in Clarke Hall, Port Credit on Thursday, 2nd inst.

Mrs. J. M. O'Brien and Miss A. O'Brien are spending the winter in Toronto.

OBITUARY

Celesta Cahoon, widow of the late Thomas Kee, passed away at the home of her son-in-law, Fred Irvine, Burnhamthorpe Road, Cooksville, on Dec. 1st. Interment took place in Dixie cemetery.

Miss Catharine Grace Bolton, aged 68, passed away at Mono Road, North Peel, on Dec. 2nd. She was a great, great, grand-daughter of the pioneer for whom the village of Bolton was named.

WEDDINGS

DEATH—STEWART

At the home of her parents, Middle Road, Dixie, Lois Helen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Stewart, was married to Arthur H. Death, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Death. The service was taken by Rev. Newton Bowles.

In a brown and rose-beige ensemble with corsage of Talisman roses, the bride was attended by her sister, Miss Marion L. Stewart, who wore a black and sapphire blue dress and corsage of pink roses. Mr. Lindsay Death attended his brother as best man.

On her wedding trip to New York the bride travelled in a brown coat with fox fur and brown accessories. Mr. and Mrs. Death will live in Brampton upon their return.

At a meeting of the Clarkson Boy Scouts, recently, Gordon Oughtred, on behalf of the Scouts, presented their Scoutmaster, Mr. L. Vetters, with a silver tray in recognition of his recent marriage.

Thirteen miles of snow fences have been constructed along Peel County roads, as the County Council predicts a snowy winter.

Dr. J. C. Stevenson has been elected Chief Ranger of Court Union, Independent Foresters, at Brampton.

Gordon Graydon, M.P. for Peel County, is asking the Dominion Railway Commission to erect a subway on the Centre Road, Port Credit, where a number of fatal accidents have occurred. He also asked for permanent harbor improvements at the Credit.

LET US SMILE

"I can beat that," said Farmer Jenkins after listening to a scarecrow story. "Last week I put up a scarecrow which frightened the birds so much that one of them brought back two potatoes it had stolen."

The genius of a certain Arkansas editor showed itself recently when he printed the following news item in the local columns of his paper:

"Miss Beulah Blank, a Batesville belle of 20 summers, is visiting her twin brother, age 32."

COOKSVILLE

Fast work on the part of the Cooksville Fire Department, under Chief John Braithwaite, saved A. H. Wrigglesworth of Shelburne an expensive sedan, early Sunday morning. The car took fire on the Centre road, near Britannia. Wrigglesworth managed to keep the flames under control until a telephoned alarm brought the Cooksville firemen.

Local Hunters are Home Algoma

ANNUAL HUNT

The work being pretty well done for the fall, Hughie and Herm decided it was about time to get busy. They made ready to catch the 7.15 C.P.R. on the evening of Saturday, Nov. 6th, from Streetsville. Had about 3½ hours to wait at West Toronto, but this soon passed away, and after a good lunch at the cafe, of fish and chips, and oysters, with "Drummer" along, they boarded the 11.30 C.P.R. for Sudbury. There was a goodly number of hunters on the train, and a lively discussion of the merits of their respective guns took place. This helped to make the time pass quickly and it didn't seem long before the call came for ten minutes refreshments at MacTier. All retired for a few hours and Sudbury was reached about 7 a.m. Another twenty minutes for eats. We used to have to carry our own lunch, but the C.P.R. restaurants at divisional points render this unnecessary now. Blind River was reached about 10 a.m., and some of the boys were at the station to meet us. Oscar Buchard and Leo Pepin were not to be seen as both were under the doctor's care. This had a dampening effect on the pep of those remaining, but we must carry on, hoping for their recovery soon. Jimmie McClean invited us to go and dine with him, and we were soon on our way out to his farm, where we received a hearty welcome and had a real dinner. Lester Provencher volunteered to run us out to Lake Matinenda, so we were soon on our way towards camp. Our numbers were cut down on account of sickness and Jimmie and Louis were too busy to accompany us, but Emerson Lamorie was right on deck and we soon transferred our supplies into one of Earl Rowan's boats and, as Mr. Neilson's gas boat was going up the lake we got a lift as far as Butter Field Narrows. Here we parted, and Hughie, Herm and Emerson landed and made ready a pot of tea and had another lunch before starting for our camp at 68 Bay, a distance of about seven miles. It was a fine, calm night, and we made camp about midnight, two rowing while the other steered the boat. It was pretty dark, which made it difficult to locate our course, but after a little persistant pulling on the oars we finally made camp o.k. Simon Micheau was already located for the season's trapping. The gas boat proceeded on up the lake to the hardwood camp at Baker's Bay. They employ about 35 men taking out hardwood for the manufacture of furniture, etc. Located in camp we soon retired for the night and next day, being rainy, we congratulated ourselves on making camp just in time to miss the wet weather. We took it easy for a couple of days and on Wednesday afternoon, the 10th, we started out to try our luck in the bush. Herm proved to be very lucky on his favorite hill. He bagged two deer that afternoon. Evoy Trudeau and Gerry Langlois arrived in camp and we started running the dog. Trudeau got a fine buck. Emerson Lamorie had the good luck to land a fine bull moose which weighed around 550 lbs. dressed. We sure had some work ahead getting it to camp, but that all goes with the game and all hands finally landed him safely. Evoy and Simon got shooting at a fine bear, and said they hit him alright, but he refused to give up the fight. Hughie and Emerson got shooting and another nice buck was ready for the rack. Emerson got a shot at another buck, but failed to make a bag. We missed Oscar and Leo very much in camp, but we have to make the best of it. Jimime failed to arrive, he having taken too strongly to politics, and as is the order of the day he had dealings with a bull and a horse. On this account he missed his hunt this year. He grows good potatoes and turnips. To this the members of the party will vouch.

Well, we have had a fine time in camp in spite of our small attendance, and as we take out a camp license, we sure have done justice to the inner man.

On Monday, the 22nd, we had to break ice in one of the bays, and as this is a fair warning that winter's grip is setting in, we well remembered our sad experience last year for not heeding that warning. Not wishing to be caught napping again, we decided to pull up stakes and make our way toward Blind River. Simon has had pretty good luck with his traps, and as he has had considerable experience in the fishing business he rigged up a sail for our big boat and we bid farewell to our camp on 68 Bay for another year. Hughie was elected captain. Herm was given a trial as helmsman, while Simon and Emerson provided the propelling force, along with the sail to drive us down the lake. By changing off, the oars were kept going pretty well and we landed at the steel about 4.30 p.m., Tuesday, Nov. 23rd. Hughie and Emerson struck out to get Lester Provencher's truck, which arrived about 8 p.m. Simon and Herm waited at the steel until their arrival.

There is a tourists' headquarters in what used to be the Half-way House. We were received very hospitably by the cook. The boys are considering taking out papers for a steersman for the boat, but will decide later who will carry them.

We transfered our belongings to Lester's truck at the Government dock on Lake Matinenda and started for B. R., arriving about 9.30. We arranged with our old friend, Louis Barthelot, for lodgings, and after a good, rest in a real bed, we got busy getting trimmed up and straightening up our bills of the hunt. We visited Leo Pepin and Oscar Buchard before catching the train at 6.45 p.m. After bidding all farewell for another year, we boarded the good old C.P.R. for our return trip. We had a pleasant homeward journey and arrived safely in old Streetsville on Thursday, the 25th, well supplied with moose and venison.

We sincerely hope our members, who were unable to be with us, this year, will be sufficiently built up that they will be able to answer the call to camp in the fall hunt of 1938.

ONE OF THE PARTY.

PERSONALS

Miss Dorothy Atkinson, Listowel, was home for the week-end.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Evans of Malton have come to stay for the winter with Mr. and Mrs. Jack Fraser, R.R. 3, Streetsville.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Dingwall, Jr., of Toronto, visited Jack's parents, here, over the week-end.

COMMUNITY CLUB

The Community Club met at the home of Mrs. Coulson, Thurs., Dec. 2nd.

The minutes were read, business discussed, and Roll Call answered by "Something a Wife Should Not Be."

Mrs. C. May read a poem and papers were given by Mrs. Durant, Mrs. J. Miller, Mrs. Sandford.

These papers are very much enjoyed by the members and seem to have created quite an interest in the meetings.

It was decided the next meeting would be the Xmas meeting.

The hostess served a lovely lunch.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. J. Miller, Wed., Dec. 16th.

Don't forget to come and have lunch with us at the euchre and dance, Dec. 10th.

DRUMQUIN

The monthly meeting of Ladies' Aid and W.M.S. of Bethel Church was held Wednesday afternoon of last week at the home of Mrs. A. G. McNabb. The attendance was good. At this meeting the officers for the coming year are appointed. Mrs. Jno. Picket, the retiring L. A. president, thanked the members for their able support during her term of office. Mrs. Percy Merry was elected to succeed Mrs. Picket, with Mrs. Gordon Robinson as Vice-President. The other officers were re-elected. Rev. Eyre gave the ladies much credit for their splendid system of carrying on their work.

A number of our young folk took in the supper and lecture at Sheridan, Thursday, December 2nd. Mr. J. E. Whitelock, Milton, was guest speaker.

We wonder if "Sandy" has in his possession some of "Noah's Diary" as he seems to have much of the interesting history of Halton county. Such history is not easily secured and must be doubly interesting to the few remaining folk who can recall these happenings of their boy and girlhood days. "Carry on Sandy."

Bethel people are preparing for a real concert. Look out for the date.

We are glad to know that Mr. Henry Campbell is doing as well as can be expected.

MASONIC INSTALLATION

Tuesday evening, Wor. Bro. R. Langmaid, Wor. Master, and the other officers of River Park Masonic Lodge, Streetsville, were installed for 1938 by Wor. Bro. Sam. Cordingly, assisted by present and Past Grand Lodge Officers and Past Masters of the Lodge. A large number of visitors were present from Toronto, Weston, Lambton Mills, Mimico, Brampton, and other places.

At the close, a banquet was served, with Wor. Bro. Langmaid presiding when toasts were proposed and responded to, and Bro. W. M. Leonard presided at the piano. Among the out-of-town speakers were: C. H. Burgess, Port Credit, J. A. Herder and E. Beevis, Toronto. The Lodge is now off to a good start for the new year.

Defeat For de Valera

GALWAY, Irish Free State.—President Eamon de Valera suffered a political reverse in the Galway corporation elections this week when only 1 out of 12 contested seats was won by his Fianna Fail Party. Nine Independent business candidates and two Labor men were re-elected. Mr. de Valera's party entered seven contestants.

Begins Important Tour

PARIS. — Foreign Minister Yvon Delbos, armed with a declaration reaffirming the community of outlook and the attitude of France and Great Britain on world problems, left last week-end on an important diplomatic tour of Central and Eastern Europe.

His tour, which will take him to four capitals by December 18, was described by French diplomats as the third and perhaps key phase of the preliminary conversations which must precede any eventual round table discussions pointing at a general European settlement.

Accompanied by several political experts of the Foreign Office, Delbos first will visit the Polish capital of Warsaw, then Bucharest, Rumania, Belgrade, Yugoslavia and Prague, Czechoslovakia.

Roman Allies' Conference

VIENNA.—It is announced in well-informed circles here that the next conference of the Roman Protocol States will be held in Budapest in the middle of January. Preparatory steps have already been taken and the official invitations are awaited this week. Periodical meetings of the three Roman allies, Italy, Austria and Hungary, were foreseen in the consultative agreement which was added to the forthcoming conference on account of the recent efforts to obtain a European settlement which began with Viscount Halifax's visit to Berlin and were continued in London.

Russian Planes Arrive

SHANGHAI.—China last week was reported to be massing a fleet of 300 Russian-built warplanes for an attack on advancing Japanese.

Well-informed and responsible foreigners at Hankow, one of China's new seats of government 300 miles up the Yangtze river from Nanking, said at least 20 twin-engined bombers have arrived there.

Monarchist Spanish Flag

TOKIO.—The gold and red flag of Monarchist Spain was raised over the Spanish Legation here this week following Japan's recognition of the Spanish rebel regime headed by Generalissimo Francisco Franco as the legal Government of the Spanish nation.

Imports Increase

OTTAWA.—The Dominion Bureau of Statistics has reported an increase of 32.1 per cent. in Canadian imports for the first seven months of the current fiscal year (April 1 - Oct. 31) in comparison with the corresponding previous fiscal period.

Accord With Austria

ROME.—Italy last week signed a commercial accord with Austria similar to one concluded with Hungary in November.

Economic observers said the Hungarian pact was negotiated to lighten the financial burden placed on Italy by the 1934 Rome protocols which gave Austria and Hungary preferential markets in Italy.

Recommend Five Provinces

WINNIPEG. — Five Provinces instead of nine to cut duplicate costs of Provincial Government and parliamentary administration to a minimum, is part of a plan submitted to the Dominion-Provincial Relations Commission this week. It proposes to unite the three Maritime Provinces in one; the three Prairie Provinces in one and British Columbia and the Yukon in one. Ontario and Quebec would remain as at present.

Social Defeat

LETHBRIDGE, Alta.—In its first appeal to the electorate in Southern Alberta, the Unity Party won a victory over Social Credit last week-end in the Lethbridge Provincial by-election. Dr. Peter M. Campbell, physician of frontier days, defeated A. J. Burnap, Social Credit.

High Command Shake-up

LONDON.—Major-General Viscount Gort, V.C., this week was named Chief of the Imperial General Staff in what military circles considered a drastic shakeup of the high command.

The 51-year-old Great War hero was promoted to the rank of general. He succeeded Field Marshal Sir Cyril Deverell, who resigned. This was the most important of a series of changes involving resignation of three of the four military members of the Army Council and their replacement by younger men.

Given Up As Dead

MOSCOW.—Sigismund Levanevsky and five companions who vanished August 13 on a trans-Polar flight from Moscow toward the United States were given up for dead this week by Mihail Vodopyanoff, Russian Arctic flier, upon his return from an extended search of the icy wastes in which the Levanevsky plane disappeared.

Charge Barrister With Robbery

VANCOUVER.—Charles H. Cahan, Jr., Vancouver barrister and son of a prominent Montreal family, last week-end was arrested by city police on a charge of bank robbery.

The charge named Cahan as the lone gunman who held up a suburban branch of the Canadian Bank of Commerce here and escaped with about $60 in cash.

Will Not Separate

CAIRO, Egypt.—The Coptic Church patriarch who resides in Cairo refused this week to recognize a proposal attributed to Italy for separation of the Egyptian and Ethiopian churches, which have been united since the fourth century.

He declared he would excommunicate Abuna Abraham, 75-year-old blind prelate, whom Italy reportedly has named Archbishop of Ethiopia.

"Go Ahead With Trip"

GLASGOW.—George Bernard Shaw this week urged the Duke and Duchess of Windsor to visit the United States.

Their indefinitely postponed trip, he wrote in the Glasgow Labor periodical Forward, "would have been enormously useful to us both diplomatically and commercially."

Brilliant Meteor Falls

WINDSOR, Ont.—In a blaze of white light that illuminated the country for miles around, a huge meteor fell to earth in the Windsor district last week, according to many observers.

The light was particularly bright south of the city where the path of the fiery projectile was easily followed. The sky was bright as day and objects stood out clearly.

Lloyd George Lashes Out

LONDON.—Delivering a blistering indictment of the "limp, flaccid hands" of democratic "quitters," David Lloyd George told a peace audience here that enemies, "growing in strength and audacity and reckless power," were on the march along the Mediterranean and threatened Britain's communications in time of war.

Prince Marries Actress

VIENNA.—In a mountain church overlooking the Danube, Prince Ernst Rudiger von Starhemberg, swaggering chief of Austria's outlawed Fascist "Heimwehr," this week took as his bride beautiful Nora Gregor, the Viennese actress whom he elevated to stardom.

Assassination Suspects

CAIRO.—More than 300 members of the Egyptian Greenshirt Nationalist organization have been arrested in the round-up resulting from an unsuccessful attempt to assassinate Premier Mustapha Nahas Pasha last week. No official figures have yet been released.

See Herring Comeback

PORT DOVER.—Veteran fishermen here are of the opinion recent catches of herring in Lake Erie indicate this type of fish is definitely on the way back in the lake. For some years few, if any, herring were caught. Now catches are being reported from nearly every port.

Uncover Illicit Munitions

PARIS.—Discovery of the first explosive factory operated by the Cagoulards, Rightist organization allegedly plotting overthrow of the Republic, was announced by police last week-end.

The factory was found in the Fontainebleau Forest. Hundreds of grenade cases, powder, detonators and fuses were seized. Arrest of technicians charged with manufacturing munitions was expected shortly.

Indian Burial Site Found

BRAMPTON, Ont.—The discovery of what was apparently an Indian burial site on an Esquesing Township farm this week, may assume importance as an archaeological find, according to A. E. Cooper, authority on Indianology.

The find was made on a farm in West Esquesing Township. Although the low circular mound of sandy soil is believed to have constituted an early Indian burial-ground from the nature of the discoveries made, it is thought that the discovery of an Indian village site may follow shortly.

Japanese Parade Bombed

SHANGHAI.—A bomb exploded in Nanking Road last week-end as 5,000 Japanese troops marched through Shanghai in a victory parade. The parade scattered immediately.

The explosion was about one block from the Wing On department store. Soldiers ran in all directions.

The parade had passed through International Settlement side streets along the boundary between the French Concession and the Settlement and entered Nanking Road without incident.

Radio Must Be Improved

CHICAGO.—A blunt notice that the standards of radio programs must be improved—by law, if necessary—was served upon broadcasters of the United States this week by Federal Communications Commissioner George Henry Payne.

Postpone Air Service

CANBERRA, Australia.—The flying-boat service, originally scheduled to start early in January between England and Australia, has struck a temporary snag. Its inauguration may be delayed until next summer.

Prime Minister Joseph Lyons attributed the postponement to uncontrollable circumstances.

Nazis Criticize "Times"

BERLIN.—Two German newspapers this week criticized the New York Times for an editorial urging co-operation among the democracies.

The newspaper Nachtausgabe devoted much front page space to comment on the editorial, published by the New York newspaper Tuesday, calling for United States co-operation with Great Britain and other democracies toward "understandings on trade, money and credit" which the paper suggested would "serve as certain weapons against the treaty-breakers."

French Newspaper Ban

PARIS.—The Legislation Committee of the Chamber of Deputies this week approved a bill empowering the Government to enforce an export import ban on any newspapers and magazines containing writings capable of troubling foreign opinion or diminishing French prestige.

Jap Apology to U.S.

SHANGHAI.—Japanese authorities returned the American-owned tug, Feiting, this week and formally apologized.

Vice-Admiral Kyoshu Hasegawa, commander-in-chief of the Japanese 3rd fleet was understood to have made the apology to Rear Admiral Harry E. Yarnell, commander of the United States Asiatic fleet, and United States Consul Clarence E. Gauss.

Yarnell had protested to Japanese authorities when the tug, property of the William Hunt interests in the Far East, was hijacked from its base at the Kin Lee-Yuan wharf in the French concession. The Japanese naval party ripped the American flag from its standard and threw it into the Whangpoo river.

Blaze In Palestine

JERUSALEM.—Five persons died and five others were seriously burned in a roaring blaze, believed to have been started by Arab terrorists, that consumed a Public Works Department storehouse at Tulkharem last week-end.

Firefighters were unable to quench the flames, fed by inflammable material stored in the building. Rescue work was impossible. The son of the Arab watchman and four others died in the fire, while five Arabs, including a policeman, were seriously injured as they sought to quell the blaze.

May Probe Fascist Activities

OTTAWA.—The Trades and Labor Congress of Canada may press for a Federal investigation into Fascist and Nazi activities in Canada, P. M. Draper, President of the Congress, indicated this week.

Succession Duty Penalties

TORONTO.—Penalties involving a fine of $50,000 or imprisonment for two years, or both, are provided in the bill to amend the Succession Duty Act, presented in the opening-day session of the Ontario Legislature by Hon. Gordon Conant, Attorney-General.

The amendments make it an offense to mutilate, destroy, deface, alter or conceal books or documents relevant to any investigation that might be made on account of collection of succession duties, provided notice has been served of the investigation.

Control Over Resources Suggested For Provinces

Before Rowell Commission It Is Asked That Dominion Government Should Do Research In Mining, Forestry, Fisheries—Provincial Governments Having Administration of the Practical Work.

WINNIPEG.—Before the Dominion-Provincial Relations Commission Saturday, two Deputy Ministers separately and consecutively expressed the view that the proper function of the Dominion Government is to do research work in mining, forestry and fisheries in the appropriate departments, and the corresponding departments of Provincial Governments should have full control and administration of the practical work in each Provincial area.

These men, Dr. F. W. Jackson, Deputy Minister of Health and Public Welfare, and E. J. Allen, Assistant Deputy Minister of Natural Resources, were asked to give their opinion as to means by which any overlapping in the work of these departments might be cut out and economies thus made. Speaking broadly, there had been little overlapping due to collaboration and close co-operation between Federal and Manitoba Departments, but nevertheless serious evils had arisen in some cases because the Dominion was not living up to its responsibilities.

Ottawa's Best Service

Mr. Allen said that the only places where the forestry services of Dominion and of Manitoba could conflict are in the national parks and in the experimental areas operated under Federal supervision. Ottawa's best service to all Canada was to conduct research work to prevent spread of insect infestations and fungus diseases. A recent outbreak in Gaspe Peninsula has still more recently appeared in Manitoba. So what happens to forests in Nova Scotia or New Brunswick is important to every Province. If stamped out in one locality, it might save the forests of all Canada. It was Manitoba's interest to have it stamped out not in Manitoba, but at the source, so that it would never get to Manitoba. There was not close collaboration between the Federal Technical men and the Provincial practical men. The later could, on their jobs, collect a lot of information to help the Federal men. More work would be done with less money in that way. The Dominion Entomologist should make more use of the practical forester, he believed.

Neglecting the Field

As between Federal and Manitoba Fisheries Departments, the Manitoba men feel that Ottawa is neglecting the field given it under the constitution. The Province collects all license fees, and suggests regulations to Ottawa, which passes them. The Dominion spends no money. Regulations passed by the Dominion because of this set-up differ in every Province. It is a very awkward set-up.

"The Province should occupy the whole field except research, and in the latter department Ottawa is not living up to its responsibilities under the present nebulous jurisdiction set-up," said Mr. Allen.

THE NEWS INTERPRETED

A Commentary On the More Important Events of the Week.

By ELIZABETH EEDY

KEY POSITION: In the new trade negotiations now going forward between Great Britain and the United States, Canada holds the key position, says the Financial Post. The impending deal, so it is claimed, finds the Dominion in the place of one who has an option that can be swapped for valuable concessions; practically nothing can be done without this country's approval; and Canada will undoubtedly have the final word.

Although the new trade pacts in the proposed three-way arrangement may result in no great economic benefits, it is thought that the political effects of such an agreement will be far-reaching. When the Fascist nations see the two richest countries of the world joined as links in an economic chain, they will be obliged to pause and reflect before initiating any new aggression. Therefore in the long run it is believed that the coming agreement may lend a much-needed stability to the wavering cause of world peace.

RUSSIAN ELECTION: Nearly 100,000,000 people (think of it)! are expected to cast their ballots next week in the first direct, universal and secret voting ever staged in the U.S.S.R. The election called under the constitution of December, 1936, will see the new supreme legislative body, to be known as the Supreme Soviet, chosen by the ordinary citizen for the first time. Some observers believe that the new democracy is more apparent than real, that Stalin intends still to dominate the political life of the vast nation, including the elections.

It is now twenty years since the Bolshevist Revolution of 1917. Should 1937 mark the inauguration of another era in the Soviet, next week may begin the story.

FLAVOUR OF SAVAGERY: And speaking once more of dictators, which would you rather have, Mussolini, or his sons, Vittorio and Bruno? The man who plans the wars of aggression, or the ones who take an active part in the slaughter?

Last week Son Vittorio announces to the world that "war is the quintessence of beauty" and "bombing is magnificent sport." Says Vittorio further in describing the Abyssinian campaign: "I remember that one group of horsemen gave me the impression of a budding rose as the bombs fell in their midst. It was exceptionally good fun and they were easy to hit, offered a perfect target."

This week his father backs up Japan's claims of victory over a helpless China.

SPORT TODAY

By KEN EDWARDS

This series of chats about boxing and the arrival of Jack Dempsey in our town the other day to referee a wrestling match seems to be a kind of coincidence.

Well, if it's O.K. with Dempsey, who is now recovering from acute appendicitis since his trip here, we'll continue a synopsis of official boxing rules or notes on what to do and what not to do in and around a ring.

1. When a contestant is down, his opponent shall retire to the farthest neutral corner and remain there until the count is completed. Should he fail to do so, the referee and timekeeper may cease counting until he has so retired.

Should a contestant who is down arise before the count of ten is reached and again go down intentionally, without being struck, the referee and timekeeper shall resume the count where it left off.

Should a contestant leave the ring during the one minute period between rounds and fail to be in the ring when the gong goes to resume boxing, the referee shall count him out, the same as if he were down.

And so folks, until next week, if Ali Baba is still matched around these parts, I'll be back with wrestling notes. So long.

Bears Go Without Air-Conditioned Dens

Bruin residents of Vancouver and Victoria Park zoos seemingly are unconcerned over proposed legislation to air-condition their living quarters.

E. E. Winch (C.C.F.-Burnaby) gave notice he would introduce in the British Columbia Legislature a bill for better bear dens.

While the member drafted his plans for ventilated dens opening on hard surfaced court yards, three shaded grass plots and concrete-lined bathing pools, park board officials shrugged off such ideas as "too expensive."

"Besides," said A. S. Wooton, Vancouver parks superintendent, "grass plots wouldn't be sanitary and as for trees — well they'd have to be full grown to withstand the antics of such bears as Trotsky."

Trotsky is a half-ton Siberian bear acquired a quarter of a century ago.

Company Protects 'Aspirin' Trademark

Judgment Obtained Against Parties Marketing the Product Under Other Names

OTTAWA. — The Bayer Company Limited having brought actions to restrain infringements of its registered trade mark "Aspirin" the Exchequer Court of Canada has given judgment against its five defendants. In each case the Exchequer Court perpetually restrains the defendants Ivan Lambert, Joseph Nozick, Standard Bottlers and Packers Ltd., B. Neuman and Joe Beckman from using the trade mark "Aspirin" on preparations put out by themselves and awards the Bayer Company costs and damages.

The defendants were marketing the infringing product under various names including Pioneer Sales Co., Western Sales Co., Western Distributing Co., Advance Specialty Co. and Acme Specialty Company. The tablets labelled "Aspirin" were not of Bayer manufacture and were packed in small envelopes, each containing three or four tablets, and mounted on cards.

It is the intention of The Bayer Company Limited to take every legal method to uphold its trade mark.

"Aspirin" is the trade mark of The Bayer Company, Limited, Windsor, Ontario.

The bus was crowded. People were going home for the holidays. The lights had gone out in the bus and the tall man asked the young lady who crowded on at the last stop if he could help her find a strap.

Young Lady—I've already found one.

Tall Man—Then, would you mind letting go of my necktie?

This one from the Wall Street Journal strikes us as being funny:

An Irishman had been thrown over a fence by an enraged bull. He had just recovered when he noticed the bull pawing the ground and furiously tossing his head.

"If it wasn't for your bowing and scraping," said Mike, "I'd think you threw me over on purpose."

Often think the most praiseworthy human quality is the power of self restraint. . . . Takes much will power to overcome habit or desire of any kind. . . . "He that overcometh," says Revelations," shall not be hurt in the second death." . . . "Overcome evil with good," admonished St. Paul. . . . Not bad for Christmas thinking, what?

The train with three drunks aboard slowed down for the stop at Wembley.

Said the First—Is thish Wembley?

Second—No, it's Thursday.

Third—So'm I.

Harold—Is that man a friend of yours?

Girl—Yes.

Harold—Well, why don't you ask him to join us?

Girl (cooing)—Oh, Harold, this is so sudden!

Harold—What's so sudden?

Girl — Why —— Why —— he's our minister!

TIRED or NERVOUS?
Is bile doing its work?
Your liver is lazy, that's why you feel so rotten half the time. Your system is not getting enough bile. Your head aches, your back aches. Your food doesn't digest properly. It stagnates and decays for lack of bile. Bile is a digestant and an antiseptic. Your liver should produce 18 to 36 fluid ounces of bile every 24 hours.
Tanol Tablets will make your liver do its work. Based upon a small proportion of Calomel blended with certain other useful medicinal ingredients, Tanol Tablets act promptly and directly upon the liver, stimulating the flow of bile. They are easy to take and provide a safe, easy way of using calomel, probably the most effective liver stimulant known. They are not harsh—but they are efficient. Your druggist has them. 50c. (2)

Issue No. 50—'37

Lieutenant-Governor J. C. Bowen of Alberta honoured the 22nd Edmonton Boy Scout Group by officially opening its new headquarters, in the absence of Mayor Clarke and a large gathering of prominent citizens and Scout leaders.

• • •

Again proving that Boy Scout activities need not interfere with school work, Troop Leader Arthur Schawlow, of the 46th Toronto (Humewood School) Troop, and a student at Vaughan Road Collegiate, won two of the year's scholarships, the Edward Blake Scholarship in Physics and Chemistry and the Moses Henry Aiken Scholarship in Science and Mathematics. He was honoured at the collegiate's commencement exercises with the role of valedictorian of the 1937 class.

• • •

A 28-foot whaler was presented to the Sea Scouts of Vancouver by the Vancouver Lions' Club. The craft, which will accommodate 10 boys, is the second of a fleet of four which the Club plans to provide the British Columbia Sea Scouts. The first was presented last spring.

• • •

Boy Scouts of distant points attending the year's International Scout Jamboree in Holland included 8 from Venezuela, 9 from Siam, 12 from Japan, 25 from China, 5 from Iran, 30 from Mexico and 30 from Iceland.

• • •

Unlike many adult hunters and prospectors from time to time lost in the North country, when Scout Louis Vollans, 15, accompanied by four younger boys, including one of five found he had lost his bearings in the heavy bush near Wanless, north of Flin Flon, during a Saturday afternoon hunting expedition with a small rifle, he did not lose his head.

When darkness shortly came on with a chilling wind, he bivouacked for the night, kindled a fire for warmth and comfort, and grilled the partridge they had shot. The partridge he divided with care, giving the breast meat to the youngest boy. Then, in preparation for daylight, he took direction from the North Star and set a stick pointing in the direction that should bring them out on the railroad. Early in the morning they set off, and finally came out on the rails four miles from home.

Meanwhile the alarmed searchers who had failed to find them the previous afternoon and evening, were on the point of summoning aid from Flin Flon. A lookout on top of the station water tank reported distant figures on the track. A section man sped away on a gas-car to investigate, and the lost quintet were soon safe back at home.

But for Scout Vollans' coolness and head work the lads might have been lost for several days, if nothing more serious had resulted. The partridge was the only food eaten since leaving home, and they had been without water. The stout little five year old, when asked if he had not been terribly tired, replied, "Well, I was getting tired, but I could have gone two more miles."

STUDENTS' COLUMN

Re The New High School

The problem of the new high school is a question which should not be considered lightly. As one observes, the young student of to-day requires more modern surroundings and conveniences in the schools than they did in the days of their forefathers. On driving through the country one observes with keen interest the modern schools of other communities. Contrast these schools with the two schools of Streetsville and you will not find another school in any community as degrading outwardly and inwardly as the Streetsville institutions. These inconvenient, dilapidated structures are by themselves enough to keep people from settling in the community. Parents would not desire to take their children out of one of the more modern schools to a school which seems beyond repair. We are sure the more reasonable people of Streetsville will realize the necessity of a new high school.

Mr. Ellen, the Australian Trade Commissioner to Canada, has kindly consented to visit our school on Friday afternoon. He will present a moving picture entitled "Australia Today." We are glad to know Mr. Langmaid, principal, Streetsville Public School, is bringing one of his classes to see this interesting and educational picture. The admission is free. We wish that our auditorium (the science room) was large enough so that we might invite many of our interested friends. Perhaps we may someday, (when we get our new school)?

First form was treated to an illustrated lecture in Geography by Miss Shipley, when she used our new opaque projection lantern to illustrate interesting facts about Nova Scotia. This machine throws on the screen, pictures from magazines, books etc.

Mr. Buckle secured for us a set of slides from the Department of Mines, Ottawa, entitled "Wild Animal Life Across Canada." Wish you could have been there.

Christmas will soon be here and with it comes the inevitable tests. They are to be short this time. Music is to be among them. Mr. Capps thinks we are making splendid progress in our music, that is in our chorus work. We will see what we know about the theory, not much, I guess!

The boys are practising pyramid building. They seem to enjoy it, if one may judge by the smiles on their faces after the physical training period. They use a pair of old mattresses for gymnasium mats. It would be much better if we had real gymnasium mats, and clear back the desks in the science room for a gym floor.

Did you know that John Fellows has been appointed official mouse-catcher for the school? Perhaps it's because he has cheese in his lunch that they pay him so many visits.

We are glad to welcome to school another new student. We hear he has accounting aspirations. More power to you, Norman.

Ferne Crozier—Please Miss Bonham, may I be excused!

Miss Bonham—Yes, Ferne, but go out quietly so as not to wake any of the other classes.

Junior Institute members, don't forget about the regular monthly meeting to be held on Tuesday evening, December 14, at the home of Miss Jean Temple. Bring a note-book and pencil, so as to be able to take notes on our project. All girls are welcome.

Present: All members present. Reeve S. H. Foster presided.

Minutes of the previous session were read and adopted.

Correspondence was read as follows: Bell Telephone Co., asking permission to open Thomas Street at the C.P.R. tracks for the purpose of laying a cable under the tracks. From Streetsville High School Board asking Council to defer taking a vote of the ratepayers on the School Question until a future date.

The Clerk was instructed by resolution to grant the Bell Telephone permission to open Thomas Street at the the C.P.R. tracks and also to erect a pole on Mill St.

The following accounts were presented and passed for payment: V. J. Johnston, collecting garbage, $32.00; Firemen's allowances, $4.00; Municipal World supplies, $7.53; Saser & Son, relief, $2.40; L. F. Owens, relief, $9.00; J. Neiver, relief, 65c; Hillmer Fuels, relief, $37.05; Dadd's Bread, relief, $7.90; D. Hewgill, relief, $6.95; Carload, relief, $18.85; H. Culbert labor, $15.00; Registry office, $26.02; Bailey & Son, $3.85.

The following by-laws were passed: By-law 773 being a by-law to repeal by-law 772 and 771, which provided for taking a vote on the school question. By-law 774, being a by-law to fix the date and place and to appoint officer for the Municipal elections. By-law 775, being a by-law to set the wages paid F. J. Elderfield at $75.00 per month.

The Clerk advised council that all properties purchased by the Municipality at the tax sale held October 31, 1936, had now been registered in the name of the Corporation.

The following resolutions were submitted to the meeting.

1. "That the treasurer be authorized to sell lots 35 and 36, William and Henry Street, to John Buckingham for the sum of $65.00 cash." Carried.

2. "That the Treasurer be authorized to advertise for offers to purchase, for all tax sale property now held by the Municipality." Carried.

3. "That the Clerk be authorized to place insurance with W. N. Atkinson, covering the following tax sale properties, Lot 2, John St., $350.00; Lot 19, Queen St., $350.00; Lot 103, Ontario St., $800.00." Carried.

There being no further business the meeting on motion adjourned.

The Mission Band of Wesley Church exhibited the result of their year's work in the S.S. room on Tuesday evening, Nov. 30th. The sale of memo pads, calendars, receipt books and fretwork made by the members realized a nice sum. The sale of candy and other articles donated by the older people also helped swell the receipts. Great interest was exhibited in the display of scrapbooks and games made by the members, which are to be sent to a Mission Hospital. Previous to the bazaar in the church auditorium, the leader, Mrs. E. F. Wilson, gave a talk on a trip "Around the World," the study book taken up by the members at their meeting. This was illustrated with slides shown on a screen from the lantern recently bought by the Trafalgar circuit Y.P.U. and which was operated by John Lovering. A quartet, Phyllis Fish, Shirley and Eva Pickering and Dorothy Post, sang three numbers; Hugh Gibson and John Clifton gave recitations and Maurice Post a guitar solo. Donald Albertson read the log of the "Greybird," the aeroplane on which the children took the imaginary world trip. Rev. H. S. Lovering acted as chairman and thanked Mrs. Wilson for the interest she had shown in the Mission Band. In her reply, Mrs. Wilson said she could not have done it without the co-operation of the members, her assistant (Eileen Pickering) and the mothers. Mrs. Arthur Speight, Georgetown Mission Band Secretary for Halton Presbyterial, was an interested visitor and gave a talk to the children. The ladies of the church, under the convenership of Mrs. E. Albertson, entertained everyone present following the bazaar.

Miss Eva Fish, Oakville, was a visitor for the week-end with her cousin, Miss V. Lunau.

Rev. J. S. MacKay, D.D., formerly of Neemuch, Central India, was the special speaker at Wesley Church on Sunday afternoon.

Miss Doreen Chamberlain, Streetsville, visited on Sunday with Miss Eileen Pickering.

Miss Roberta Dunn is assisting at the Islington post office during the Christmas rush.

The Trafalgar Y.P.U. banquet at Sheridan hall on Thursday evening was a wonderful success. Mr. J. E. Whitelock, agricultural representative for Halton County, was the guest speaker. Many members from Wesley appointment attended.

ON WILD FLOWERS

From Spring To Autumn. By William Perkins Bull, K.C.; Toronto: McLeod.

The gold-lettered, green flower-pattern cloth binding of this delightful little volume awakens expectations which are not belied by its contents. Mr. Bull, who had devoted the evening of an unusually varied and active life to perpetuating in print all the phases historical, natural and human—of his beloved County of Peel in Ontario, has here depicted the pageant of the wild flowers throughout three seasons of the year. Disregarding scientific classifications, he has taken them in chronological order, starting with the shy but snow-defying blossoms of April and closing with the frost-challenging veterans of autumn. Of 181 varieties of wild flowers named in the Peel section of the late James White's "Herbarium," and printed in an appendix with their botanical and common names, Mr. Bull has taken fifty-seven which he describes in non-technical language but with enthusiasm and unconscious poetry. Nor do the readers have to depend upon the printed word alone for his mental identification of the various species, for each description is introduced by a large initial letter carrying a graceful line drawing of the flower in question. Virtually all the wild blooms dealt with are common to other parts of Ontario and Quebec, and so the little book will have an appeal far beyond the borders of Peel County. Its format and its contents combine to make it an acceptable gift for the amateur botanist or lover of flowers.

The Canadian Girls in Training held a Conclave Wednesday evening in the United Church Basement.... There were five groups competing and in each a great deal of interest was taken. The Basement certainly looked artistic with each group table decorated in the group colors. At six o'clock all the girls and boys sat down to a very wholesome supper. After this there was a competition in Group Yell, Group Song and Bandaging the wrist and finger. Each Group had a table which displayed their handicraft work, which was judged also Best Decorated Group Table was won by the "Wonders."

Best Group Yell won by "Maids of Honor."

Best Group song, tied in points by 'Wonders' and 'Maids of Honor'

Best Bandaging of Wrist and Finger, won by "Maids of Honor"

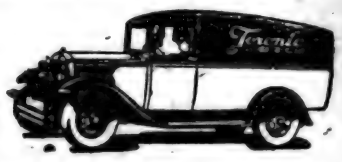
Best Display of Handicraft won by "Wonders"

Thus the winning group was the "Wonders" with 75¾ marks.

Second Group, "Maids of Honor" with 64¼ marks.

Third Group, 'Lamplighters,' with 60, 5 6 points

Fourth Group "Musketeers' 'with 52 marks.



Fifth Group, "Maple Leafs" with 39¾ marks

Therefore, Miss Edna Stephens Group "The Wonders," won the Conclave and much thanks is due to each member of the Group who helped the leader make it such a success.

The Judges were Mrs. Kaiser Mrs (Rev.) Jones, Mr. A.E.Buckle and Dr.O.T.Steen.

The kind co operation which was given to the girls and boys by the Judges was greatly appreciated.

GREEN TEA

SKY GIRL

By NELLIE GRAF

When Dr. Norman Rogers, the man she loves, evasively postpones marriage to her, Elinor Ames, formerly a nurse at his hospital, signs as an air stewardess. Leola Rogers, Norman's sister, warns Elinor that Judith Blair, a fellow-stewardess, has it in for her. For Judith is in love with the pilot who got Elinor her job — Jack Newton.

CHAPTER II

Elinor stopped to look after Judith a moment. If only the other girl were not so antagonistic. Of course Jack Newton had asked that Elinor be stewardess on his ship and everyone knew Judith wanted to be. Judith had even boasted she would be. Elinor would not soon forget the first time they had met after the appointment.

"I'll get even with you, Elinor Ames," Judith cried. And Elinor had felt, somehow, that she would.

On Wednesday, Elinor arrived at the airport promptly. She watched carefully as Sally got the plane in readiness for the flight. Mechanics were working on the engine. A pilot was listening to the hum of the huge motors. Sally and Elinor adjusted the clean head-rests and re-checked their supplies.

The Take-Off

The plane taxied to the passenger station. Sally explained that the sheet of paper she got from the Field Agent with the names and addresses and destinations of passengers was the "load manifest."

There was the usual wait for the weather conditions as observed in the last five minutes on the ticking teletypes. Then they taxied down the concrete apron and got ready for the take-off.

Sally fastened safety belts and distributed little packets of gum and cotton. She explained to the passengers that they were to put the cotton in their ears and chew the gum when gaining altitude, descending rapidly, or if bumpy weather were encountered.

Elinor noticed that Sally called the passengers by name, and gave special courtesy and attention to two who were obviously making their first airplane trip. Sally was an exceedingly popular stewardess and Elinor was anxious to observe how she handled the passengers.

It was thrilling and glamorous to find herself at the end of the run in a first-class hotel in the heart of Dallas. They left the next day at sunset.

Elinor had an opportunity to look out as they flew over hill and plain. City after city, river after river, mountain range topping verdant valley passed beneath them as they sailed through the clouds.

Then darkness.

The illusion of being utterly motionless. Cut off from a world to which she had belonged. A moment of complete solitude.

She thought suddenly of Norm. Norm! Wondered where he was and what he was doing. A moment of sharp, stabbing loneliness. A poignant prayer winging its way even higher than their flight. "Dear God, don't let anything happen to Norm and me—our love."

The prayer was punctuated by the vivid flare of beacons, lights of protection along the way. Red and green and white, brilliant flares that beckoned to safety, guided securely.

Everything Clicks

Elinor had an inherent awareness of things. It occurred to her that flying was safer, more certain than life itself. Flying was so perfectly and accurately pre-arranged, triple-checked. Ten people on the ground to every pilot in the air, insuring safety. Everything clicked.

Life wasn't like that. One made plans. But the plans were suddenly turned upside down. Human weakness and human frailties formed the bumps and updrafts and zero ceilings with no great network of men and machinery to avoid accidents.

If only she could turn the plane and fly to Norm. His last letter had been so disturbing. Somehow it had lacked the enthusiasm and hope of the others. And he mentioned places he had been; places where he would naturally be accompanied by a woman. Francine!

Elinor sighed. What chance did she, a sky girl, have against a girl who had all the advantages of proximity, beauty, wealth and shrewdness, and the approval of Norm's scheming mother!

But she mustn't think about these things. She must think about her new work.

• • •

Sally came back and sat beside her just then.

"Why don't you try to sleep?" she queried. "You won't have much chance when you go out alone."

"I'm too excited," Elinor answered. "It's all so strange."

"Well, I'll tell you what you might do," Sally suggested. "You might go up to the pilot's cabin and learn something about their work and the controls."

"Oh, may I?" Elinor asked eagerly.

"Do go on," Sally urged.

Elinor rose and moved toward the front of the ship.

"Nights," she reflected, "on a transport plane are weird." The people were stretched out, motionless, shapeless bundles. The blue light from the flames of the exhausts quivered through the plane. It touched the white blur of pillows, lingered over inanimate faces like ghost fingers.

The pilot and co-pilot greeted her in friendly terms. Elinor was to learn that there is a comradeship and loyalty among those who spend most of their life in the air, a bond which makes them all alert to keep the name and record of fellow flyers without blemish.

As one of the pilots had explained the first day she was at the airport, "That's the kind of a record we work toward."

He pointed with pride to the words beneath the name of one of their veteran pilots:

Years on route, 12.
Hours in air, 12,700.
Passengers hurt, none.
Mail lost, none.

One of the veteran pilots was flying the ship on which Elinor rode. He began to tell her about the dual controls, the telephone headset, the stabilizer, the gyro compass and artificial horizon. Elinor felt dizzy. She had never been able to learn this.

As though aware of her thoughts, the pilot laughed and said, "You won't need to know these things, but it is nice to have a speaking acquaintanceship with the mechanics of flying. You'll be surprised how much you will learn every time you fly."

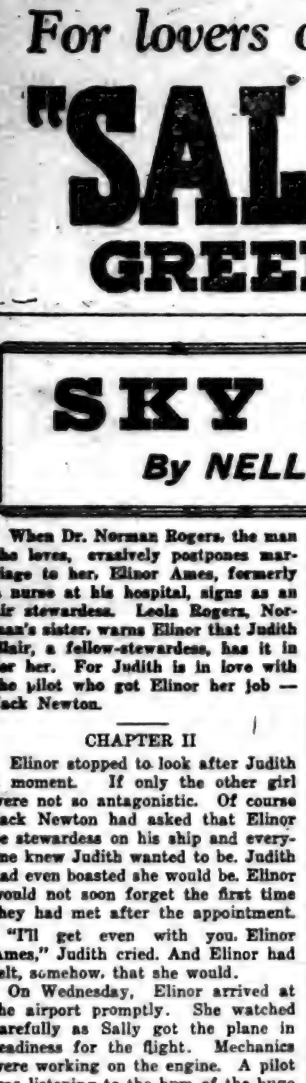
It was all fascinating. They were circling the home port before Elinor could realize it. Oh, it wasn't going to be so hard to think of this new work. There was something thrilling about it like pioneering. Modern pioneering.

Yes, she would put all her worries behind her and just enjoy this skimming through the heavens. She'd think only of her work. And apparently there were going to be plenty of things to think about. . .

• • •

Campaign of Enmity

During the weeks that followed, Judith Blair made things as unpleasant as possible for Elinor. And Kay Esterly, who became a stewardess about the time Elinor did, was Judith's friend and she, with other girls who liked Judith, made no pretense of friendship for Elinor.



Then came an evening after Elinor's plane had encountered a bad storm and two of the passengers had been difficult. She alighted, tired and dispirited, and went to the hangar.

She stopped according to custom to inspect the bulletin board. The words, "Miss Ames, report to Chief Stewardess at once" brought a worried frown to her forehead.

Elinor could not know it, but this was the beginning of a campaign of bitter enmity that was to be waged by Judith Blair, because she thought the handsome aviator, Jack Newton, was falling in love with his stewardess, a campaign which was to have a disastrous effect upon the lives of many.

Elinor moved slowly toward the office of the Chief Stewardess, her depression deepening with each step.

Duchess of Windsor Woman of the Year

And Dionne Quintuplets Represent Mass Production at Style Show

A striking brunette in a wedding gown of "Wallis blue" carried herself with royal dignity, and her face was unmistakably that of the Duchess of Windsor.

A hush fell over the audience of 1,500 fashion designers, writers and store executives meeting in New York. Then from an invisible loud speaker came: "Ladies and gentlemen! We give you—the 'woman of the year'!"

There was applause. Then another figure was held in the spotlight down stage. This one was a buxom blonde in a purple velvet costume.

Again the loud speaker: "We give you, none other than—Mae West!"

Others followed — Lillian Russell, Clara Bow, the "It" girl, Marlene Dietrich, wearing masculine full dress, and Garbo. Near the end came Shirley Temple, and last of all the Dionne quintuplets on roller skates.

"We give you," said the loud speaker, "a symbol of mass production."

Christmas Dinner Menu

With Christmas just around the corner, it's a good idea to have your Christmas dinner menu planned well in advance of December 25th. Here is a suggested menu with recipes for the main dishes which includes everything that can be followed exactly or varied according to your needs.

CHRISTMAS DINNER

Hors d'oeuvres — Consommé
Roast Goose—Coconut Stuffing
Apple Rings — Cranberry Mold
Sweet Potato Puff — Green Beans
Parker House Rolls
Salad Greens
Chiffonade Dressing
Christmas Plum Pudding
Demi-tasse
Nuts — Bonbons

Coconut Stuffing

2 bouillon cubes (chicken flavor)
1 cup milk, scalded
1 Cup soft bread crumbs
2 cups coconut, premium shred
4 tablespoons celery, finely cut (or ¼ teaspoon celery salt)
1½ tablespoons parsley, finely cut
¼ teaspoon sage
⅛ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon scraped onion
1 egg, slightly beaten
2 tablespoons melted butter

Dissolve bouillon cubes in hot milk. Combine with remaining ingredients, mixing lightly.

Apple Rings

4 red apples
½ cup vinegar
2 cups sugar
10 whole cloves
1½ cups water
2-inch piece of stick cinnamon
Red coloring, if desired
½ cup jelly (mint, pineapple, or cherry)

Slice apples crosswise into ½-inch slices. Remove cores. Cook gently in syrup of sugar, water, vinegar and spices until apples are transparent. Remove from syrup. Add coloring to syrup and cook until thick. Pour syrup over apple slices. Cool. Arrange around edge of platter. Fill centers with jelly.

Cranberry Mold

1 package lemon flavoured jelly powder
1½ cups warm water
½ cup celery, finely cut
½ cup canned crushed pineapple
1 cup thick cranberry sauce, sweetened

Dissolve jelly powder in warm water. Chill. When slightly thickened, add celery, pineapple, and cranberry sauce. Turn into mold. Chill until firm. Serve as relish with roast goose.

Sweet Potato Puff

2 tablespoons butter, melted
1 teaspoon salt
⅛ teaspoon pepper
¼ cup milk or cream
2 cups mashed sweet potato
1 egg yolk, slightly beaten
1 egg white, stiffly beaten

Add butter, seasonings, and milk to sweet potato. Add egg yolk; then fold in egg white. Bake in greased baking dish in moderate oven (375 deg. F.) 45 minutes, or until brown. Serves 4.

Christmas Plum Pudding

½ cup apple, chopped
½ cup suet, chopped
½ cup molasses
2 eggs, well beaten
½ cup milk
2 cups sifted flour
¼ cup figs, chopped
½ cup raisins
½ cup currants
¼ cup citron, sliced
¼ cup candied cherries, quartered
1 tablespoon candied orange peel, chopped
¼ cup almonds, blanched and chopped
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon soda
½ teaspoon cinnamon
¼ teaspoon allspice
½ teaspoon nutmeg

Combine apple, suet, molasses, eggs and milk. Sift flour once; measure. Mix ½ cup flour with fruit and nuts. Combine remaining flour, baking powder, salt, soda, and spices, and sift again. Add to molasses mixture. Add fruit. Turn into well-greased molds, filling 2/3 full. Cover tightly. Steam 3 hours. Serve hot with Butterscotch Hard Sauce. Serves 12.

Shrimp and Celery Chowder

2 tablespoons tapioca
¾ teaspoon salt
3 cups milk, scalded
2 Oxo cubes
1 cup celery, diced
1 cup water
¾ cup cooked potato, diced
1 cup shrimp, diced
3 tablespoons butter
Dash of cayenne

Add tapioca and salt to milk and cook in double boiler 15 minutes, or until tapioca is clear, stirring frequently. Cook Oxo cubes, celery and water together three minutes. Add to tapioca mixture. Add potato, shrimp, butter and cayenne. Reheat and serve.

An onion peeled from the root end causes less tears. Peel the potatoes last, because they help to remove the unpleasant onion smell. So does washing the hands in very cold water after handling onions.

Dull gilt frames can be brightened by rubbing them with a soft cloth dipped in water in which onions have been boiled.

Sues For Return Of Toy Soldiers

British Peer Demands That Actress Also Give Up His Miniature Locomotives.

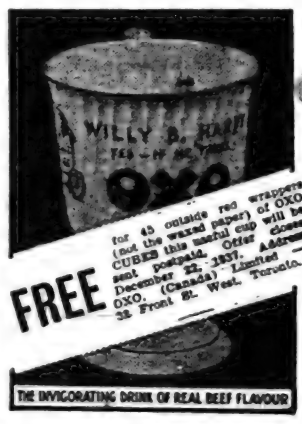
A 39-year-old peer who lived with a mannequin in a London apartment for nearly six years, sued her last week for the return of his electric trains and toy soldiers with which he admitted they had played "occasionally."

Last June the mannequin, Miss A. Royle, 34, sued the peer. Viscount Kingsborough, heir of the Earl of Kingston, for breach of promise. The action was dismissed with costs.

Now Lord Kingsborough has asked her to return:

"Seven volumes of the Official Naval History of the Great War;" "the volume of Sea Monsters;" "the volume of Famous Wrecks;" "three volumes by Taffrail;" six or seven miniature locomotives; four miniature cars and a quantity of tracks; one electric current control box; one storage battery; a quantity of wood and carpentry tools; and a quantity of model soldiers and model guns."

Miss Royle testified that she had sold the articles which Lord Kingsborough valued at about $250, when she "had not a penny and no home."



$20,000 For Knock Knees

A knock, alleged to have developed in the knees of Miss Vesta Conaway, 27-year-old Omaha, Neb., waitress, has been valued at $20,000 by a District Court jury.

Miss Conaway told the court that her right knee was fractured when she was struck by a truck last Thanksgiving Eve and had mended into a deformity which caused her knees to knock. The condition, she said, had forced her to give up her work and return to live with her parents on a farm.

Sunday School Lesson

LESSON XI

CHRISTIAN FELLOWSHIP — 1 John 1:1-7; Revelation 21:1-7

Golden Text — "Our fellowship is with the Father, and with his Son Jesus Christ." 1 John 1:3.

THE LESSON IN ITS SETTING

Time—The first epistle of St. John and the Revelation of St. John were written toward the close of his life, the former probably about 90 A.D., and the latter perhaps as late as 96 A.D.

Place — We do not know where John was when he wrote his epistles, but probably in the city of Ephesus. He himself states that, when he received the visions recorded in the book of Revelation, he was on the island of Patmos (Rev. 1:9), which is in the Aegean Sea, twenty-four miles southwest of Asia Minor.

The word translated "fellowship" in our lesson means "association," "communit, "joint participation." It is related to a verb meaning "to enter into fellowship, to join one's self as an associate, to make one's self a sharer or partner," and then it also means, very significantly, "so to make another's necessities one's own as to relieve them."

Our Fellowship's Foundation

I. The beginning here is not, of course, the beginning of the life of Christ, or even the beginning of human history, but it refers to a time long before man had been created, the very beginning of all things. "That which we have heard." With this clause we pass from eternity into time. The first clause refers to something prior to the Creation. Here both the Creation and the Incarnation have taken place. "That which we have seen with our eyes, that which we beheld." The additional phrase 'with our eyes" emphasizes the idea of direct personal experience in a matter marvelous in itself. The vision was not of the soul within, but in life. There can be no doubt that the exact word is used with a distinct reference to the invitation of the Lord after his resurrection. 'Handle me.' "Concerning the Word of life." The fact that 'Word' is printed in the text of the Revised Version as a proper noun, with the first letter as a capital, indicates that the phrase is to be taken as a direct reference to the person of the Lord Jesus Christ. Christ is both the word of God and the life of man.

Words of Eternal Life

Jesus himself said: The words that I have spoken unto you are spirit and are life,' and the apostle Peter confessed to the Lord shortly after: "Thou hast the words of eternal life.'

"And the life was manifested." This phrase simply means that Christ, who was from eternity, and lived in heaven out of sight of men, became such that he could be seen by men. "And we have seen, and bear witness." It is one thing to see and handle something and even to be convinced of its reality. It is another thing to bear witness publicly, to others, concerning that which we have investigated and found true. "And declare unto you the life, the eternal life, which was with the Father, and was manifested unto us."

"That which we have seen and heard declare we unto you also, that ye also may have fellowship with us; yea, and our fellowship is with the Father, and with his Son Jesus Christ." Fellowship, in this verse, is spoken of under two different aspects — there is the fellowship which believers have with one another, and there is the fellowship which believers have with the Father and his Son Jesus Christ. Let us be clear that there is no true fellowship, as John is speaking of it, except in a common belief, concerning the Lord Jesus Christ and an acceptance of him as Saviour. Fellowship with God as to privilege is communion with him; as to responsibility, it is partnership with him. Fellowship with God means we have come into business with God, and that his enterprises are to be our enterprises. With God fellowship is my privilege, to pour out everything that is in my heart, saying anything, saying everything I am thinking. Converse with God reaches its highest level when alone with him.

There is no sweeter fellowship in the world than that which believers have who are united in Christ. Where in all the world can such a fellowship as this be found, except among the Christian believers? It is love that has bound us together, and no other fellowship can ever be as permanent, as enriching, as genuine, as spontaneous, as the fellowship Christ has given to us in our common salvation.

"And these things we write, that our joy may be made full." The joy is that serene happiness, which is the result of conscious union with God and good men, of conscious possession of eternal life, which raises us above pain and sorrow and remorse.

Walk in the Light

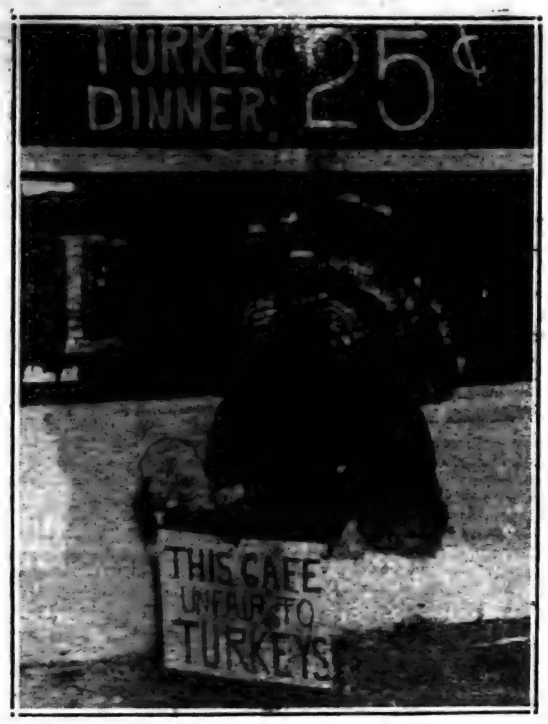
"And this is the message which we have heard from him and announce unto you, that God is light, and in him is no darkness at all." There are three statements in the Bible which stand alone as revelations of the nature of God, and they are all in the writings of St. John: 'God is spirit' (John 4:24); 'God is light'; and 'God is love.' They are probably the nearest approach to a definition of God that the human mind could frame or comprehend; and in the history of thought and religion they are unique. The more we consider them, the more they satisfy us. The simplest intellect can understand their meaning; the subtlest cannot exhaust it. The statement that there is no darkness in God, means first, that there is nothing hidden in God — he never expresses any truth, he never undertakes any act, in which the slightest shadow of untruthfulness, or compromise with sin, can ever be discovered.

"If we say that we have fellowship with him and walk in the darkness, we lie, and do not the truth." The apostle John, in this very epistle we are studying, says that a man who hates his brother, 'is in darkness.'

"But if we walk in the light as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus, his Son cleanseth us from all sin." Walking in the light is presupposed as the condition for this application of the virtue of Christ's life and his death. The marvelous thing is that when you put your trust in the Lord Jesus, the blood of Christ cleanses eternally and completely in the sight of God.

"And I saw a new heaven and a new earth are passed away; and the sea is earth for the first heaven and the first no more." When John says that he saw a new heaven and a new earth, it is not to be understood that the earth itself has been destroyed, or that heaven has been destroyed. There are two words to indicate the idea of newness in the Greek language — one means something newly created, something brought for the first time into existence; the other one means something that has been changed, or renewed, or restored, and this is the word here used. What a glorious day that will be when the earth will be restored to its original beauty, and all who are upon the earth will be in the perfection of God's image, without a blemish and without stain!

"And I saw the holy city, new Jerusalem, coming down out of heaven from God, made ready as a bride is adorned for her husband." There are three Jerusalems in the Bible — the earthly city by that name; our home in heaven is sometimes called the Jerusalem which is above, then there is the Holy City, new Jerusalem, which comes down out of heaven.



"And I heard a great voice out of the throne saying, Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and he shall dwell with them, and they shall be his peoples, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God." Here we have the perfection of all fellowship, for God is now found actually dwelling with men, the consummation of all his purposes, for his redeemed people.

"And he shall wipe away every tear from their eyes; and death shall be no more; neither shall there be any mourning, nor crying, nor pain, any more: the first things are passed away.' There is infinite wisdom here, infinite love, and infinite power. God is not ignorant of nor aloof from the sufferings of men, nor is he, knowing man's deep tragedies, powerless as he looks upon them, for he not only takes away our tears, but he takes away all that causes tears — death, and pain, and sorrow.

Father and Son

"And he that sitteth on the throne, said, Behold, I make all things new. And he saith, Write; for these words are faithful and true. And he said unto me, They are come to pass. I am the Alpha and the Omega, the beginning and the end. I will give unto him that is athirst of the fountain of the water of life freely. He that overcometh shall inherit these things; and I will be his God, and he shall be my son." In the last clause of the seventh verse — 'I will be his God, and he shall be my son' — we have the ultimate achievement of the great redeeming work of God's only begotten Son. Beloved, now are we children of God, and it is not yet made manifest, what we shall be. We know that, if he shall be manifested, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is. (1 John 3:1, 2.) In these seven verses we have three distinct forms of fellowship — that which is represented by a city, that which is symbolized by the loving relationship of a bride and her husband, and that which is indicated by the living, vital relationship of a son to his father.

Festive dinners are just a pain in the neck to the average turkey, but this bird is doing something about it. Small cause for him to feel happy about the whole situation, with that convincing sign painted on this restaurant window.

Movie Star Dust Radio

By VIRGINIA DALE

It is a toss up whether Madeline Carroll or Loretta Young will be the most-exquisitely dressed screen star this winter. Miss Carroll writes from Paris that she is having the time of her life selecting costumes for "The River Is Blue" which she will start making for Walter Wanger when she returns to Hollywood.

Loretta Young was in New York recently buying fur coats, hats, and dresses by the score just as if she had not had any new clothes in ages. Hollywood designers have just about run out of ideas for Loretta since in her last four pictures she has had altogether some 80 changes of costume, and each one was supposed to be a knockout. The extreme and bizarre clothes are the better she likes them — so she keeps designers working overtime.

You will be hearing a lot from now on about Ilona Massey, who makes her American screen debut in M-G-M'S "Rosalie." Officials of the company are so delighted with her performance in a minor role that they are going to give her the title role in "Pompadour," one of the most alluring beauties in history or drama.

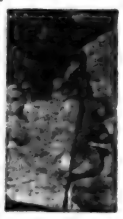
• • •

There is one popular radio player who will have to mend her ways if she ever goes into motion pictures—and most of them do sooner or later. Alice Frost of the "Big Sister" cast comes out of rehearsals with her forehead all smudged. She holds a pencil in her hand, and in a moment of dramatic tension invariably draws the point across her forehead.

• • •

The jinx that has dogged the footsteps of all Hollywood players who appeared on the Broadway stage this season has at last been knocked out. Frances Farmer broke the spell. She opened recently in "Golden Boy," a play about a prize fighter, and the critics went into rhapsodies over her deft playing of romantic scenes.

• • •



Radio performers develop some of the strangest hobbies, but for the present Tony Wons, the CBS philosopher, is leading them all. He makes violins. He makes violins with the utmost care out of any old thing he finds lying around the house. Inspired, possibly by Bob Burns and his far famed bazooka, he has made one out of a piece of tin stovepipe and the tone to his surprise is excellent.

• • •

The battle of the two great glamorous stars of the screen, Garbo and Dietrich, turns out to be no battle at all when you see their new pictures, "Conquest" and "Angel." Garbo is so far in the lead that there is just no competition at all. "Conquest" is a lavishly-produced, historically-faithful romance of the time of Napoleon and Garbo as the lovely Countess Walewska has never been more appealing. "Angel," on the other hand, is just an inconsequential modern triangle story in which the camera lingers on Miss Dietrich to the exclusion of any action.

• • •

Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy will be in the cast of a new comedy that will feature Irene Dunne and as a result she is the envy of all Hollywood as well as the public at large. Her outstanding success as a comedienne in "The Awful Truth" influenced Universal to postpone their biography of Madame Curie and instead of that story to cast her in a comedy. Thus she has established herself as a double threat actress, at home in heavy drama as well as light farce.

Charlie McCarthy

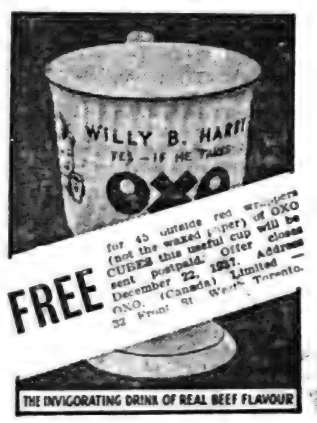
ODDS AND ENDS — Constance Bennett is the envy of all the pampered stars, because Alfalfa Sweizer of "Our Gang" comedies serenades her in his hilariously-uncertain tenor . . . Ken Murray and Edgar Bergen have evidently decided that they are in pictures to stay because they have both bought ranches out near Al Jolson's . . . Ann Sothern's sister, Bonnie Lake, has composed a song and sold it for "Girl of the Golden West" . . . Kate Smith is toying with the idea of trying motion pictures again.



Chocolate or Orange In Drunkenness Test

A physician recommended that persons arrested for drunken driving be given a bar of chocolate or an orange to determine whether they are really intoxicated or suffering from insulin shock.

Dr. Sidney Weinstein, a faculty member at the University of Pennsylvania Medical school, described the test at the convention of the International Association of Police and Fire Surgeons. He said that diabetics suffering from insulin shock—serious temporary shortage of sugar in the blood—exhibit symptoms closely allied to those of intoxication.

The sugar contained in a bar of chocolate or an orange will return a diabetic to normal in a short time, Dr. Weinstein said.

Ford Shows Two V-8 Cars, New Trucks

FRONT END views of the three units of the Ford V-8 line for 1938 are pictured above. At top, left, is the standard V-8 car, designed for owners to whom economy is paramount. Below, the de luxe Ford V-8, stylish sister of the standard car. The standard Ford, in three body types is powered by the famous Ford V-8 engine. The de luxe car, in eight body types, is richly styled with new outward beauty and interior luxury. Sweeping lines and longer hoods give the 1938 Ford V-8 cars a new and distinctive appearance. Both the de luxe and standard cars have the same Ford V-8 chassis. The new Ford V-8 truck front is shown, (top right). New treatment of the radiator grille on both de luxe and standard trucks, gives a more massive, impressive appearance which is heightened by the long louvres which extend horizontally along the hood. Trucks are in three wheelbase lengths, the 157-inch, the 134-inch which replaces the 131½-inch of previous years and the 112-inch wheelbase for commercial cars.

The SPORTS BROADCAST

By Al Ryckman

All hail the mighty Rangers
The pride of New York town,
Who battle with your Leaflets
To set the Smythe men down.

Sir Patrick, master-mind of all,
Is keen and sharp and tricky.
His prize exhibit line is now
Two Colville's and Shibicky.

These N.Y. gents can turn it on
When the going is generally tough.
But when the Leafs play naughty,
The rangers make it rough.

And that is why whenever,
This roving Ranger band
Plays at the local gardens
We just got to be on hand.
(From An Old Folk Song)

The New York Rangers will be in town on Saturday night to tangle with our Maple Leafs and this affair will probably pack the Carlton Street igloo to the roof, or at least to Foster Hewitt's gondola. For Lester, growing exceedingly tricky, has built his battling N.Y. gents into a grade "A" outfit and they are showing signs of becoming a lively and powerful pack. In fact with their prize line of Neil and Mac Colville and Alex Shibicky, these Rangers rank (in our opinion) as a gang who are apt to stir up a bit of excitement and provide some extra special action when they visit these parts.

Babe Pratt on the defense is known as the invisible man of the ice lanes. This youngster is so lean that it is said when gentleman Pratt is directly in line with one of the goal posts, he is practically invisible, which gives him that extra advantage over puck carriers coming his way.

Two smart sharpshooters who will be missing from the Gotham line-up as far as we can make out, will be Ching Johnson and Bill Cook. The latter is now manager-coach of the Cleveland Barons in the International-American League, while the former is now skating around for Lester Patrick's inter-city rivals, the Americans.

Club Notes and Remarks

Having neglected to wear our snowshoes last Saturday, we could not get out of the Danforth district and thus we missed the Eastern Canada Rugby Final at Varsity Stadium. It must have been quite good and we are anxious to get over to the Jolly Sport Lovers' A.C. (at Woolworth's lunch counter) to catch all the details, including the reason for the surprising defeat of the Three Star gents from the Oil Academy by our beloved Argonauts (or words to that affect). We undoubtedy will get all the answers as a couple of our coffee members hail from the east end of Hamilton (like us) where Bob Isbister started his rugby career. We get all sides of every situation and therefore will have the lowdown on the Winnipeg-Argo scrap with a champion declared even before game time—so there!

The A.C. club has been sharply divided of late over the question of radio programs, with some of the members maintaining that they prefer the dramas to Rudy Vallee or Benny Goodman, while the younger set claim Al Jolson and Hollywood Hotel take the cake. One lone member enjoys the dinner dance bands who bang out their rhythms through so much interference. Sometimes we believe they have the microphone set up in the hotel kitchen.

Personally we like listening to the Lady Esther program and especially Bill Stewart (no, Minnie, not the hockey coach but the announcer) as he rolls out the titles of the tunes Mr. King will play. For Bill would never say, "Wayne King will now play I Still Love to Kiss You Good-Night". Goodness, gracious no. Instead in a beautifully modulated tone of voice, he explains that, "the incomparable music of Wayne King and the composing genius of one of America's foremost songsmiths combine to say that I Still Love to Kiss You Good-Night."

In direct contrast we have tuned in those aviation test programs over the roar of motors and all we can make out is some bird with a mouthful of hot chocolate yelling, "How's the fuel holding out?" This and other bright questions are answered by a second voice which resembles Charlie MacCarthy saying, "The fuel's okay, we're okay," in fact everything is okay except the broadcast.

We could quote more of these notable efforts but not just now. At present the old maestro is making out his Christmas shopping list—practically buying out Woolworth's, as the Ritz brothers would say, "Yea! Yea! Yea!"

Island of Malta Really Made Up of Five Islands

The Island of Malta, forming as it does the most strategic naval base in the Mediterranean and Britain's most formidable station on the short route to India, in reality consists of five islands, four of which could be contained in the largest, which gives the group its name and which has an area of slightly less than 100 square miles. Two are mere rocky pinnacles which are used for target practice by the British fleet. The others are inhabited and have been likened to the Three Bears with Malta on one side, Gozo, the middle-sized Bear on the other and Comino, the Little Bear in between.

Archealogically the islands present a pageant of western civilization from the dolmens of the Stone age to the most modern of naval bases; and the patois of the native Maltese is said to be the only remnant of the language of the Phoenicians, albeit it contains admixtures from the tongues of the Greeks, Romans, Saracens, Normans, Spaniards, French and English; who at various times have been the overlords. The remains of three temples built of great stone slabs attest the existence of pre-historic races, as do parallel tracks which have never been satisfactorily explained, but in solid rock and extending down into the sea. Gozo has been identified as the scene of Homer's legend of Ulysses and Calypso.

From tombs and other structures built by them it is estimated that the Phoenicians settled in Malta about 1000 B. C., supplanting a civilization comparable in some respects to the Minoan of ancient Crete, and later the islands were used as one of their bases by the Carthagenians in their disastrous wars with Rome.

"Commodity Dollar" Was Invented Many Years Ago

The "commodity dollar" was actually in use in Hingham a century ago, states a writer in the Boston Globe.

Manuscripts uncovered in the Watertown Public Library by the Federal Historical Sources Survey show that Hingham paid its minister on a commodity dollar basis in 1803. The minister was Rev. Henry Ware, afterward the first Hollis professor of divinity at Harvard.

Rev. Henry Ware went to Hingham in 1787 and the inference is that his salary was $500 a year, enough and plenty in a period of low prices. But during the late seventeen-nineties there had been a "very great demand and high prices for all the necessaries of life" and the minister was at his wits' end to make both ends meet, for his salary remained stationary.

The remedy adopted by the parish was to adjust his pay on the basis of the average prices of the great staples between 1787 and 1803, and this settlement of the problem was accepted by the minister.

Florence Nightingale Pledge

The wording of the Florence Nightingale pledge follows: "I solemnly pledge myself before God and in the presence of this assembly, to pass my life in purity, and to practice my profession faithfully. I will abstain from whatever is deleterious and mischievous, and will not take or knowingly administer any harmful drugs. I will do all in my power to elevate the standard of my profession, and I will hold in confidence all personal matters committed to my keeping, and all family affairs coming to my knowledge in the practice of my calling. With loyalty will I endeavor to aid the physician in his work and devote myself to the welfare of those committed to my care."

Happiness

The happiness of today is as important as the happiness of tomorrow. You cannot postpone your enjoyments and lump them in one mass to take them after you have gained a certain position or won a fortune. You must take them, if you take them at all, as you go along. The capacity to enjoy is not a constant element in human life. There comes a time when desire fails. A man may deliberately sacrifice his enjoyments and reap thereby great moral advantage, but he cannot postpone them.

Lavender Favorite Perfume

Lavender is one of the favorite perfumes the world over and enormous quantities of the dried flowers are used annually to make the perfume and other lavender products. The yield of oil varies from year to year depending on the weather and the age of the bushes. The plants are very tender to any frost. The oil has to be stored from three to five years before it is sufficiently matured for use in the perfumery and other trades.

Wasting Time

To learn never to waste your time is perhaps one of the most difficult virtues to acquire. A well-spent day is a source of pleasure. To be constantly employed and never asking, "What shall I do?" is the secret of much goodness and happiness. Begin, then, with promptitude, act decisively, persevere; if interrupted, be unruffled, finish it carefully —these will be the signs of a virtuous soul.

Student's Column

To end the school week with a smile, last Friday, Mr. Ellen, an Australian of the second generation gave a very interesting illustrated talk, in our auditorium, with motion pictures on Australia. The picture was very educational, not only to the geography classes but to all.

Mr. Langmaid, principal of the Public School, brought down two of his classes. Why is it that the "infants" always gaze in wonderment as they enter the High School door? Surely not in rapture!

Mr. Buckle hired six new teachers for the ancient history period on Monday. Some of the pupils who taught the class have decided with great negation that they do not wish to continue the profession of a brain crammer.

Our Christmas exams started last Monday. It doesn't seem to be very long ago that we just managed to get our parents over the unsuspected shock that the last report gave them and now we have to go through it all again.

Miss Shepley—Can you name four of our products that contain milk?

Bill Miller—Butter, cheese,(thinking very hard) and two cows.

One Middle School girl says: "It is just a pleasure to stay in for Mr. Buckle."

The Open Column

The editor sat in his slightly frowsy sanctum, with typewriter in hand, racking his harrowed brain for something new and different to say about Christmas. He knew that his older subscribers would expect something with a profound religious note. He knew that his advertisers would insist that he temper his religious views with enough advice about the joy of giving gifts, particularly expensive gifts, to justify them in putting their Christmas ads. in his sheet. He also knew, having been in the business for some time, that, although the ads. would increase his patrons' business over the Christmas season, that the slump which always followed Christmas would make them wary of paying for the ads. until they were sure they had made enough money to carry them through until business picked up again.

Such of the younger generation as read his paper, he was sure, would want something lively, a bit of encouragement for them to tear things open and have a smash-up celebration. As the phrase occurred to him, he smiled, lop-sidedly, for he knew that there would be a few smash-ups before all the Christmas drivers made port, and he would be expected to sympathize.

The children, he suspected, would want a few trite remarks about the duty Santa Claus owed them. The ministers would expect a strong editorial urging the readers of the paper to attend church and leave some of their dollars on the collection plate. The people on relief would expect a reminder to the town council that Christmas was almost there, and that people on relief liked to celebrate Christmas just as much as people who had work. It was all very trying, the editor felt, to have to satisfy everybody, while nobody gave a hoot about how the editor spent Christmas.

Just then the office door opened, and a short, fat, bearded man with a red nose stepped in. The light in the room was dim, but the editor fancied that his caller was garbed very much like Santa Claus. Rolling up to the counter, the stranger took off his mittens, and belled out in a rollicking voice, "I'd like to pay five years' subscription in advance." Never having really believed in Santa Claus, the editor fainted away.

COOKSVILLE

High standards had been reached by the group of two-score Central Peel farmers whose milk he had tested during the past six months, Dr. G. E. Stanley, Toronto bacteriologist, told a gathering of milk producers at the Cooksville Inn.

The dinner was given by R. T. Stillman, Mimico dairy operator, at whose behest Dr. Stanley had conducted the series of tests to encourage more sanitary handling of milk shipped to the Lake Shore distribution centre. A silver cup, donated by Mr. Stillman, was presented to W. L. Wilkinson, Brampton, by J. S. Beck, of the Milk Control Board. C. W. Simpson, Brampton; G. Green, Brampton; O. Wolfe, Cooksville, and Robert Reid, Brampton, won honorable mention.

LAKEVIEW

General Workers' Union late tonight planned a course of action in an attempt to secure increased relief and better living conditions to meet the higher cost of living. Representations will be made to Toronto Township Council for full support in an appeal to Queen's Park when these grievances are presented. The union asks a 35 per cent increase in relief above the Campbell report, an open voucher for clothing, adequate clothing for those applying for relief before going to work, a satisfactory budgeting system, a weekly voucher issue instead of the semi-monthly system now in use, and the granting of relief to single unemployed.

LET US SMILE

Boy—We call him "Flannel."

Old Lady—How peculiar! Why?

Boy—Because he shrinks from washing.

HORNBY

The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation 50,000-watt station at Hornby will be officially opened by Hon. C. D. Howe, Minister of Transport, at 10 o'clock, Christmas morning.

The official opening will follow several days of testing, but it is expected the station will operate on a full sixteen-hour day schedule after Christmas.

SNIDER'S

Mrs. Alpheus Fish entertained the W.M.S. of Wesley Church at their Christmas meeting on Dec. 8th. The president, Mrs. Roy Fish, presided. A Christmas worship service was used followed by a playlet in which six members took part, which brought out the merits of the W.M.S. magazine, "The Missionary Monthly". Every person present gave a short reading on "Christmas in the Home Land," which noted Christmas incidents from coast to coast. The Roll Call was answered with a Christmas message. A letter was read from the Secretary of the United Church at Golden Prairie, Sask., thanking the ladies for the two bales of clothing sent to the National Relief and which were distributed to people in that district. Mrs. E. F. Wilson, leader of the Mission Band, told of her visit to the Church of All Nations, Toronto, where the scrap books and other articles made by the band members were left for Christmas cheer. Following the program, Rev. H. S. Lovering presided for the annual election of officers for 1938, resulting as follows: President, Mrs. Lorne Fish; vice-president, Mrs. H. T. Post; rec. sec., Mrs. E. Albertson; cor. sec., Miss A. Marshall; treas., Mrs. W. Pickering; secretaries—Christian stewardship, Mrs. E. A. Fish; supplies, Mrs. J. E. Dunne; temperance, Mrs. J. McSparran; Literature, Mrs. C. Fish; Community friendship, Mrs. R. K. Gibson; Flower convener, Mrs. R. Fish. Mr. Lovering expressed the thanks of the members to the retiring president for her untiring efforts during her term of office, also to Mrs. Wilson, for her work in the Mission Band. A sale of articles left from the Band bazaar among the twelve ladies present, resulted in a small sum being added to the missionary funds. The hostess entertained after the meeting.

The reorganization of the Mission Band was held on Saturday afternoon, resulting in the following officers being elected: President, Alfred Bentley; vice-president, Maurice Post; secretary, Wallace Pickering; treasurer, Phyllis Fish. Leader, Mrs. E. F. Wilson; assistant, Miss Eileen Pickering. For being the most regular attendant at the meetings throughout the year, Shirley Pickering was presented with a gift by Mrs. Wilson. Mrs. W. Goodeve, a visitor. Eleanor Hutton and Shirley Pickering contributed to the Christmas program. Receipts from the M.B. bazaar were announced as fifteen dollars.

Mr. Charles Hersom, Cookstown, spent the week-end at his home in Streetsville.

Peel Chapter, Order Eastern Star, Streetsville, will elect officers for 1938 at their regular meeting next Monday night, Dec. 20.

M. W. Carter, Brampton, has been elected president of the Peel County Plowmen. Herb. Ruston is first Vice and W. H. Hostrawser, second.

The Milton Short Courses now have an attendance of seventy and it is expected the number will be increased. The members of the agricultural class have visited such live stock farms as Lindsay Bros., Trafalgar; B. H. Bull & Son, Brampton; J. M. Fraser, Streetsville, and J. L. Neelands & Sons, Hornby.

REV. KERR PREACHES FAREWELL SERMON

Large Congregation Hears Final Message of Popular Minister

Rev. R. H. M. Kerr preached his farewell sermon in Geneva Presbyterian Church last Sunday evening and on Tuesday Mr. and Mrs. Kerr and Helen left for their new home in Streetsville.

There was a large congregation at the Sunday evening service, many of Rev. Kerr's friends in town and district joining with his own congregation to hear the final message from the pulpit of Geneva Church of one who has labored so diligently in the Master's service in this community, and who has made many warm friendships here.

Rev. Mr. Kerr's sermon was a scholarly effort which left a deep impression in the minds of his listeners. Choosing as his text Acts 20: 32, Mr. Kerr spoke of the difficulty that lay in preaching a farewell sermon although if the turnout at the services was always as large as the present one, then he would like to be saying "Good-Bye" every week. Ties have to be broken which can never again be re-formed on the same basis. He had made many friends not only in his own church but in the town and community as well. Mr. Kerr developed his sermon from three words, namely appreciation, recommendation and exhortation.

In his words of appreciation he thanked all the organizations of the church from the Session down for the co-operation and help they had so readily given him at all times.

In his "recommendation" he trusted that the church would be fortunate in its choice of a new minister and hoped that he would receive the same co-operation that had been accorded himself. He asked for the congregation's faithful attendance and also to remember the minister always at the Throne of Grace.

Rev. Mr. Kerr came to assume the pastorate of Geneva Presbyterian Church in December, 1935, and served the congregation as a student until he completed his final term at University when he was formally ordained on April 21st, 1936. During his two years' stay in town he and Mrs. Kerr took an active interest in the various church organizations and Mr. Kerr's Gospel messages on Sundays were always of a thought-provoking nature, indicating a great deal of preparation for his sermons. Rev. Mr. Kerr's pastorate here was highly successful in every way and he and his estimable helpmate and little Helen leave this community carrying with them the best wishes and kindly thoughts of everyone with whom they came in contact. It is Rev. Mr. Kerr's intention to continue his theological studies and in Streetsville he will have ready access to the University at Toronto, and it was with this in mind that his decision was made to leave Chesley.—Chesley Enterprise.

T. B. MUST BE SCIENTIFICALLY TREATED

The most important factor in the care of tuberculosis is rest. If a patient has tuberculosis of a joint, the limb is put to rest by splinting or by some other means. The same method applies to tuberculosis of the lungs. In a certain number of patients the diseased lung can be put at rest by artificial pneumothorax or by other surgical operations.

In most cases, however, the only way to rest the lungs is to rest the entire body. This general rest reduces all muscular action, thereby saving energy with which to fight the disease.

Mental case is also essential in the treatment of tuberculosis and neither freedom from worry nor proper rest can be had at home.

Hospitals alone can provide the proper environment and scientific treatment necessary to effect a cure and the earlier such treatment is sought by those afflicted, the greater is their chance of recovery.

The Muskoka and the Toronto Hospitals for Consumptives and the Queen Mary Hospital for Consumptive Children are equipped to serve those who are in need. The good they may do and the number they may serve is limited only by their means. This year these hospitals face an operating deficit of $123,000, which large sum must chiefly be raised through voluntary contributions.

If you can give anything to help this great, charitable work, will you please send it to National Sanitarium Association, 223 College Street, Toronto.

Worthwhile Hobby

Mrs. Albert Matthews, new "first lady" of Ontario, admits her most important hobby is her husband. Husbands in general will appreciate such leadership.—Niagara Falls Review.

Canada has retained the world wheat championship at the Chicago International Exhibition. In addition the crowns for barley and oats have come to this country. Canadian farmers are still second to none.—London Free Press.

A Super-Toothache

The international situation is like an ulcerated jaw. And it starts up reflex actions in three teeth, Italy, Germany and Japan, either singly of all together, so that one doesn't know exactly where to lay the finger on the cause. It is a super toothache.—Hamilton Spectator.

Home-Owners Wanted

Not quite half of the householders of Stratford now own their homes. Moreover, the trend is downward. Which is not a healthful situation. A community of home-owners is the ideal toward which civic administration should direct its efforts.—Stratford Beacon-Herald.

Sports and Morals

A sporting city is generally a good moral city. The promotion of sports is both a civic and social duty. You promote civic patriotism by keeping the boys interested in home sports. Be a good sport and support the games. A good bunch of rooters helps to create a winning spirit. — Guelph Mercury.

Government Ad Absurdum

That the number of Canadian governing bodies—28,000—could be cut by two-thirds or at least by half must be apparent to every serious citizen taking the time took over the situation. Indeed, the more one thinks of it the greater the puzzle becomes. Why have we been so cool and indifferent toward the building up of such a vast number of organizations to handle public money? No matter how good the intention, you must have serious overlapping and extravagance under such a system.—Windsor Star.

Till the Next Depression

But it is all very discouraging to the man on the street. While the depression was at its height—or should it be depth?—we used to hear politicians and money magnates declare that a new system would have to be devised so that such a disaster could never, never occur again. Cheerfully, as the curve of business swung upward, they began to present us each with his own plan for assuring future immunity from the unhappier consequences of the economic cycle. And now when we believe we have emerged from the woods what do we find? The reformers are putting their plans back into pigeon holes and the financiers are in a huddle talking of how to soften the blow when the next depression comes.—Calgary Albertan.

"Lifer" Is Given Six More Months

"Additional" Half Year Added to Life Term When Prisoner Assaults Guard

KINGSTON.—Already serving a life sentence for attempted murder, Pasquella Ferratti, 36-year-old Italian, was sentenced to serve "six additional months" for getting drunk and assaulting a prison steward.

"He did not knock me down, but my head rang for a week," Assistant Steward Frank Ellis told Magistrate Ambrose Shea.

Ellis, who is in charge of the vegetable cellar at the big prison, said he had found a pail of brew-mash hidden among the potatoes and carrots. Ferratti, considerably intoxicated, came along just as the discovery was made and swung at Ellis with a powerful right fist.

Ferratti told the court he had obtained the "home brew from someone else," but that he had drunk "plenty."

Anglo-U.S. Deal

Britain will make a trade pact with the United States. There are many reasons for welcoming it. Friendship follows trade, and Britain and America need to be friends. The talks on which the terms of this New Deal will be based have been communicated to the Dominion Governments. At all stages they have been informed and, so far, no objections. British trade policy now rests (since the Ottawa Trade Treaties 1932) on three bases. First comes the British producer; next the Empire producer; third the foreign producer. If the new pact gives preference to the Americans above all other non-British traders, the Daily Express will welcome it. There are ways in which American industry and agriculture are complementary to our own. But let's be plain. Ottawa stands.—London Daily Express.

Sees Two Menaces

An amusing commentary of these claims to champion mankind against the Soviet menace is forthcoming in resolutions passed by a body calling itself the India Independence League of Japan, with headquarters at Tokio. This body, whose president is Mr. Rash Bihari Bose—a character whose patriotism is shown by the fact that he has become a naturalized Japanese citizen—has resolved as follows. "Whereas true happiness and contentment cannot reign among the peoples of Asia till British Imperialistic and Russian Communistic influence and domination are completely put an end to . . . this League hereby earnestly requests China to cease hostilities immediately, make up with Japan, and present a united front against British Imperialism and Russian Communism, both of which are a great menace to humanity."—Times of India.

Canada Lacking In Self-Reliance

Not Thrown Enough on Own Resources, Says Regina Editor

WINNIPEG, — Canada has come through a series of great physical achievements "but one of our troubles is that we have not been thrown enough on our own mental resources," D. B. MacRae, of Regina, declared, who addressed the Winnipeg St. Andrew's Society's 66th annual celebration of St. Andrew's Day at which the Hon. Norman Armour, United States Minister to Canada, spoke of Scottish history and related anecdotes of Scotland to the audience of nearly 600.

"What is it about that little country of Scotland that inspires such devotion — what quality in its air, what colour in its hills or sound in its streams that keeps it so fragrant in the memory of its sons and daughters?" asked Mr. Armour. "It is a sentiment all of its own."

Mr. Armour said that lowering the trade barriers was the first step towards eliminating discord among the nations.

Democracies Must Unite

"It is naturally foolish to erect barriers between nations and expect cooperation and understanding to follow," he said on his arrival here to address the St. Andrew's dinner.

He stressed the urgency of Great Britain, the United States, France and Canada coming as close together as possible. "I believe that never before in history has it been so essential for the democracies of the world to be as clearly united as possible," he said.

A fossilized crab, probably more than 50,000,000 years old, has been unearthed during excavation work on the Highgate Tube extension, London, England.

Scientist Urges Study Of Life's Prolongation

Dr. Alexis Carrel Says That "Inner Time" Regulates Our Length of Existence.

Dr. Alexis Carrel, Rockefeller Institute scientist, who made small colonies of cells virtually immortal, last week forecast a new step in longer human life, by regulating "inner time," the human clock, whose hours are set by the blood and tissues.

Dr. Carrel spoke to the annual convention of the Association of Life Insurance Presidents. He proposed a new kind of scientific institute to study the process of ageing.

Body Must Have More Resistance

"The problem of longevity," he said, "is entering a new period of its history. So far increase in duration of life has resulted from hygiene and medicine. But these have nearly completed their work."

A few more discoveries, like preventing heart disease and cancer, he said, will bring further longevity, possibly to average into the 70's.

"Thereafter," he continued, "further lengthening of human existence will demand a new method. True prolongation will require improvement of the quality of tissues and blood; that is, more resistance to the body wearing out."

40 As Old As 60

This will be done by discovering how to regulate what Dr. Carrel named "inner time", also called the "physiological clock," by which some persons of 40 are really as old as others of 60.

The hands of this clock are the blood, its works are the tissues, its mainspring perhaps the mind. Its hours are age, and these have different lengths in different persons. This accounts, Dr. Carrel said, for the fact that the days of childhood seem very long, those of maturity and senescence disconcertingly rapid.

"Time Within Ourselves"

"Our time," he declared, "is not an outside event. It flows within ourselves."

That one of these hours can last indefinitely, perhaps forever, has been demonstrated at the Rockefeller Institute. But in a complex human being, for reasons not yet known, the hours do not last, even though, the well-known differences point to the possibility.

As an example of the hour that never ends, Dr. Carrel said a colony of tissue cells—that is, a bit of living flesh separated from the body—will live in a drop of serum. Left alone, the cells soon show signs of growing old. But if the waste products of the cells are not allowed to accumulate, "senescence and death are indefinitely postponed."

A bit of chicken embryo, taken from a heart in 1912, washed every few days ever since, is still growing as actively as twenty-five years ago at the institute.

News In Review

Urged to Forget Russia

BUCHAREST, Rumania — King Carol II and Premier George Tatarescu were reported to have warned French Foreign Minister Yvon Delbos last week that France must choose between close collaboration with Soviet Russia and faithful military support from Rumania.

Loyalist Victory

MADRID— Loyalist anti-tank gun crews were reported by the War Office to have blown to bits a squadron of "whippet" tanks which led a surprise rebel attack on positions in the Sierra Nevada Mountains southeast of Granada, last week-end.

The tank attack against the Government lines around Portugos and Pitres, 22 miles below Granada along the Treveles River, was launched after rebel infantry suffered heavy losses in two attempts to storm the well-fortified loyalist positions.

More Violence in Palestine

JERUSALEM— New acts of violence, including an attempt to bomb a freight train were reported in Palestine last week.

A bomb was discovered on the railway line between Jerusalem and Lydda shortly before a freight train passed over the spot. During its journey from Jerusalem to Lydda, the train was subjected to terrorist rifle fire. There were no casualties, however.

Terrorists again cut the Iraq pipeline, this time in the Jordan Valley. The agitators set fire to the oil which flowed from the breach.

Commentary on the Highlights of the Week's News . . . by Peter Randal

BOOST FOR CANADA: "A fortnight's holiday on the east coast of Canada would give better value for the money spent, than a month in many overcrowded Continental resorts". Thus spoke the Duke of Gloucester to a Canada Club dinner last week in London, adding the hope that he and the Duchess might be able to come here in the near future. If the Duke had no real intention of sojourning in Canada, and made the remark merely to seem pleasant and agreeable, he will now be put rather on the spot, poor chap. At any rate his statement is a good advertisement for Canada, as a holiday resort.

SHOWMANSHIP: A writer in the Toronto Financial Post leads a timely discussion of Canada's sad lack of "showmanship". The fifth largest trading nation of the world has fallen down badly, he says, in national advertisement. The exposition is suggested as a good medium. At the Paris show this year, our exhibits lacked the punch and glamor of modern showmanship — they "missed the boat", seemed dull and old-fashioned among more clever contemporaries. They overplayed the Indian, the trapper and the things of yesteryear when they should have told of our present development and the promise of the future. Canada will have other chances, however, at the Glasgow Exhibition in 1938 and the New York World's Fair the following year. Exhibits at these, the Post says, should be designed to represent present-day life in Canada, should assist exporters in the sale of goods, induce tourists to visit our country. May the Government lend an attentive ear to these constructive suggestions!

FIASCO: Nobody really expected anything to come of the Brussels Nine-Power Conference convoked to settle the Sino-Japanese question. How complete a fizzle it turned out to be, however, is realized only when one learns that its sole accomplishment was the production of "A Report" — not a report on anything, just "A Report". It's the old fable once again of the mountain giving birth to a mouse. Even "A Report" was the result of heated wrangling, the American Ambassador fighting vainly to have it entitled, "A Report to the Governments Here Represented."

Not addressed to anyone, "A Report" covers twelve typewritten pages with an historical summary in which Japan and China are pictured as entangled in difficulties "such that solution can be achieved only by the co-operation of all countries interested in the Far East". "A Report" has indeed told us something, there.

QUESTION MARK: Claiming that the whole future "is a gigantic question mark", Lammat du Pont, President of E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., one of the wealthiest concerns in the United States, has proposed to his fellow manufacturers in all fields that a huge $25,000,000,000 program be instituted to create 3,000,000 new jobs, lend new expansion to industry. Before such a scheme can be launched, he said, the Government will have to dispel the fog enshrouding business and guarantee a reasonable amount of certainty upon which it can count in planning current and future operations. Further, "New jobs, new wealth and agricultural prosperity could be produced only through planned research, planned development and planned expansion of plant, sales and administration facilities. That meant, he said "planned expenditure of capital months and years in advance of any penny of return." Mr. du Pont is now offering of his own free will to endorse that which President Roosevelt has all along been trying to induce big industry to do. The outcome may be that Mr. Roosevelt turns down his offer Mr. du Pont will be able to blame the New Deal for any further recession in business.

GIVE HIM SIX YEARS: In spite of his continual talking and campaigning for colonies, Reichskanzler Adolf Hitler last week admitted that he didn't expect to have German demands answered for another six years at least.

Hitler is right in this that for the present Britain and France are not ready (intimidated though they be) to rush forward and offer to make a gift of certain sections of their territories to Germany. But Britain and France: "Germany's colonial demands require 'much more extended study'."

HOW MUCH TO EAT: A nation-wide nutrition survey is soon to be made with the purpose of discovering what the food requirements are at the various stages of human development; what the Canadian working man's requirements are and what resources are available to supply them. The data will be gathered by the (approximately) members of the National Council on Nutrition who will pick out 50 typical families across the Dominion and make an intensive study of their diet down to the last detail. Something very important will have been achieved when it is found out exactly how much each person needs as food. Then will be our business as Canadians to see that every individual receives the proper amount.

To Qualify As President

DUBLIN, Ireland—A Czechoslovakian Count, whose ancestors left Ireland more than 200 years ago, prepared last week to become an Irish citizen so that he might be qualified to succeed Eamon de Valera as President of the Free State.

Count Edward Taafe, who recently sold his vast estates near Prague, is one of a half dozen men proposed for the Free State's first President under the new Constitution which will become effective December 29.

Amalgamation Wanted

WINNIPEG — Premier Bracken asked the Dominion-Provincial Relations Commission at its last sitting in Winnipeg this week to make a thorough study of the proposal to unite the three Prairie Governments into one. He related the history of the abortive attempt of his Government in 1932 to get action on such a plan in order to have one Legislative meeting per year, instead of three; one university, instead of three; and one civil service staff, instead of three, to head the west.

May Join Fascist Axis

ROME—Fascist circles hinted this week that Premier Milan Stoyadinovich of Jugoslavia may recommend, after conferences with Premier Mussolini, that Jugoslavia withdraw from the Little Entente and join the Rome-Berlin axis.

Foreign diplomats said that the report, which would be a severe blow to the French security system in Central and Southeastern Europe if true, probably was mere "wishful thinking" on Italy's part. They admitted, however, that Stoyadinovich's week-long visit in Italy indicated closer collaboration among Rome, Berlin and Belgrade.

Urges Conservatives Reorganize

TORONTO—Hon. Dr. R. J. Manion, Conservative former Federal Railways Minister, addressing Conservative businessmen here this week declared "nobody knows what is the policy of the Federal Conservative party." The party must be reorganized, he said.

Disagree With Agreement

CALGARY—Protest to the Federal Government against the proposed new Dominion-Provincial relief agreement has been made by the Alberta Government, it is learned here.

New French Minister Here

OTTAWA—Count Robert de Dampierre, new French Minister to Canada, arrived last week to take up his post, and paid a formal call on Justice Minister Lapointe, acting head of the Government in the absence of Prime Minister Mackenzie King.

The province, according to word received by Mayor Andrew Davison from Hon. W. W. Cross, Minister of Health, has endorsed the recommendations of Alberta cities holding the agreement would be inequitable in comparison with the assistance given to other provinces.

Japanese Apology

LONDON—Japanese naval authorities this week-end apologized for the bombing of two British ships, the Tuckwo and the Tatung, at Wuhu, last week. One of the ships was so damaged it had to be beached. The British Government is considering an indemnity claim.

Junior Farmers Visit International Harvester Plants at Hamilton

62 winners of their own respective Farm Clubs throughout the Dominion of Canada journeyed to Hamilton from the Royal Winter Fair, to be guests of the International Harvester Company of Canada Limited. Here they were shown how farm implements and binder twine are manufactured. This picture was taken immediately following their tour through the two large plants. At a luncheon in the Company cafeteria, A. E. MacLaurin, General Secretary of the Canadian Council on Boys' and Girls' Club work, spoke on the work of the Clubs, made possible by a fund to which the Harvester Company contributed generously, to teach better methods to the 35,000 young farmers who now belong to the Farm Clubs. Accompanying these 62 winners were J. C. Magnan, President of the organization, and other officials. F. M. Morton, Vice-President of the Company and Honorary President of the Canadian Council on Boys' and Girls' Club work, was the official host and invited the winners in future years to visit Hamilton again. The picture includes representatives from a number of Ontario Clubs.

Mother of Five Who Was Always Tired

Now Awakes as Fresh as a Daisy

A mother of five has a lot to do. Especially a country mother. And this one was "always tired." But Kruschen ended all that—now she gets up, feeling fresh, at five o'clock in the morning! She writes:

"I find Kruschen Salts the best thing money can buy for my health. I am the mother of five children, and before taking Kruschen, I was always feeling tired and run down. Now, I am glad to say that I get up feeling fresh—and I get up at five o'clock in the morning. I do my housework, look after my children, and leave the house at 6:30 to start my daily work."—(Mrs.) B.

Tiredness and that run-down feeling can be traced to one root cause. That cause is internal sluggishness; failure to keep the inside free from poisonous, waste matter.

Kruschen Salts is an excellent recipe for maintaining a condition of internal cleanliness. The numerous salts in Kruschen stimulate your internal organs to smooth, regular action. Your inside is thus kept clear of those impurities which, when allowed to accumulate, lower the whole tone of the system.

Physician Gave Himself Cancer

Hopes to Prove Theory That Cancer May Be Transmitted by Direct Inoculation

A little, grey-haired Cuban physician sat in his study at Havana the other night, occasionally rubbing several little hard spots on his left arm which may eventually cause his death from cancer.

But to Dr. Matias Duque, Cuba's first Secretary of Public Health, these little risings under his skin meant something more important than the life of one human being.

He hopes they will prove his theory that cancer may be transmitted from one person to another by direct inoculation and thus provide a specific clue for the development of a cure for the disease that takes hundreds of lives annually.

Voluntary "Guinea Pig"

Last October 9 the 70-year-old doctor became a voluntary "human guinea pig" for cancer experiment. He had himself inoculated four times with "filtrates of cancerous elements," taken from a cancerous tumor removed from a woman patient.

Small subcutaneous hardnesses are now appearing where he was inoculated. They have been developing slowly for nearly a month.

Dr. Duque says he cannot yet classify the little clots, but believes they may be the beginning of a cancerous growth.

The doctor gave up regular practice years ago to devote the rest of his life to cancer research, after two members of his family died from the disease.

Boars Win From Bears In Battle

A fight to the death between wild boars and bears recently occurred in Yugoslavia. The boars won.

The battle followed a huge drive by peasants against the animals which had been doing tremendous damage to crops in the district. This hunt led to several families of bears and a pack of boars being cornered in a forest glade. Then the fun started. The animals forgot the hunters and started a free fight.

Boars and bears fought desperately for an hour and then the bears fled, leaving a number of dead behind them.

RHEUMATIC PAINS

Attack Uric Acid with FYNNON SALT

Back to Nature! If only we could all do that, there would be no more Rheumatic pains to drive their agonizing rapier into the tortured joints of stricken humanity. But Rheumatic pains do exist, as thousands of sufferers know only too well. Nature's job is to drive them out and keep the system free from uric acid that causes so much unnecessary suffering.

There is a remedy for Rheumatic pains that comprises a combination of natural Salts of the Earth — Fynnon Salt. Containing Sodium, Potassium, Lithium, and other ingredients with high remedial potency, Fynnon Salt puts up an irresistible attack on uric acid (the cause of Rheumatism, Sciatica, Lumbago, etc.). It dissolves the acid crystals and washes them away. Get rid of the acid and the crystals cannot form. Absence of crystals means blessed freedom from the knife stabs that torture the very soul of the Rheumatic Sufferer. If you are a Rheumatic sufferer try Fynnon Salt. Take it every day. Even one large 75c package will convince you that in this famous British remedy you have found the relief you have long been looking for. Get Fynnon Salt from your druggist today. If you have any difficulty getting supplies, write Laurentian Agencies, St. Gabriel Street, Montreal.

Tolerance, Faith Needed To Solve Our Problems

Declared Hon. Newton Rowell at Opening Session at Winnipeg of the Royal Commission On Dominion-Provincial Relations.

The same spirit of tolerance, courage and faith which enabled the Fathers of Confederation to achieve Canadian unity 70 years ago, will enable the Canadian people to solve all their present problems, Hon. Newton Rowell declared at Winnipeg before the initial session of the Royal Commission on Dominion-Provincial Relations.

Commission's Task

He declared the commission's task was:

1. To re-examine the economic and financial basis of Confederation and the distribution of legislative powers in the light of economic and social developments of the last seventy years.

2. To investigate the character and amount of taxes collected from the people of Canada and to determine whether taxation as at present allocated and imposed is as equitable and as efficient as can be devised.

3. To examine public expenditures and public debts in general in order to determine the ability of the Dominion and Provincial governments to discharge their constitutional responsibilities within the frame work of the present allocation of powers or on the basis of some form of reallocation thereof.

Seek Balance of Relationship

4. To investigate the whole question of Dominion subsidies and grants to provincial governments. This necessarily involves the question of whether a system of subsidies and grants to provincial governments is the best method of enabling provincial governments to discharge their responsibilities or whether there are more effective alternatives.

5. Following these inquiries the commission is instructed "to consider and report upon the facts disclosed by their investigations and to express what, in their opinion, subject to the retention of the distribution of legislative powers essential to a proper carrying out of the federal system in harmony with national needs and the promotion of national unity, will best effect a balance of relationship between the financial powers and the obligations and functions of each governing body and conduce to a more efficient, independent and economical discharge of governmental responsibilities in Canada."

HAVE YOU HEARD

CHRISTMAS TIMES

Oh, what joy there is in living on Christmas;
What a charm there is in living
on Christmas.
What a pleasure 'tis to see children dancing
Merrily 'round the decorated tree
on Christmas.

Is your heart becoming a little more soft?. . . That's the spirit of Santa Claus, coming only once a year, but splendid even for so short a while.

Visitor—Do you think it is proper to use profanity to a mule?

Farmer—So far as my own feelings are concerned it is highly improper. But when you are trying to get along with as sensitive and exacting an animal as a mule, you've simply got to humor him.

"Of all the things you wear, your expression is the most important."

She—Funny no one semed to realize what a bad egg he was while he was rich.

He—My dear, a bad egg is only known when it's broke.

The English laugh at a joke three times—

First—When they hear it.
Second—When they tell it.
Third—When they understand it.

All the world loves a fat man, if he answers to the name of Claus.

Student — (looking up from his book)—More than five thousand elephants a year go to make our piano keys.

Landlady—Really? It's remarkable what these beasts can be trained to do.

Poor—Were you presented at court when you were in England?

Rich—Yes, and I had to pay five pounds' fine.

Bill — What's that noise over there?

Ted — Oh, Patching Bloke, the fighter, is having a tooth pulled.

One of the big secrets of happiness is to tackle our work joyously. To attack it with gusto and a smile. To wade into it with the spirit of a conquering chief. When one works joyously at the wood pile, the ledger, or the typewriter, the hours flash by, the sunshine enters our heart and the world seems a good place in which to live.

To come to our work with a grouch, a frown, and inward reluctance, is to cramp our creative energies and stifle our power to think. The joyous spirit is the spark that gets things done! It releases a flow of ideas. It makes the chips fly. Joyousness attracts the best.

Tourer—So your daughter is going around the world during the Christmas holidays. Is she prepared for the journey?

De Tourer—Well, she can say "NO" in 12 languages.

"Of all sad words of tongue, or pen, the saddest are these:—"Don't open till Christmas."

Traveler—Can I get anything to eat in this dump?

Negro Waiter—Yes, sah, yo' sho' kin.

Traveler—Such as what?

Negro Waiter—Such as it is, sah.

The train roared past the station. Above the noise the station agent heard a yell. Rushing out to the platform, he saw a man sprawled out alongside the tracks. A little girl was standing:

Agent— Did he try to catch the train?

Little Girl—He did catch it, but it got away from him.

We give up luxuries for war. Do we give up luxuries for peace?

Hare Cycles Said Ten Years Apart

Northern Snowshoe Rabbits Are Found to "Die Off" Every Decade

The popular belief that the snowshoe rabbits of Canada's north woods die off every seven years is challenged in a report on a four-year study of hare periodicity, just published. The cycles are nearer 10 years in length on the average, it is stated.

The study was made by Dr. D. A. MacLulich under the joint auspices of the department of biology, University of Toronto, and the Royal Ontario Museum of Zoology.

Vary in Different Areas

It concerned only the varying hare, Lepus Americanus, which also is called the snowshoe rabbit. This is the common hare of Ontario from Muskoka northward and of the north woods of Canada generally. It turns white in winter.

The report of Dr. MacLulich found that hares do not reach their peak of abundance or begin to die off in the same year in all parts of Ontario. Hare populations were found to vary from about one to a square mile in times of extreme scarcity to more than 1,000 in the same area in times of abundance. Highest number encountered was in the north part of Frontenac County in July, 1932, when there were 3,400 to the square mile.

Thief Sells Goods In Owner's Absence

A furniture dealer was recently asked to call at a house and value some goods. When he arrived he was met by a woman in a dressing-gown who showed him round and offered him some real bargains. The dealer jumped at the offers, loaded the bargains on his van, paid cash and drove away.

Two days later he discovered that he had not removed all the goods he had bought. He went back to the house but could get no reply. Then out came a neighbour who informed him that the tenants were on holiday. The police are still searching for the woman in the dressing-gown who was really a burglar. She was selling the furniture of the owners while the house was unoccupied.

Chance For Life Given Ontario's Children By Hospital For Sick Children

Paralysis Epidemic Reminds Province of Type of Service Given Every Day For 62 Years

Like a spectre out of the dark ages, Infantile Paralysis (Poliomyelitis) appeared in Ontario homes late last July.

Rich and poor, old and young city dweller and farmer—all were hit. Appearing without warning, striking where least expected, the horror spread. By late August an epidemic of major proportions was with us.

School opening was postponed over a great portion of Ontario. Children died before they could be rushed to hospitals.

Nearly every parent in the Province was concerned and took what precautions seemed best to have children avoid contacts which might bring the ghastly plague to them. But mystery still shrouds the way in which this dread disease is spread.

Then, the Iron Lung became front-page news. In all Ontario there were only three Iron Lungs available. Telephone enquiries to Boston and Montreal manufacturers produced the indefinite promise that MAYBE in ten days or two weeks ONE could be shipped.

But children were in danger, lives were at stake. IRON LUNGS were needed at once. So the officials and staff of The Hospital for Sick Children decided to build IRON LUNGS themselves.

In less than eight hours, a crude but workable wooden lung was finished—less than 30 minutes before the doctor had said a little patient would die unless a respirator could be provided.

Four more Iron Lungs (wonders in design and operation) were rushed to completion in as many days. Enthused workmen gave up Saturday, Sunday and the Labor Day holiday to fabricate the steel shapes and parts under the direction of Hospital officials. These machines went into instant service.

The Provincial Department of Health then asked that twenty-three more IRON LUNGS be built with all possible speed, so that children from every part of the Province might be provided the only possible chance for life during the later stages of the disease.

Thus was the emergency met by The Hospital for Sick Children when many lives were at stake. There was no thought of expense or human limitations. The job had to be done, and was done despite the fact that it meant night and day service for many, many weeks.

But this is just typical of the service The Hospital for Sick Children has rendered for over 60 years.

Every hour of every day and night some emergency must be met. The life of a child, precious to some family, is at stake. It is only when dozens of similar cases occur at the same time that the work becomes "news," and can be called to the attention of the public by the press in a spectacular manner. Nevertheless, the work goes on hour after hour until the days and months and years total decades of service to the needy children of the Province.

Every emergency situation creates costs which mount up far beyond the normal provisions of government and municipal grants. But, unlike most other hospitals, The Hospital for Sick Children has no large group of Private Ward beds from which to draw extra revenue which can be applied to Public Ward service.

Over 400 of the 420 beds are in Public Wards.

No help is received from the fund collected by the Toronto Federation for Community Service, as patients are taken from all over the Province.

Sick and crippled children must be given medical attention and hospital care no matter what their circumstance. No one would deny them this right.

This worthy institution has just started its annual Christmas appeal for funds to enable its work to be continued in just as effective a manner as in the past.

Those who have investigated all agree that The Hospital for Sick Children makes most careful use of charitable donations and bequests—a world-wide recognition for efficiency and economical operation has been earned.

Your gift should be mailed to the Appeal Secretary, The Hospital for Sick Children, 67 College street, Toronto.

A chance for health and happiness is the greatest possible Christmas gift to childhood.

Letter from Wilfrid Dunton

The following is a letter written by Wilfrid P. Dunton from France in response to an invitation to the recent "Gerry Night" reunion.

Interrupting his schooling to serve in the army during the war, Mr. Dunton returned to graduate as an engineer from the University of Toronto. Since then his profession has taken him far from his birthplace at Britannia. After two lengthy periods in the Argentine he has spent several years in France representing manufacturers of Canada and the United States.

Cima Wallut Croix Nord,
14 Nov., 1937.

Mr. Clifford E. Cantelon,
Streetsville, Ont., Canada.

Dear Cliff:

I was very pleased to have your letter with the announcement of a high school reunion. I am sorry indeed not to be present and particularly so since you are honoring Mr. Gerhard. I had not heard of his resignation and it came as quite a surprise to me.

When you mention our class of 1910, I can't believe that we started to S.H.S. 27 years ago, it seems less than 17 to me. Especially when I begin to recall the good times we had at the old school—mostly good times except perhaps for Mr. Gerhart's c et drill in the flats or Mr. Kemp's classes in Latin, French and German. I have wished many times since that Mr. Kemp had used something more persuasive than a pointer, or ruler—a club for example—and pounded the languages into me.

Located as I am in Lille just now, I quite often go into Germany on business and sometimes on pleasure as Germany is a very beautiful country and travel is made reasonable for tourists. It is true that one can travel in Europe today almost anywhere on the beaten paths with nothing but English. But if one wishes to get any real idea of the spirit of the countries or the people, French at least is necessary and German is an additional advantage. You can imagine how little one would find out living in Ontario if they did not know or speak English.

One of the great obstacles in the way of a lasting peace in Europe is the problem of different languages. A foreigner living in France or Germany, can see so clearly that if the various peoples could talk to each other and get acquainted in millions, they would soon be able to see each other's viewpoint. With the good feeling and common understanding that has grown up between Canada and the United States in the last hundred years, a war between the two countries today or in the future seems unthinkable. Given the ability to hear and understand radio broadcasts from all over the world, the people of countries in Europe would become less and less subject to dictators and war lords.

In Canada too, it seems to me, many of our difficulties would clear up if the English and French speaking Canadians could get together and understand each other's position. Every Canadian child should be taught English and French in school and started at an early age.

In France, Canadians receive a more cordial welcome than visitors from any other country and French people thinking of a trip abroad almost invariably think of Canada because it is the only foreign country where French is spoken. Many times I have been embarrassed when meeting Frnch people and hearing them say, "Well, of course you speak French." When I have to reply that I never spoke French in Canada nor visited Montreal or Quebec, they are amazed. And I have to admit to them that a French tourist in Toronto would have a much worse time without English than I had myself in South America without Spanish.

In the world politics of the future Canada has a conspicuous part to play. As she becomes more and more the connecting link between the United States and the British Empire she should also be an important link between France and the British Empire. If we are to continue having peace among the great nations, it seems pretty certain that it will depend upon these three nations working together.

During the past summer I had the opportunity of visiting St. Malo in Brittany and it gave me real pleasure as a Canadian to see the house of Jacques Cartier and the port from which he set sail to make the first white settlement in Canada nearly one hundred years before the Pilgrim Fathers landed in New England.

Then a year ago, I had the privilege of being present at the unveiling of the Canadian War Memorial on Vimy Ridge, and its dedication to the thousands of Canadians killed in France. There, in Canadian soil, facing one—if not the finest—of all the War Memorials, and listening to the voices of the British King, the President of the French Republic and the Prime Minister of Canada, I felt sure that hundreds of Canadians gathered there were conscious of the warmth of feeling so evident between the French and British peoples and were also conscious of the challenge to Canada as the logical meeting ground of the two peoples to keep that spirit alive.

If there is one plea I may make to my class at Streetsville High School, it is that each member have their children taught to speak French and if possible, visit French Canada.

Since leaving S.H.S. I have not been able to keep in touch with many members of my class or of other classes during my time. I have, however, been fortunate in occasionally seeing Gilbert Templeton, Hal Couse, George King, Florence Kennedy, Cecil Leary, and this summer at the Coronation in London, Reba Weylie and Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Couse. We hoped to be able to visit the British battlefields later, but were unable to arrange it.

I would certainly like to renew old times with you at the reunion. I well remember one we had about 1912 in connection with which we held a concert and bazaar. Remember me to all at th reunion whom I knew at school, to Mr. Kemp and any other of our teachers you may be in touch with, and I would like to join with you in honoring Mr. Gerhart as a teacher, a good fellow and friend; and in wishing him and his wife the best of good luck in the new enterprise.

With kind regards,
Very sincerely yours,
"PETE" DUNTON.

UNITED CHURCH NEWS

In the course of his sermon last Sunday night Mr. Jones made reference to the attempt to unload in Canada great stocks of Japanese goods by Mail order sales. The goods are not advertised as Japanese but are offered at 50% below what are said to be proper prices. The goods are grossly inferior and the business does not reflect credit upon business houses concerned. In this day when people are averse to trading in Japanese goods business houses ought to make clear that the goods offered are of this type and make.

A certain young twin asked the question "How many go to your school" replied, I think that before we went there were 15 but now we go there are 16. She always thinks of herself and her twin sister as one. Do all twins think like that?

The United Church Sunday School is holding its usual White Gift service next Sunday morning and all who can make gifts are invited to bring these to either School or Church. The goods will go to the Fred Victor Mission for Christmas distribution.

The Sunday School Anniversary services of the United Church will be held Sunday, Dec. 26th, morning and evening. Special music by the Choir.

The Women's Association of the United Church met at the parsonage Tuesday afternoon to receive reports and elect officers. The reports were most gratifying and Mrs. Durie, the retiring President, thanked the ladies warmly for the splendid co-operation she had received through the year. The election was conducted under the chairmanship of Rev.) Jones and resulted in the election of the following officers: President, Mrs. John E. Dowling; 1st Vice, Mrs. Longworth; 2nd Vice, Mrs. Montemurro; Recording Secretary, Mrs. Redick; Assistant Secretary, Mrs. Langmaid; treasurer, Mrs. Caslor; Ass't. Treasurer, Mrs. Lindsay; Hon. Presidents, Mrs. Bunt and Mrs. Durie; Organists, Mrs. Bruce, Mrs. Lindsay; Silver and Linen Com., Mrs. Gould, Mrs. C. H. Falconer; Flower Com., Mrs. Andrew, Mrs. Watson; Parsonage Com., Mrs. H. Cooke, Mrs. Bruce, Mrs. Bunt, Mrs. Lindsay; Visiting Com., Mrs. Wagner, Mrs. Gould, Mrs. Dingwall, Mrs. Langmaid, Mrs. Jones. The hostess served a delicious lunch. Twenty-one ladies were present.

The SNAPSHOT GUILD

TRAVEL INTO FAIRYLAND

Have a heart-to-heart talk with yourself! Double exposure, accurately planned, will let you.

DO you remember the wonder tales you read when a child, the forbidding castles filled with ogres, the huge jinn of the Arabian Nights, the trolls that lived under bridges and the fairies that haunted mysterious woodlands?

You can use your camera to recreate those childhood memories. You can make giants walk through your pictures. You can hold yourself, or a tiny version of yourself, in the hollow of your own hand. You can pose in intimate conversation with the Irish "wee people," the elves and fairies and the cobbling leprechaun.

It's not hard. The method is to use our old friend, the double exposure—two shots on the same film. All that is necessary is accurate posing and careful control of the light. A black background is necessary or you can pose your subject before the door of a dark room.

Note the picture above. Although it was made with a camera having a ground glass for focusing, which simplifies making such pictures, you can get the same effect with your own small camera. First, pose the subject fairly close to the camera, with his empty hand extended. Snap the picture and mark the position of the hand on the glass view finder, very carefully, with a tiny dot of ink.

Now, without winding the film, move the camera back several feet, so the subject appears small in the view finder. Let him stand, facing his former position, so that his feet appear right on the ink dot in the finder. Arrange the light so the feet are not too brightly illuminated. This will help elliminate evidence of slight errors in the position of the subject. Snap the shutter a second time and the final picture is made. When the picture is developed, presto!—there are the little man and the big one, facing each other on the same film.

You will probably make mistakes in placement on your first tries, because the view finder is small, but this is part of the fun of trying trick photography — and some of your errors may give a funnier picture than the one you carefully planned. It is well to remember that only the figures in these shots can be lighted—if surrounding objects show up, they will spoil the picture.

If your camera has an "open" direct view finder, without glass, it is best not to try this sort of work. If, however, you have a camera with ground glass back, you can place figures wih greater accuracy.

With this technique, you can make a fairy dance on the table in front of you—the fairy being your small daughter in her ballet dress. If you want to make the little figures transparent, shorten exposure a little. You can, if you like, do costume work, illustrating the fairy tales you enjoyed as a child. Try Jack and the Beanstalk, with an intrepid small boy eluding the grasp of a fierce ogre. Or get an old hiking brogan and a copy of Mother Goose and picture the Old Lady Who Lived In A Shoe.

Flame-Ignited Explosive for Engines Is Very Old

The history of the internal combustion engine goes back hundreds of years. The Encyclopedia Britannica records the earliest proposal to utilize explosions (of gunpowder) to obtain continuous motive power as having probably been made by Christian Huygens in 1680 and by Papin and the Abbe Hautefeuille later. Street in 1794 proposed an engine driven by a flame-ignited explosive mixture of vaporized spirits of turpentine and air, this being regarded by Sir Dugald Clerk as the first real gas engine described in Britain. In 1820 W. Cecil described his actually working hydrogen-air gas engine.

Other early inventors of similar engines, states a writer in the Detroit News, were Samuel Brown, William Barnett, Lebon, Barsanti and Matteuci. Barnett suggested the principle of compression; Lebon in 1799 had used an electric spark to ignite the gas and had also referred to the principle of compression. Etienne Lenoir in 1860 patented a gas engine and two years later built and drove the first gasoline-driven vehicle. Dr. N. A. Otto of Cologne, Germany, in 1876 invented an engine in which the gas was compressed before being exploded; this improvement so increased the efficiency of the internal combustion engine that it began to be considered as a competitor of the steam engine. His four-cycle engine was further improved and adapted to motor cars by Gottlieb Daimler of Wurttemburg and Carl Benz of Mannheim in 1885 and 1886.

Court Jesters Employed Back in the Middle Ages

Jesters, court-fools or professed sayers of witty things and makers of amusement, were maintained by princes or nobles in courts of the middle ages and later. The dress of the jester was usually showy, or even gaudy, and toward the end of the time when jesters were employed it was always typically many-colored or motley; but as jesters in some early courts were men of considerable intellectual ability, and in some cases of good family, their dress was not always conspicuously distinguished from that of those with whom they mingled.

The bauble, sometimes very small and of rich materials, was the only certain badge of the jester's employment.

The fools of Shakespeare's plays indicate a certain lowering of the rank of the jester in the Sixteenth and Seventeenth centuries. As far as is known, the last one employed in England was Archie Armstrong (died in 1672), the court of James I, and afterward of Charles I.

Inventive Genius Dangerous

The mechanical clock, the ancestor of our modern clocks and watches, originated in the Middle ages; and, like everything which started in that period, its beginnings are concealed by a haze of romance and fable. Tradition says that the first clock was invented by a French monk named Gerbert, one of the most accomplished scholars of his age. About 990 A. D. he is supposed to have produced some kind of mechanical time-telling contrivance which caused a sensation—so much so that he was promptly accused of being a sorcerer. The accusation did not "take," and Gerbert lived to enter the Vatican as Pope Sylvester II, but his experience shows that inventive genius was a risky thing to have in those days.

Early Transportation

The mode of transportation for the sick and injured in the pioneer days—when a vehicle was not at hand—was a long stretcher between two horses. Two long poles were fastened from the packsaddle of one horse to the packsaddle of another horse, and a network of bark was strung between the poles. On this the sick or injured person was laid to be carried to a place where medical attention could be obtained.

Oldest College Cheer

The oldest college cheer is claimed to be the Princeton locomotive cheer: "Tiger, tiger, tiger! Sis, sis, sis! Boom, boom, boom, Ahh!" Invented by an unknown soldier of New York's Seventh regiment on April 30, 1861, the cheer caught the fancy of Princeton undergraduates who heard it that night as the Seventh passed through the college town on its way to war.

Rafflesias, Parasitic Plants

Rafflesias are remarkable parasitic plants of the East Indies which attack various vines of the grape family. The only visible part of the plant consists of a large flower. A species native to Sumatra bears a flower three feet in diameter which has the appearance of decomposing flesh and exhales a carrion-like odor which attracts carrion insects.

Trinidad Long Under British

Southernmost of the chain of British and French islands that form the eastern boundary of the Caribbean sea, Trinidad has been under the English flag since 1797, when British troops landed there during a British war with Spain. Earlier, in 1595, an expedition under Sir Walter Raleigh invaded the island and burned the capital.

Trinity Church Notes

On Monday evening the A.Y.P.A held their regular meeting in the Parish Hall. The programme was under the direction of Messrs. Thomas Goodge and Charles Mercer, of the Deanery Local Council. Mr. Goodge gave a brief but comprehensive history of the Prayer Book, and then threw the meeting open for questions. The subject of Mr. Mercer's address was "Fares" making the point that in life it is possible to travel half fare "ride the rods," travel on a pass, or pay full fare. In the course of his remarks it became evident that the only safe and useful life can be lived by paying "full fare."

At the close of the meeting refreshments were served

SKY GIRL

By NELLIE GRAF

Elinor Ames tries to escape the heartbreak of her postponed marriage to Dr. Norman Rogers by becoming an air stewardess. Dr. Rogers' mother approves an alliance between Norman and wealthy Francine Bayliss. Norman is jealous of Jack Newton, the pilot who helped Elinor get her job. Leola Rogers, Norman's sister, is in love with Jack, and Elinor tries to help her. Another stewardess, Judith Blair, a former sweetheart of Jack's, is jealous of Elinor, and starts a bitter campaign against her. Elinor is asked peremptorily to report to the office of the Chief Stewardess.

CHAPTER III

When Elinor reached the office of the Chief Stewardess, Sally Nelson cleared her throat.

"There's a report," she said "that you've been smoking in uniform outside the rest room. I thought I explained that this is a violation of a strict company rule?"

"Smoking!" Elinor exclaimed. "Why Sally, I don't smoke at all. Never have. I can't imagine who would say such a thing."

"I hoped it was an error," Sally spoke in a relieved tone. "Must have been one of the other girls. I will try to find out."

Elinor tried to dimiss the incident but it kept recurring to her mind, till she reached her apartment, where she found Leola Rogers in tears.

"Why, Leola, what is it?"

"It's — it's Jack," sobbed Leola. "He has been coming to see me a lot lately and I thought that he acted like he cared and then —"

"Then — what?" prodded Elinor.

"I — I — got a job."

"Is that all?" Elinor grinned. "I'm sure Jack does not object seriously to working girls."

"But it isn't that." Leola sat up and dried her tears abruptly. "It's that Ned Cathney got the job for me. You see I'm receptionist for the Cathney Powder Company. Ned is the president's son. We've been going around together lately."

"So Jack is jealous," Elinor teased. "I should say that is a good sign."

"But he isn't," Leola said angrily. "He just doesn't like Ned. He told me I'd have to get another job. And I won't be bossed. I won't!" Leola angrily stamped her foot. "Not by anyone. So we—we quarreled." Leola's tears came again. "And I told him I never wanted to see him again."

"The course of true love doesn't run smooth," quoted Elinor, " and never is a long time. I'll talk to Jack."

"Unnecessary Friendliness"

Elinor did talk to Jack, but she found him very stubborn. "I never did like Ned Cathney," he declared, "and as for that firm — there is more than one shady deal credited to it. I don't want Leola to work there."

"Then explain your reasons to her," Elinor pleaded. "She cares for you, Jack. Surely, you are not going to let this spoil everything."

They were standing in the doorway of their ship's cabin. Elinor moved close to Jack as she spoke and placed her hand on his arm.

Glancing out just then, she saw Judith Blair.

Evidently, Judith had just got out of her own ship. Sally Nelson was standing nearby. She turned, quickly, after Judith spoke to her and then looked at Elinor and Jack.

Elinor took her hand from Jack's arm and moved away. Seen with unfriendly eyes, that earnest gesture must have looked like the "unnecessary friendliness" which was stressed as undesirable in the company rule.

Elinor jumped out of the plane and went toward the girls.

"Hello, Sally. Hello, Judith."

Judith deliberately turned her back. Sally Nelson's voice was distinctly cool. "Hello, Elinor. Better get back to your ship. It's almost time to leave." There was disquieting disapproval in the Chief Stewardess' voice.

Elinor studied her load manifest in an effort to dismiss the incident. She paused at the name, 'Chet Worthing. Why that was the young man to whom Norman had introduced her as being engaged to Francine Bayless. Leola had said later that Chet "had given Fran the air."

When he came out with the other passengers, Elinor knew him instantly. Nattily dressed, debonair, — that was Chet.

He gave Elinor a casual glance as he got in the plane and began going through some papers he carried in a case. It was when she adjusted his safety belt that he recognized her.

"Well, if it isn't Dr. Rogers' girl and Fran's pet peeve. How's things?"

Elinor flushed. "I didn't think you were going to recognize me."

"Who could forget such a sweet child?" Chet replied. "How about a date when I get back to Chicago? I'll tell you all about your doctor friend and Francine. She's putting on her angel act, and is he falling!"

"I must be going." Elinor hoped her face did not reflect how heartsick his words made her.

A Foursome

Chet did not forget. Elinor had not been back in Chicago an hour when he called.

"We'll go to a night club. Put on your glad rags."

Elinor put on a new formal. It was a stunning gold creation of shimmering satin, which accentuated the gold of her hair, the rich brown of her eyes. Norm would like this dress. Oh, Norm — she caught her breath. If only Norm were calling!

Later, in the rest room of the night club, a startled voice exclaimed, "Why Elinor!"

She turned to face Leola Rogers.

"Oh, are you and Jack having dinner here?" Elinor asked.

"I'm with Ned," Leola answered.

"I'm sorry, because I know that Jack intended to phone you this evening. Listen, how would you like to come out to my apartment for dinner tomorrow evening? I'll have Jack also. I must get you two together."

"I'll be there," Leola hugged her. "But don't forget Jack and I are not speaking, so you'll have to be a diplomat. Now, I'm going to tell you a secret. Norm has learned to fly."

"Fly!" Elinor was genuinely surprised. 'He hasn't told me."

"It's a secret," Leola continued. "Mother is furious and Fran is displeased.

"I wonder why he has taken up flying," Eleanor mused.

"Hobby," Leola answered, ' with its roots in wanting to please you, I suspect. In fairness to him, Elinor, he doesn't realize Fran's game.

"I know," Elinor sighed.

Leola abruptly changed the subject "Whom are you with? Why don't you join Ned and me?"

Elinor agreed. They made it a foursome. She tried to join in the gay banter about the table even as she noticed that Leola was much too gay, almost hysterical. And she didn't like the way Ned Cathney looked at Leola.

Footsteps Approach

The next evening Elinor made hurried preparations for the dinner to which she had invited Jack and Leola. She set the table carefully — for two. Two. Jack and Leola did not even know it, but this was to be a make-believe evening. They were to play at housekeeping. Elinor would be the maid. They'd forget all their differences. Make-believe — to win two rebellious hearts. Elinor had planned every detail.

Jack came early. So he was that anxious to see Leola! Elinor chuckled as she tied an apron about him with the words: "Whip this cream, and I'll find something else for you to do."

The house phone rang. Must be Leola. "Answer it, Jack." Elinor smiled.

"Come up and be quick about it," Jack said into the phone.

Presently they heard the elevator, then footsteps. Elinor wrinkled her forehead. That was not Leola. She peered out. It was -- was —

"Norm!' Norm!'" Elinor ran to meet him. 'Norm, why didn't you write? "I ——"

Suddenly she was conscious that Norman was not looking at her, but at Jack, behind her

Holiday Dishes Made Ahead

The Christmas season is usually one grand round of meeting and talking to old friends, entertaining them and being entertained. The young crowd, too, whose long holidays give them a lot of time on their hands, find this an ideal time to entertain their friends and everybody has a marvelous time all round.

But there is one drawback to all this fun as every housewife knows and that is the work involved in preparing and serving the food for all the different occasions when people gather at her house.

We have prepared two menus here which will take care of almost all occasions and the recipes are designed to leave the hostess free to enjoy the party as much as the guests. It will take some planning and preparing in advance, but that is certainly worthwhile when you are rewarded by peace of mind and an assurance that everything will taste marvellous and you don't get flustered preparing things at the last minute.

First occasion for food is when old friends drop in to help you trim the Christmas tree. Whether they come in time for supper or do the work and eat later, this supper will be a pleasure to serve and eat.

Cream of Tomato Soup
Scalloped Oysters
Jellied Spanish Relish
Stuffed Celery
Bread and Butter Sandwiches
Ice Cream and Cookies
Coffee, Tea, Hot Chocolate

Scalloped Oysters

4 cups fine soft bread crumbs
¼ teaspoon salt
Dash of pepper
Dash of paprika
½ cup melted butter
1 pint oysters, drained
1-3 cup oyster liquor
½ cup top milk.

Combine bread crumbs, salt, pepper and paprika. Add butter, tossing lightly to mix well. Sprinkle 1-3 of crumbs in bottom of greased baking dish. Arrange ½ of oysters on crumbs. Sprinkle second third of crumbs over oysters. Add remaining oysters. Combine oyster liquor and milk and pour over oysters. Top with remaining crumbs and sprinkle lightly with paprika. Bake in hot oven (450 degrees F.) 30 minutes. Serves 8.

The beauty of this whole menu is that you can prepare it early. Put the oysters, butter, crumbs and seasonings into the baking dish and leave in refrigerator until just before baking. Then heat the milk before you add it and the oysters will bake more quickly than usual.

The celery can, of course, be stuffed ahead of time with cream cheese relishes, the sandwiches prepared and covered with a damp cloth and set in refrigerator and the relish can be made hours before serving time.

Jellied Spanish Relish

1 package quick-setting jelly powder
1 pint warm water
1½ tablespoons vinegar
Dash of Cayenne
½ teaspoon salt
2 pimientos, finely chopped
½ cup white cabbage, finely chopped
1 cup celery, finely chopped
½ cup sweet pickles, finely chopped.

Dissolve jelly in boiling water. Add vinegar, Cayenne, and salt. Chill. When slightly thickened, fold in pimientos, cabbage, celery and the pickles. Turn into individual molds, filling them half full. Chill until firm. Unmold. Makes 12 half-molds.

For your Watch Night supper, plan a buffet meal, something like this:

Tomato Juice Cocktail
Chicken Pot Pie, Carrot and Cabbage Salad
Baking Powder Biscuits
Angel Food Cake
Coffee Tea Cider

Chicken Pot Pie

2½ tablespoons quick-cooking tapioca
¾ teaspoon salt
Dash of pepper
Dash of Paprika
2 cups cooked chicken, cut in pieces
1¼ cups milk or chicken stock
2 tablespoons melted butter
8 unbaked baking powder biscuits, rolled ¼ inch thick.

Combine ingredients. Turn into greased casserole; bake in hot oven (425 Deg. F.) 25 minutes, stirring twice during first 10 minutes. Place biscuits on top of chicken mixture after it has baked 10 minutes; return to oven and bake 12 to 15 minutes longer, or until biscuits are browned. Serves 4.

Carrot and Cabbage Salad

1 package quick-setting lime jelly powder
1 pint warm water
2 tablespoons vinegar
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup raw carrots, grated
1 cup raw cabbage, finely chredded.

Dissolve jelly powder in warm water. Add vinegar and salt. Chill. When slightly thickened, fold in the carrots and cabbage. Turn into individual molds. Chill until firm. Unmold on crisp lettuce. Garnish with mayonnaise. Serves 8.

Romance Yardstick Selection Method

Boston University Professor Works Out a "Mate-Chart"

A Boston University professor has worked out a "yardstick" for selecting a mate.

Dr. David D. Vaughan, Chicago-born professor of social ethics at the university's school of theology, has a 22-point chart by which doubting swains can choose their life partners.

Dr. Vaughan said one of his students rated two girls by the chart, proposed to the one with the highest score and was accepted.

Perfect Score 100

Each item in the "mate-chart" has a score, the total reaching 100 points as follows:

Intelligence, family (biological inheritance), capacity for conjugal affection and personal integrity (faithfulness), six points each.

Age, education, religion and business ability receive five points each.

Four points each are awarded to family (social inheritance); disposition (personality); emotional balance (patience); sense of humor; social-mindedness (unselfishness); sense of responsibility; courage (ambition, self-reliance); common interests (comradeship) and domestic interest.

Three points each go to artistic and aesthetic interests; wealth and leisure time interests.

Dr. Vaughan said the list represents a combination of his ideas with those of Prof. Ernest R. Groves, of North Carolina State, Raleigh, N. C., and Paul Poponoe, Altadena (Cal.) author.

Girls as well as boys could use the chart, Dr. Vaughan said.

Afternoon Tea Served In Beauty Parlors

From New York comes the latest story of the Anglicization of the United States. The story links the acme of American modernism—the beauty parlor — and England's greatest colonization agent—afternoon tea, in amusing fashion.

Modern science, lending all its energies to aid in the beautification of madam, has not been able to eliminate the most tedious feature of a beauty treatment— the wait of an hour or longer while feminine tresses dry.

Up-to-date beauty parlors some time ago commenced serving a cup of tea to clients as they waited for their hair to dry.

But the crowning touch came with the announcement by a Fifth Avenue beauty parlor that henceforth trim waitresses will serve afternoon tea—to husbands.

Be sure to clean your transparent vases often and thoroughly—for they easily become stained from the flowers themselves. Vinegar will remove stains that soap and water fail to budge.

Eyes Of Dead Men Help The Living

A year ago Professor V. P. Filator, of Odessa, said he could cure the dreaded form of blindness known as "wall eye."

"Wall eye" may be caused by disease or injury, and takes place when the cornea, or horny cover of the eye ball is clouded. Professor Filator, by replacing the defective corneas of the living with the healthy corneas of the dead, has actually restored sight to 400 people during the last year.

Sunday School Lesson

LESSON XII.

The Birth of Jesus.—Luke 2:1-20
Printed Text Luke 2:8-20.

Golden Text.—There is born to you this day in the city of David a Saviour, who is Christ the Lord.—Luke 2:11.

THE LESSON IN ITS SETTING

Time.—B.C. 5.

Place.—Nazareth in Galilee, the home of Mary and Joseph, and Bethlehem in Judaea, where Jesus was born.

While, on the one hand, the story of our Lord's birth is recognized as the most beautiful and exquisite story of all literature, marked by great simplicity and holiness, and, we might say, heavenliness, yet the first two verses of this story in Luke's account only record bare historical data. The Roman census was taken at this time every fourteen years, and this fact also fits in perfectly with the historical facts which are in our possession.

The World's True Bread

Joseph, the husband of Mary, "was of the house and family of David," Israel's great king, and David's original residence was in Bethlehem, and it was necessary for him to go down to this lovely city from Nazareth where he was residing, to be enrolled in such a census as was now being taken. Joseph took Mary, soon to become a mother, with him, not leaving her in the care of others. The word "Bethlehem" means "house of bread," because near by were large grain fields. Here was to be born the true Bread of the world. We must not interpret the word "betrothed" as identical with our word "engaged." "Betrothal was virtually marriage, lacking only that the bridegroom take his bride to his home.

How almost pathetically is the birth of the Son of God recorded by the physician Luke! There is nothing miraculous in the description of the birth itself, though the details reveal a loneliness, if not a poverty and an ignorance on the part of the world round about, of what was happening that can be taken as indicative of all the future experience of the One here born.

"No Room at the Inn"

"There was no room in the inn" for the holy family, it is not to be understood "to mean merely that there was no room for the Child; but that the inn in which they could have found lodging lacked a suitable room for the birth, as well as a suitable bed for the babe, so that they had to leave the inn and find refuge in a crib in the stable. In the East today the dwelling place of man and beast is often in one and the same room. But this is not how the Evangelist conceived it to have been; he imagines that the manger was outside the inn in some particular stable, such as are used today for camels sometimes, but more rarely, for sheep. He takes it for granted that the stable was empty as would be natural during the time when sheep spent the night in the open.

Testimony of Heaven

And there were shepherds in the same country abiding in the field, and keeping watch by night over their flock. In Palestine flocks are allowed to graze the land only while the fields are still unplowed. The shepherds sleep in their clothes in the midst of their flocks when they are out all of the night.

And an angel of the Lord stood by them, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them: and they were sore afraid. These shepherds were simple, unsophisticated pastoral men. They were engaged in their common occupation when they received the wonderful revelation from heaven. It is not when speculating about abstract doctrines or dreaming about heavenly vision that heaven draws near to us and reveals itself to us. It is when engaged in daily duty, doing the work of the appointed hour that is laid to our hand.

"And the angel said unto them Be not afraid." That was heaven's first word to earth after the birth of Jesus. It was the voice of an unfallen spirit sounding anew the keynote of the music of hope among sinning men. "For behold"— it is natural for men to be afraid in the presence of God, in the manifestation of that which is supernatural. "I bring you good tidings of great joy which shall be to all the people." The word here translated "good tidings," means, literally, "good news" and is, in the Greek, the word from which comes our English word evangelist. It was an angel who announced the evangel.

"For there is born to you."—Jesus was born for all men. It was because he loved men that he came into the world. In saying he is born for us, we mean that he was born for our good, for our enrichment, and, for our salvation. "This day in the city of David a Saviour, who is Christ the Lord."— In the Old Testament, God is often referred to as the Saviour (2 Sam. 22: 3; Isa. 43: 3, 11; 45: 15, 21; Hosea 13: 4, etc.). A Saviour is one who saves. Jesus came to deliver us from every evil power, and to bestow upon us an eternal life. The word Christ means anointed by the Holy Spirit for his great work of redemption. It should never be forgotten and cannot be over-emphasized that it is a voice from heaven which declares these wonderful things about the babe born in Bethlehem. These titles were not given to Jesus by his followers, or by himself, or by later writers, but by the angel of the Lord, sent of God.

"And this is the sign unto you; did not reason or debate with themselves who should keep the wolf from the sheep in the meantime, but did as they were commanded, and committed their sheep to him whose pleasure they obeyed.

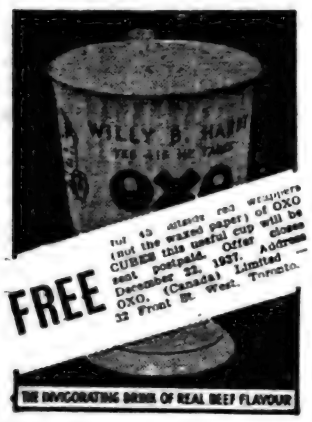
"And they came with haste, and found both Mary and Joseph, and the babe lying in the manger."

"And when they saw it, they made known concerning the saying which was spoken to them about this child. And all that heard it wondered at the things which were spoken unto them by the shepherds."—The shepherds not only made known what they had heard concerning Jesus to Mary and Joseph, but undoubtedly they proclaimed their message to all the inhabitants of Bethlehem.

"And the shepherds returned, glorifying and praising God for all the things that they had heard and seen, even as it was spoken unto them."—To glorify God is to acknowledge, to extol, and to worship him for what he is.

Ye shall find a babe wrapped in swaddling clothes, and lying in a manger. And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God, and saying."—Thousands of angels appeared filling the expanse of sky. Luke does not actually say that the angels sang, but the angels' words are in poetical form.

Peace and Good-Will



"Glory to God in the highest, And on earth peace among men in whom he is well pleased."—This is the meaning of the coming of this child, the meaning of the Saviour, Christ, Lord. Men everywhere are talking about peace, and they are trying to produce peace. There is no peace for the earth except among men in whom God is well pleased.

"And it came to pass, when the angels went away from them into heaven, the shepherds said one to another, Let us now go even unto Bethlehem, and see this thing that is come to pass, which the Lord hath known unto us." — Often we miss such great blessings in life by not immediately acting upon some divinely sent urge within our hearts to do this or that.

The shepherds appears no more in the Gospel story. We see them returning to their task 'glorifying and praising God for all the things that they had heard and seen,' and then the mantle of a deep silence falls upon them.

Mary's Meditation

"But Mary kept all these sayings, pondering them in her heart."—The action of Mary is here contrasted with that of the shepherds. In their surprise and astonishment, they immediately published what they had heard and saw. Mary was not astonished because she knew the significance of the babe to which she was to give birth from previous annunciations to her and to Joseph by the angel. The word "pondered" means "to bring together in one's mind," "to consider." The roll of the coming years would pass before the mind of Mary as she looked into the face of her own "little Lord Jesus." And Mary had "all these sayings" to help her see God in Babe of Bethlehem.

Risks Life To Save Cat

For two days a cat lay on a fifty feet high ledge on the building of Gatti's Restaurant near the Strand, in London, England. A small boy noticed the animal and told the timekeeper. Twenty-three-year-old Harry Bone, restaurant storekeeper, volunteered to rescue the cat. He climbed to the roof of the building where his workmates tied a rope round his waist and lowered him down to the endangered feline. Crowds in the street below watched while Harry grasped the cat and was hauled back to the roof where the animal escaped and ran away. Harry has a widowed mother to support, but he had to risk his life saving that cat. You see, he is a cat lover. He has three of his own. Pictured is Harry Bone being hauled to the roof with the rescued cat in his arms while crowds in the street watch breathlessly.

At the time we are writing this column James Shields is in town, looking up old friends and acquaintances, and he'll be back on his way to New York as this goes to press. Jimmy, as you may recall, is being starred on the new Lucky Strike network program. Jimmy is another proof that Canada has big time talent. . . .

Finally, the day has been set for the gigantic Star Santa Claus Fund broadcast, which generally lasts about three hours. Just spoke to Jimmy Annan who is handling the show, and he informs us that Geoff Waddington and a thirty piece orchestra, the Campbell sisters, Ethel, Myrt and Jean, Jean Haig, Adolph Wintroff, Harvey Doney and exotic Louise King have already consented to appear. John Sturgis will make an effort to come from Buffalo for the show. Rumours also have it that Maude Waterworth Craig, symphonic harpist and Dr. Fricker will be present. A stunt is being planned similar to one used last year, namely, a trip to some house typical of those for whom the program is being conducted. Greg Clark and Denton Massey will be Masters of Ceremonies, and community singing will be held. The place of broadcast this year is the Eaton Auditorium on Wednesday, December 22nd. CRCY will carry the complete program from 8 o'clock until midnight. It is quite likely that CRCT will also carry the program. By the way, innumerable novelty and variety acts will be presented, but these will be kept secret, and we cannot get any information on them. . . .

Visits to Exotic Countries

A new program is scheduled for CFRB on Sundays, 10:30 to 11, entitled Ports of Call. The program has proved exciting and interesting, featuring dramatic visits to foreign lands. These visits are authentic and educational. The music on the program coincides with the visit. . . .

• • •

Just stepped into an audition today, and heard something that is quite unusual. Two young lads playing guitars, George O'Connor and Dave Richards. The boys offer something very new in the way of guitar playing, and will be heard in a very short while. More information forthcoming. . . .

Whiteman Comes Back

Speaking of smart music, Paul Whiteman, King of Jazz, will return to the Columbia Network, Friday, December 31st, 8.30 to 9. The sponsors of this program are replacing their present series, featuring Alice Faye and Hal Kemp. In the words of Whiteman: "The series will be popular programs devoted to tune favourites, old and new, but I hope to introduce the works of new American composing talent." Paul Douglas will be the announcer. . . .

• • •

Columbia presents amateur talent en masse. Every Saturday, from 6 to 6.25, an amateur contest takes place, open to choirs, choristers and glee clubs of the United States, composed of mefbers 25 years or younger, and having forty members or less. They will compete for a cup awarded by CBS and a concert tour arranged by Columbia Concert Corporation. It should be a program worth listening to. . . .

Torontonian on Ford Hour

Sir Ernest MacMillan, conductor of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra since 1931, will be guest conductor of the Ford Sunday Evening Hour series over CBS during the period from February 27 through March 27. Sir Ernest's name completes the 1937-1938 roster of internationally known orchestral directors for the Ford Sunday Evening Hour which lists Jose Iturbi, Eugene Ormandy, Fritz Reiner and John Barbirolli of the New York Philharmonic - Symphony Orchestra. The guest artists who will appear while the Detroit Symphony Orchestra is under Sir Ernest's direction will include Kirsten Flagstad, the noted Wagnerian soprano; Lily Pons, the Metropolitan Opera coloratura; Jose Iturbi, as piano soloist; and Nino Martini, romantic tenor.

Thirty Millions Going to School In Russia Today

Great Advance In Education Seen Under Red Regime

Russia's educational, cultural and scientific progress from that of a backward nation of illiterates to that of a country pioneering in flights over the North Pole was emphasized on the Soviet Union's 20th birthday, November 7, celebrated in the midst of the campaign for the general election December 12.

Soviet leaders constantly remind the masses how much better off they are materially and mentally than under the czars. Foreign observers agree that the material and mental lot of the masses has risen from what, before the war, was almost zero.

Visitors who were in Russia several years ago report that the Russian, while far from being well-dressed, now is better clothed. Food now appears sufficient, if not over-plentiful. It no longer is rationed.

Thirty million children are going to school in Russia, where there were only 7,800,000 before the revolution. Illiteracy has been reduced from 67 per cent. to 10 per cent. The young Russians have 92,000 playgrounds, where they had only 125 under the czars.

Until Soviet Russia's struggling industrial development catches up with the needs of the 170,000,000 inhabitants, there is unlikely to be any unemployment. New areas have been settled and are being developed, notably the great region above the Arctic circle.

A drive is noticeable to develop new political leaders in the younger generations. Managers of factories and other industrial leaders likewise are being recruited among the younger workers who have shown outstanding skill.

Although the dread political police watches over the loyalty of the Soviet citizen, the purge appears to have affected the ordinary Russian little, except to make him shirk dangerous responsibility, keep his mouth shut tighter so far as politics is concerned and avoid contact with foreigners, lest he be suspected of treating with spies.

"In the midst of the depression, when many things have gone backward, the woman's movement has gone forward."—Carrie Chapman Catt.

What the Stars Foretell for Those Born on December 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15 and 16

***

What the STARS foretell for those born on December 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22 and 23

If the date of your birth is December 17, 18, 19 or 20, Sagittarius is your Zodiac sign. This gives you a philosophic, religious nature and high ideals. If December 21, 22 or 23 is your birth date Capricorn is your Zodiac period. This gives you a quiet and determined character and great ambition. You achieve success by persistence and industry.

YOUR OWN BIRTHDATE:

DECEMBER 17—Some very pleasant news from a long distance may necessitate a very long journey. There may be disputes over a loan or debt and with workmates and servants. Indications are good socially and for business generally. You are extremely restless and have a tendency to overdo things.

DECEMBER 18—While you would be ill advised to rely on friends, relatives should benefit you as the year is good for social and domestic matters. Your lucky number is 4 and your most beneficial days the 4th, 13th, 22nd and 31st of each month.

DECEMBER 19—You should gain by correspondence and documents but you will be secretive about them. A few months hence a removal of residence is indicated. You are quick to adopt new ideas and new surroundings and will welcome this change.

DECEMBER 20—Although you may have obstacles to overcome, mainly through property and elderly people, there is a sudden change for the better bringing more prosperity and contentment. You are sincere and will succeed in life because you are not afraid of hard work and know that prosperity must come through your own efforts.

DECEMBER 21—You prefer to live quietly, rather shirking responsibilities. A very important change is shown in your business affairs and some woman may attempt to hinder you.

DECEMBER 22—An influential woman will help you and you will gain by an important contract or agreement. Much happiness is shown in love. You are keen to save money, are economical and thrifty.

DECEMBER 23—You should gain through elderly friends and experience promotion in business. The coming twelve months should be a prosperous period though exciting and sometimes bewildering. Though you are not very demonstrative in nature you are sincere and dignified in manner.

IF YOUR BIRTH DATE IS NOT LISTED ABOVE and you would like your personal Horoscope or if you wish a complete Horoscope for any date listed above, send 10c (coin preferred), to A. R. Weir, 73 [illegible] St. W., Toronto, Ont. Please print your name, address and DATE plainly.

MERRY CHRISTMAS

The SPORTS BROADCAST

By Al Ryckman

Here it is almost Christmas and here we are doping around downtown for some reason or other, possibly to do our Yuletide shopping and we find a gent like us could have plenty of variety with his athletics without even leaving the Queen city.

A couple of us, including Girl Friend Wanda, were sitting at one of those counters where you inhale the pickles at Woolworth's, swapping gags, when in walked dear old Oscar Reckles with the old maestro's sport list. It was then that the idea occurred to us that Toronto wasn't such a bad sporting centre after all. In fact, after reading the list, even Phyllis the waitress agreed.

For instance on this Thursday evening, the Toronto Hockey League pre-season games hold sway at Ravina Rink, while down at the Maple Leaf Gardens, Yvon Robert and Ed Don George head a swell wrestling card.

When to-morrow (Friday), hockey takes the town by storm with T.H.L. fixtures at Ravina, Bank hockey at Varsity arena, and to top it all, the Gardens present a senior O.H.A. game between Brantford Rangers and Toronto Goodyears.

On Saturday evening, over at 14 Queen Street East, Charlie Burnside offers another weekly table tennis tournament. Up at Ravina rink the West Toronto Mercantile hockey loop announces a double-header with Sloanes meeting Stockyards and Anaconda taking on Kodaks. The N.H.L. test at the Gardens brings together the New York Americans and Dick Irwin's Maple Leafs. And of course, there's both girls' and men's basketball at the various gyms and Y's around town, if you prefer.

OVER THE TEA-CUPS

After the members of this jolly lunch club finally became exhausted from telling each other how good the Argos were last week-end, Wanda got serious and asked the old maestro (point blank, mind you!), of all people, what became of the Athletic Association idea for Southern Peel.

Well in the first place it wasn't our idea (as we couldn't think that good, a voice from the cheap seats informed us) but in our opinion it is a very worthwhile movement and something should be done about it. According to our slant on the matter, this Association would control all sport ventures within the southern section of the county. In this way the little teams, no matter what sport they represented, could not be crowded out by other stronger clubs that had a so-called sponsor. Other sections of Ontario are finding these "communnity and district associations" working out satisfactory, so we pass along this suggestion to the team managers and owners (if any) in this part of Peel. Personally, the entire matter will be placed before the annual meeting of the Highway Amateur Softball Association in March and anyone (even if he or she isn't interested in the mushball sport) will be welcomed, to hear for once and all this association idea aired.

Now that the winter winds have finally penetrated the walls of Woolworth's, the interest of the local critics is once more being turned to the amusement theatre business and the return of revival hits has the chins wagging and the hands waving.

So for the sake of the society department of this column, we had better say a few words about the shows we have seen lately. We finally got around to "Ali Baba Goes to Town" before they closed the Imperial for alterations (or to hang up the Xmas decorations) and would have enjoyed it better if we could have stopped wondering what Cantor felt like up there saying some very feeble gags that he had been using on his radio programs in the past. The gang who took in "Ebb Tide," said it was a wow—full of romance and life. We found "Life Begins in College" very enjoyable. Lots of beautiful co-eds tearing around the campus, while the trio of Ritz brothers and Nat Pendleton thrown in were really a riot, and with some swell songs scattered throughout, it struck us as a lively sort of film fare. We missed "Leaning On Letty" last week but intend to take in "Stage Door", the current stage success starring Joan Bennett, in town this week. So you see we break about even on the entertainment each week and still manage to attend most of the sporting events, but always arrive at the office on time to take our Secretary to lunch. Just a social butterfly.

AND FURTHERMORE

We have made arrangements to have a monthly softball paper, dealing with the activities of the Highway League, circulated to all players on the various teams. It will contain monthly gossip of the loop, club standings, various rules and changes and scores of the games played. We hereby ask the managers and executive members to send in any items for the first edition of the league's "Softball Slants" to be published for the annual March meeting.

Robert Adam Was Famous as a Furniture Designer

Among the most distinguished furniture designers during the latter part of the Eighteenth century was Robert Adam, favorite of George III, bachelor king of England. Son of an architect, he and his brother James gained fame as architects under the partnership legend of the "Adelphi."

Adam traveled considerable when traveling was fraught with great dangers. Among his many extended trips was the one he undertook to the excavations of Pompeii and Herculaneum. In these ancient ruins he found many decorative and structural motifs which became part and parcel of his exquisite designs.

Most of Adam's furniture shows his architectural leanings. Some of the furniture Adam made was of mahogany with delicate carvings and dainty inlays. He originally introduced the shield back chair, but abandoned it in favor of the wheel-back chair.

During his activities in the building of homes for the wealthy and designing fixtures and furniture for the interiors Robert Adam found time to write and illustrate three volumes of his "Works in Architecture" which were dedicated to his patron, King George III. Adam's designs are frequently reproduced in dining-room furniture and occasional living-room pieces.

Young Giraffes Do Bawl Like the Hungry Calves

Most naturalists long have held that giraffes are voiceless animals, unable to make a sound when in agony. A challenge of this occurs in the report of the Kenya game warden, which avers that a young giraffe, separated from its mother, will bawl and low like a hungry calf, according to a writer in the Montreal Herald.

Whether mute or not, the giraffe is one of the world's most peculiar animals. It has at least two other claims to distinction. It is the world's tallest mammal and one of the most expensive animals found in menageries.

A giraffe's neck, long as it is, contains no more vertebrae than does the neck of a man. It is merely elongation of the vertebrae that elevates the giraffe's head among the treetops.

Possessing few means of defense, giraffes are protected by their coloration. Their irregularly marked coats blend so perfectly with the dappled sunlight and shadows of the trees on which they feed that at a distance they are difficult to detect. Thorny acacias do not prove a trial to them for the animals' tough hides protest them from long thorns, and their elastic tongues taper to pluck leaves without including the trees' piercing armor.

The Skin's Heat

Meters that measure the temperatures of stars, used to test the heat of the human skin, show that, contrary to popular belief, colored skin is virtually no better protection against heat than white complexions. Although black paint absorbs heat, it is found that black human skin absorbs no more of it than white. The star meters, which pick up the human heat rays at a distance and thus do not upset the skin's natural response by contact, show that man's skin measures heat changes as sensitively as the most delicate thermometers. A normal person can feel a temperature rise at a rate of less than one thousandth of a degree per second. His subconscious faculties are aware of the change within three seconds and immediately set his skin "heat regulators" to work.

First California Mail Service

On April 19, 1847, the first regular mail service in California was established when the United States military authorities inaugurated a semimonthly "government express." Army despatches, private letters and newspapers were carried, free of charge, between San Francisco and San Diego by two soldiers on horseback, who started from both towns on alternate Mondays. Meeting the following Sunday at Dana's rancho, near San Luis Obispo, they exchanged mails. Each soldier then started back to the point from which he had come, arriving there in time to begin another trip the following Monday. The rush of settlers to California, following the discovery of gold, necessitated the establishment of Post Office department routes, which supplanted this original service.

"Cattle Resemble Masters"

"Cattle resemble their masters" say the Norwegians and we judge a man by the horse he has and how he treats his, asserts a writer in the Montreal Herald. Some horses are nearly human, some men are pretty nearly horses. By ties of sympathy we are bound to the horse. In his drab working life the horse awaits and expects a word of appreciation now and then. In return he asks no questions. Like a true friend, he loves you because you are you—that is sufficient He does not criticize you; he adjusts himself to your moods and misunderstandings. He does not gossip or slander you. In the bright June days as well as the bleak December days of life he stands by you unchangeably.

REV. R. H. M. KERR.

Induction at St. Andrew's

A large gathering of the members and adherents of St. Andrew's Presbyterian congregation, and of Knox Church, Sixteen, as well as friends from the other congregations in the village, assembled in St. Andrew's Church on Monday evening. The occasion was the induction of Rev. R. H. M. Kerr, B.A., formerly of Chesley, to whom the people of the above-mentioned Pastoral charge had given a unanimous call.

Rev. D. P. Rowland, of York Presbyterian Church, Toronto, conducted public worship, and preached an inspiring sermon, taking as his text Romans 8: 9. "Now if any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of His."

The Moderator of the Toronto Presbytery, Rev. Joseph Wasson, of Calvin Church, called upon the Clerk of Presbytery, Rev. J. B. Skene, to narrate the steps leading up to the induction service, after which Rev. Wasson duly inducted Mr. Kerr into the Pastoral charge of St. Andrew's Church, Streetsville, and Knox Church, Sixteen, The members of Presbytery who were present then gave to the new minister the right hand of fellowship, giving him a hearty welcome to his new field of labour.

Rev. J. B. Thomson, Dufferin Street Church, was called upon to give the charge to the minister and congregation, which duty he very admirably discharged.

At the close of the service a reception was given in honor of Rev. and Mrs. Kerr, the ladies of both congregations providing a splendid lunch.

The Moderator, together with Rev. Walter McCree, a former minister of St. Andrew's, and Rev. Edgar Foreman, congratulated the congregations and Mr. Kerr on the happy consummation of the union between minister and people which had been so unanimously effected, and expressed the hope that the union would be a lasting one. Mr. T. Wilson, for St. Andrew's and Mr. McLean for Knox Church, suitably spoke for the respective congregations. After Rev. Kerr had said a few words thanking the congregations for the cordial reception which had been accorded Mrs. Kerr, their daughter and himself, a very profitable and enjoyable evening was brought to a close by the singing of "Auld Lang Syne."

SNIDER'S

Gordon E. Post held a second successful turkey shoot on Saturday.

The special Christmas service was held at Wesley Church on Sunday.

A hawk has been seen for the past two weeks hovering around the farm yards, evidently with an eye on the Christmas poultry.

WESLEY S.S. CONCERT

A bountiful chicken dinner featured the Christmas Sunday School concert of Wesley church on Tuesday evening, Dec. 14th. The event, which was of a community nature, was attended by over one hundred people. The tables were decorated in colors emblematic of the season. Following the dinner, a short program was given, which included community singing of Christmas carols. The program included character duets by Elna and Ted Doughty, solo by Mrs. H. S. Lovering, recitations by Barbara Royle, June Fish and Stephen Doughty, and a chorus by the primary classes. An inspirational change from the program of other years was the use of lantern slides, depicting events of "The Nativity of Christ," the pictures being copies of paintings by the artist "Tissot." Rev. Mr. Lovering acted as narrator. For highest marks in attendance at S.S., gifts were presented to Misses R. and L. Dunn, Phyllis Fish and Ralph Fish. Oranges and candies were distributed to the children present. The singing of the Doxology, followed by the National Anthem to honor King George, whose birthday it was, closed the evening.

The Open Column

Herewith we tender you, all and sundry, the Merriest of Christmases, and the Happiest of New Years. We hope that you will have far more than you can possibly eat and drink, and that you will have the good sense to eat and drink only as much as is good for you. We hope that you will receive all the presents to which you are entitled, and that no one will embarrass you by giving you a gift when you have made no provision for returning the compliment. We hope that your sons and daughters will be home for Christmas, if you want them home, as no doubt you will, but that, if you don't want them home, as a few people don't, that your friends will rally round and see that you aren't lonely.

We hope that all your Christmas wishes come true, always provided that they were the sort of wishes that would make you happy. Some of us, sometimes, wish for things that would not be good for us, and because there is a Providence of some sort, we don't get them, most of the time. We hope that the strain of celebrating Christmas will not unravel your nerves, and that you won't say anything to anyone that you will regret, even if little Willie is blowing a horn in one ear, while Fred pounds a drum near the other. We hope you will be able to relax.

Further, when all the tumult and shouting has died away, and Christmas is over for another year, we hope that you will have enough money left in your purse to buy the ton of coal you will need, and that there won't be too many of the presents that will have to be exchanged. We hope that it snows just enough to make a real "white Christmas", but not enough to drift in the roads, or make them slippery. We hope that it is cold enough to let the children use their sleighs and skis, but not so cold that you can't walk out without getting your ears frozen.

We hope that all the things that you have bought will be appreciated not only for the spirit behind them, which, we are told, is what really counts, but for the effort of raising the money that went into the gift. We hope—but what's the use? We could go on for hours, hoping for you. Just take all the things you hope, and tell yourself that we hope they come true, and you'll have our ideas about Christmas for you.

Meantime, we'll have a nice, hot bowl of milk, and a piece of dry toast, and go to bed with the hot water bottle. We began to celebrate Christmas last week, and got indigestion. We'll deal with our New Year's wishes for you next week, if we don't pass peacefully away in the mean time.

HUTTONVILLE

Credit Valley Vegetable Growers' Association, consisting of 32 of the market gardeners of the Huttonville district, fully approved at their annual meeting, the Ontario Tomato Growers' marketing process scheme to control the price.

A brief review of English and American trade treaties relating to the market gardening industry was given by George Rush, fieldman of the Ontario association. Officers appointed for the ensuing year were: President, C. Davies; vice-president, C. Hutton; secretary, T. Armistead; directors, Bertram Clark, McClure Fraser, N. Ferri.

OBITUARY

Mrs. J. J. Goldthorpe

Following an illness of four months, Mrs. Martha J. Goldthorpe died at her home on the First Line Dixie, A native of Derry West, she was in her seventy-ninth year and the wife of the late John J. Goldthorpe. Her father, the late Captain Thomson, was at one time the village blacksmith here, and drove the stage coach between Derry West and Port Credit. He was a captain in the old 136th Peel Regiment. Six years ago Mrs. Goldthorpe celebrated her golden wedding. In Dixie she was active in social work. She is survived by three sons, four daughters, thirty-six grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

LET US SMILE

A distinguished orator was addressing a convention of women's clubs.

"It does me proud," he began, "to stand on this platform, which is like a beach before an ocean of loveliness, and cast my glances over a sea of smiling faces. I-er-er-er—"

"Careful," cautioned the Chairman, "the first thing you know you'll be floundering among the Marcel waves."

Million Accidents

Ontario has had a million accidents since 1915. There is evidently lots of field for such organization as the Safety League to work in.—Peterborough Examiner.

What Police Are For

In the very existence of a revolver are potentialities of tragedy. Tens of thousands of Canadians who now own such weapons would be better advised to depend on police for their protection. That is what police are for.—Edmonton Journal.

Troubles Would Be Multiplied

If government loans were made too easy to obtain, there is reason to fear that the farmer, whose present difficulties arise from too heavy a load of debt, would find before long that his troubles had been multiplied instead of being banished.—Fort William Times-Journal.

No "Free Hand" Possible

How can Britain and France agree to the chief objective of the Hitler regime—a free hand in central Europe? What is meant is annexation of German sections of Czechoslovakia and Austria. France, for instance, has defensive and offensive treaties with the little Entente nations. —Niagara Falls Review.

Underpaid Teachers

It is easy enough to criticize school teachers and to say some of them have not the necessary qualifications for their duties, but school teachers are human beings who must live like everyone else. And if we think so little of the duties of the teaching profession that we withhold from the members of that profession adequate rewards for the services they perform, then the responsibility is not upon the teachers at all, but upon the whole population.—Halifax Herald.

Ontario's North

Premier Hepburn forecasts a far-reaching program of Northern Ontario development.

"We must now turn our eyes," the head of the Government says, "to Northern Ontario and recognize its potentialities, for the hope of this province lies, to a great extent, in the North."

What Mr. Hepburn says is generally recognized. The wealth of the North has contributed in large measure to the progress of this province for a good many years now. It is generally recognized, also, that only a start has been made, that the greatest development lies ahead.—Windsor Daily Star.

Dangerous Pedestrians

If a motorist creates a traffic hazard by pushing through stop lights, by excessive speed and by erratic driving, to an almost similar degree does a pedestrian create a traffic hazard by disobeying traffic signals, darting out from the curb between intersections and generally proceeding as though in a mental fog. If it is fair and reasonable, as it is, to punish a motorist for driving to the common danger, why is it not equally fair and reasonable to penalize a pedestrian for walking to the common danger? Heaven knows we would not increase the burdens of the average man afoot, who has enough to do dodging careless drivers. But just as there is a type of hopeless motorist who needs to be disciplined, so is there a type of defiant, discourteous and reckless pedestrian who needs to be curbed.—Vancouver Sun.

No Such Thing As "Wind-Burn"

When the people talk of windburn they are talking about something that does not exist. Scientists at New York University found by test that wind does not produce chapping or redness of the skin, but that it merely makes the action of the sun greater by reducing the moisture of the skin. Wind itself does not redden the skin, but it helps the sun do it. The ultra-violet rays of the sun cause sunburn, and these act more violently on skin that has been dried with the wind.

Our Trade With India

A feature of the returns for the current fiscal year is the greater trade with the Union of South Africa and with Canada. Neither Dominion enjoys any preference in the Indian market and Canada at least feels aggrieved, as she given Indian products preferential treatment. Both the Union and Canada are in a strong position, as in most years India exports much more to them than they send to her. In the first three months of this year, however, Canada's exports to India were three times their value in the corresponding period of 1936 and trade between the two countries almost balances. This situation is not wholly normal, and the Canadian Government is likely to ask for trade negotiations once those in London are over.—Calcutta Statesman.

Democracy at Bay

Agglomerations of individuals throughout the world are agitating for justice being meted out to China. There is not on record an instance of even one solitary body agitating for placidity being the policy in regard to Japan. It remains, therefore, for the peoples of the various nations to assert their wills. Recently we wrote about the Popular Front coming to Asia. By that we did not mean Communism in all its crudeness. What we meant, and we make the explanation in view of the fact that we have been told that our policy is rather inclined toward the "red" policy, is that we stand first and foremost for the pure principles of democracy, which actually means equality in all things national and international. When one considers that throughout the world there are millions of liberally-minded people, one realizes what enormous power is virtually at the back of China. The cause of China is the cause of Democracy.—Hong Kong News.

Airplane Pilots' Asbestos Suits

Will Enable British Flyers to Land Blazing Ship and Escape

British air pilots are to fly in fireproof clothes—asbestos suits in which a man could sit in a petrol blaze without serious injury.

Ground fire-fighting trials with heavy asbestos suits have produced the new flying type, said to be lighter than the lined flying suits now worn by R. A. F. men. The material is closely woven light asbestos. The flyer wearing such a suit has time after catching fire in the air to land his plane and escape. In an ordinary fabric flying suit a pilot cannot.

Tests have shown that a pilot cannot stand the heat of a real blaze in his plane for more than a few seconds.

An injured man in a fireproof suit could live some time in a crashed blazing plane until rescuers pulled him clear. The suit consists of an overall "teddy bear" suit, helmet, gloves and emergency visor.

Centenarian Eggs Perplex Customs

Australian Officials Are Worrying About the High Duty on 100-Year-Old Ovoids from China.

Customs officials of the Australian Government are now pondering on a problem which is taxing their ingenuity. They are trying to decide whether they should reduce the tariffs on imported eggs so as to allow the entry of 100-year-old eggs which the Chinese of Australia badly want but cannot get.

These ancient eggs are a great delicacy in China. They are encased in a thick coating of dried mud and you can hear the contents of the shell rattle when you give it a shake.

Venerable Delicacies

Chinese egg exporters say that it would not be worth their while to send these venerable delicacies to Australia while the customs duties are so high. On the other hand, Australian egg producers are protesting emphatically against the importation of eggs, and they argue that they can supply all Australia's egg requirements.

But this argument does not help the Chinese residents who, longing for eggs of the centenarian type, say they can only get those which are less than a week old, and so fresh that they upset Chinese stomachs.

And so, while trying to foster trade between China and Australia, the customs officials are mopping their brows in an effort to please all the parties concerned.

Planes Reveal Unscaled Peak

Climbers Will Study Animal Life on Unexplored Mountain Top in Venezuela

An expedition soon will attempt to climb Mount Auyantepuy, hitherto unscaled peak in southern Venezuela, the American Museum of Natural History announces.

Existence of the mountain was revealed by airplanes as access to it is shut off to the north by impenetrable forest and to the south by unexplored Brazilian jungle. No Everest in height—it rises only 8,000 feet—it has a huge flat summit, 300 square miles in area.

Enormous Plateau

The expedition, now at Ciudad Bolivar in Central Venezuela, will fly to the base of Auyantepuy, establish a main camp at about the 5,000-foot mark and from there push to the top.

Dr. George H. H. Tate of the museum, will lead the party. Dr. Tate took part in two previous expeditions to neighboring peaks in 1928 and 1929. The area is believed to have been at one time an enormous plateau which through the centuries has been eroded into a series of separate mountains.

Main object of the expedition will be to study bird and mammal life on the isolated mountain top.

Britain Studies Evacuation Plan

For Larger Centres — Air Raid Precautions For City of London

LONDON.—The air raids precautions bill received third reading in the House of Commons without division and was sent to the House of Lords.

Home Secretary Sir Samuel Hoare, defending the bill against Labor attacks, declared the "best defence for London is a strong and vigorous air force, capable of tying down the enemy's air force to local defence."

He announced the air raid precautions department would be re-organized along service lines.

Sir Samuel said the government regarded the question of evacuating civilian populations in the event of air attack as "very urgent." A new clause had been added to the bill, he said, to permit the government to proceed with plans for transferring populations in emergency, as well as for the care of refugees.

There are more than 600 broadcasting stations in the United States.

Movie Star Dust Radio

By VIRGINIA DALE

Half of Hollywood is diligently searching for giddy comedies, the sort that have made Carole Lombard and Irene Dunne outstanding stars. The rest of the film colony figure that the public is going to be fed up on loony antics soon, and are getting ready to delve into very serious film biographies.

Garbo still wants to do a comedy, but has turned down four stories that the studio has submitted to her. Kay Francis is all set to launch into a laugh epic. Tyrone Power and Loretta Young have started work on "Her Masterpiece," hoping that it will be as entertaining as their current "Second Honeymoon."

Kay Francis

In the biographical division, there is the life of Clara Barton in which Irene Dunne will star, the life of Alexander Graham Bell, inventor of the telephone, in which Tyrone Power will be featured, and the life of George Sand, woman novelist, which will star the dainty Annabella.

In the latest radio poll Charlie McCarthy, to no one's surprise, is voted the most popular radio star, and by a wide margin, too. The great hit of the ventriloquist's dummy and the growing appeal of Betty Lou, that imaginary character on the Vallee hour, has set radio sponsors to looking for novelties. And the next one to bid for your approval will be a talking parrot. Sketches are all written for the bird, but the feathery star itself has not been located. It seems that all the tryouts have been a failure.

It takes a long time to score success in radio, motion pictures, and on the stage, so it is a good idea to start at the age of eleven as Joy Hodges did. She is almost twenty-one now and can point with pride to the months when she sang on the radio with Ted Fio Rito's and Ozzie Nelson's orchestras. You will see her on the screen in Universal's "Merry Go Round of 1938" and she is playing the lead with George Cohan in the outstanding Broadway hit of the year, "I'd Rather Be Right," which spoofs the New Deal in amiable fashion. She supported herself all through her four years at Des Moines high school by singing at revival meetings and on the radio.

When you see Carole Lombard in "Nothing Sacred," and Barbara Stanwyck in "Breakfast for Two," you may assume that a course in boxing is a necessary part of every screen actress' training. Barbara puts on gloves and goes after Herbert Marshall for all she is worth, pummeling and swinging until you begin to fear that Marshall will have to play masked bandit roles the rest of his life. Carole doesn't stop for gloves or any such niceties. She just goes into a slap-happy routine with Fredric March with no holds barred.

The M-G-M- radio hour, improving every week, is going to be even better, because it has been decided to concentrate more on comedy. Ted Healy, who hasn't had a chance really to distinguish himself in their pictures, has walked off with all the honors in their radio shows. All inquiries about audience reaction bring Healy specialties. You will be getting them from now on. Soon R. K. O. will launch a radio hour with Milton Berle as master of ceremonies—probably late at night so that it won't interfere with your going to the theater to see their pictures.

Milton Berle

ODDS AND ENDS—Grand National has ambitious plans to star Tex Ritter, Ken Maynard and Ruth Mix in one big super-Western . . . When you hear a dog barking in the radio serial "Pepper Young's Family," it isn't a sound-effects man at work. It is the well-trained pet of Jean Sothern, regular member of the cast . . . Charlie Farrell, encouraged by the great come-back of his former partner, Janet Gaynor, is going to try a comeback too, with Paramount . . . Eleanor Holm had to swim alongside two aligators in "Tarzan's Revenge." Two rifle marksmen stood by just in case . . . Latest actor to want Olivia de Havilland to play opposite him in a Broadway stage play is Brian Aherne, but she still says "No" . . . Voting will begin soon for best screen performance of the year and Charles Boyer is likely to win for his portrayal of Napoleon in "Conquest" . . . Meanwhile several radio sponsors have voted Nadine Conner, currently subbing for Jeannette MacDonald Sunday nights, the best woman singer on the air.

B. C. Introduces Borstal System

Reformatory For Younger Offenders To Be Built At Burnaby

VICTORIA.—Premier T. D. Pattullo said last week that his government intends to establish an institution run on the lines of the "Borstal System" for British Columbia's youthful delinquents.

The system would be introduced for delinquents between the ages of 18 and 25 years, the Premier assured a deputation representing the John Howard Society for Penal Reform.

He said it would be inaugurated in Burnaby municipality, near Vancouver, in the former premises of the Home for the Friendless, which the Government purchased after that charitable-religious institution was closed following a Government investigation.

To Promote Good Conduct

Headed by Right Rev. H. E. Sexton, Bishop of Columbia, the deputation offered the co-operation of the John Howard Society in the after-care work of the Borstal system, whereby youths are supervised for two years after leaving a penal institution.

The original Borstal system, introduced at Borstal prison, Kent, in 1902, divides prisoners into three progressive classes to which they may be promoted by industry and good conduct. It also seeks to train them in a craft they may practice after leaving the institution.

See Ancient Libya A "Granary" Again

Colonists Under Balbo Restore Fertility to Desert

Guided by the iron hand of Marshal Italo Balbo, the colony of Libya, Africa, is slowly but steadily reconquering its ancient place as the "granary of the empire."

Cyrenaica, with an area of 73,000 square miles long neglected by the plow, has conquered the invading desert sands. After the Romans left, Cyrenaica became a waste.

During July, the African colony furnished Italy with 21,000 quintals of hard wheat. (A quintal is slightly more than three and one-half bushels.)

Bumper Cereal Production

Although official statistics for this year's crop are not yet available, agricultural experts estimate that the province of Tripoli alone has yielded approximately 150,000 quintals of barley and 36,000 quintals of wheat.

All the potential resources of the colony are being gradually exploited to make the production sufficient for its expanding population and to emancipate the fatherland from the importation of certain products. This ambitious goal already has been attained for cellulose by the intensive cultivation of alpha, a crop that is particularly abundant this year.

Italian colonists hope that, weather conditions remaining favorable, the production will reach its peak next year. It is also hoped that the present maximum of 16 quintals per hectar will be improved through greater use of choice seeds and chemical fertilizers.

Insurgents' Mistaken Bombing

HENDAYE, Franco-Spanish Frontier.—Spanish Government dispatches reported last week that insurgent airmen inflicted serious damage and casualties in a mistaken bombardment of their own field base at Villafranca del Ebro on the north-eastern war-front.

Insurgents resumed bombardment of Madrid, damaging Goverament barricades in the University City and Casa de Campo areas. Government reports were that 15 persons were killed and more than 30 wounded.

Canada Has No "Treasury"

REGINA. — Hon. N. W. Rowell, chairman of the Royal Commission on Dominion-Provincial relations, warned this week against an apparently widespread assumption that "some kind of treasury exists at Ottawa from which unlimited sums may be drawn for useful public purposes."

"We've pretty nearly reached the point where Canada cannot increase its public debt further; rather, it must be reduced," Mr. Rowell said.

Fatal Explosion

HAMILTON.—Three workmen were killed and one slightly injured by explosions and fire that destroyed the $200,000 benzol recovery unit of the Steel Company of Canada plant. Bodies of the three were recovered.

Will Challenge Validity

TORONTO. — Premier Hepburn of Ontario announced last week-end unless the Federal Government agrees to permit the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission to export surplus power to the United States, the Ontario Government, with support of Quebec, will challenge the validity of federal legislation imposing the prohibition on export.

Spy Condemned

PRAHA, Czechoslovakia.—A Czech military court this week pronounced the first death sentence for military espionage since introduction of an espionage law in May, 1936.

The man condemned was Josef Bradi, minor official of Asch, a town in Northwest Czechoslovakia. The country for which he was convicted of spying was not disclosed.

Record Gold Production

OTTAWA.—A record Canadian production of gold aggregating close to $145,000,000, is reported by the Department of Mines for the year now ending. Last year the output totalled about $130,000,000. Experience shows that in December the production is always stepped up, the companies cleaning the mills of all the ore on hand.

Professional Murders

PARIS.—Two women who had answered help wanted advertisements inserted in newspapers by Eugene Weidmann, confessed executioner for a murder-for-profit ring, are now reported missing.

Investigating police said they feared that the two women may have met the same fate as Mme. Jeanne Keller, sixth of Weidmann's known victims, whose body was found in a Fontainebleau forest grave. His confession that he had killed Jean DeKoven, young Brooklyn, N.Y., dancer, started the prolonged investigation.

British Note to Japan

LONDON.—Great Britain last week-end sent a formal protest to Japan, demanding "actual measures" to halt attacks on British vessels. The note, which turned out to be milder than the American protest, which President Roosevelt sent to Japan, over the sinking of the U.S.S. Panay, asserted that the Tokio Government failed to carry out previous promises to respect British lives and property in China.

The note was despatched after Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden told the House of Commons that Britain would not be satisfied with the mere note of apology delivered by Japan.

South China Conflict Expected

SHANGHAI. — Leaders of Japanese armed forces were reported this week to be preparing a great drive into South China to complete their conquest of this war-ravaged nation. Reports of the impending South China invasion, which would bring Japan into even graver collision with British interests, came from many quarters.

British railways now employ nearly 600,000 persons.

Fatal Plane Crash in Harbor of Brindisi, Italy

The Imperial Airways huge flying boat "Cygnus" crashed and sank to the bottom of the harbor at Brindisi, Italy, while en route to London from Karachi, India. A member of the crew and six were killed.

Study Weather To Find When Flood Coming

Metereologists Believe They Can Make Long-Range Forecasts of Deluges and Droughts

The possibility of long-range forecasting of deluges and droughts has come out of the work of two research assistants at Massachusetts Institute of Technology, who for five days and four sleepless nights charted characteristics of a high pressure area in the Atlantic.

Meteorologists said they believed disastrous floods east of the Mississippi two years ago were largely influenced by this zone, known as the Bermuda high.

To Chart Upper Air

Research on the area is based on the impression that this body of upper air, when fully charted, will disclose definite seasonal and monthly trends which can be predicted with certainty and used to indicate the type of weather ahead over a longer period than is now possible.

The interest of meteorologists in the high pressure zones is a comparatively recent development made possible only by the use of the radio-meteorograph, a device which soars into the stratosphere attached to a balloon, broadcasting to listeners below the pressure, temperatures and humidity in the successive layers of air through which it rises.

With this instrument aboard a freighter, the meteorologists charted a 1,500-mile section from San Juan to New York through the Bermuda High, a semi-permanent high pressure area centring off Bermuda.

They made 25 readings from the freighter, at four to five-hour intervals. The average flight of each balloon was 30 minutes and those from three to nine miles.

Linked With Rainfalls

The value of successive chartings of this area, said Prof. Carl G. Rossby, head of the M. I. T. division of meteorology, lies in the belief movement of air in the upper atmosphere is linked closely with mean monthly rainfalls.

Through other readings the division hopes to learn the structure of the high pressure area. The meteorologists expect to find these zones are made up of several "cells" of air, each rotating on its own axis.

Already this cell structure has been observed in the upper air over the American continent and a distinct correlation between its "flow pattern" and rainfall appears to be indicated.

Animal World's Greatest Wooer

The Black-Crowned Night Heron Proves a Dramatic Swain

The great lover of the animal world it turns out, is the black-crowned night heron.

The only bird that habitually has a "stooge," the heron employs in courtship an elaborate routine of deception, play-acting and psychological domination, says Dr. G. Kingsley Noble of the Museum of Natural History, New York.

A typical heron love affair, Dr. Noble disclosed last night in a lecture reporting his several years' study of animal courtship, goes like this:

Soon after hatching, herons join in pairs, without regard to sex; one member of each pair dominates the other, demonstrating his superiority by always holding his head higher than the "stooge."

"Henpeck System"

In the mating season a male approaches a female, and, taking the subordinate role, tries to inveigle her into marriage by the "henpeck" system.

When the female indicates tentative approval, the male at the psychological moment reverses the roles and he starts dominating — if he doesn't, the female will leave.

A Psycopathic Heron

Then, to demonstrate his prowess as a potential husband, the male heron for days goes through calisthenics, brandishing twigs with his beak—"He never does anything with them—they just symbolize all the houses he could build," Dr. Noble explains.

Finally, if he has carried the show off properly, the female consents to a permanent match.

Dr. Noble reported one case of a psychopathic heron. He lost his feather head crest in transit to the museum, and the females shunned him.

He brooded for a while, the doctor related, and then resorted to exhibitionism, waving his legs and hissing, even before purely imaginary audiences. He finally got a wife.

Costa Rica Called Most Flowery Land

Plants of the little country with more varied vegetation than any area of its size on this continent—a country with about 6,000 varieties of flowering shrubs and trees, including more than 1,000 different kinds of orchids—are described in "Flora of Costa Rica", published by Field Museum Press.

No other area of its size in North or Central America has a flora so rich and varied as Costa Rica. In area, the country is about the size of West Virginia, but its flowers and plants are about three times as numerous as those of that state. Few tropical countries anywhere in the world can rival Costa Rica in the variety of its orchids and ferns.

Robots That Travel Fifteen Miles Up

Balloons containing mechanical weather prophets and floating 15 miles above the Arctic may be the means of warning of approaching cold weather. Each balloon will carry a cylinder-shaped mechanical weather prophet weighing two pounds. This cylinder consists of patent weather-recording devices attached to a wireless transmitter, which will wire reports automatically at half-minute intervals to observers far below.

Three bases are to be established, and the balloon tests will be helped by high-altitude flights by aeroplanes. The difficulty at the moment is that the balloons often burst at high altitudes, and so the apparatus has been fitted with small parachutes. A reward of $1.25 is offered for each one found.

The King's Daughters Go Swimming

Princes Elizabeth (left) and Princess Margaret Rose, leaving the Bath Club, London, after enjoying a swim. The King's daughters belong to a swimming class at the Bath Club. They wear the regulation navy-blue suits, and wait their turn just like the others. Princess Elizabeth brings great concentration to bear on her efforts, but Princess Margaret Rose never ceases chattering, so she often gets an unexpected mouthful of water. In spite of this she seems to enjoy her lessons tremendously.

The Boy Scout Santa Claus of the Toy Repair Shop at Calgary, had a real surprise when he received a letter from a group of children at Airways, a rural district 175 miles northeast of Calgary. The request was, not for toys, dolls or story books, but for school books. Ran the letter:

"We have had poor crops for six years around Airways and Hughenden. There are children here who want to study, but they have no school books and no money to get them."

Mention of the appeal in the Calgary Herald brought prompt response, and it is certain that these stout-hearted children of the prairies will receive not only the desired school books but toys and other gifts as well.

Approval of the Boy Scout Movement in Greece, and assurance that he will do all in his power to further its success, was expressed by Prime Minister Metaxas, following a parade of Scouts at Patras.

Alfred C. Bossom, a British M.P., has presented a handsome silver challenge shield to the Boy Scouts of Bathurst, Gambia, in recognition of the habitual good turns performed by these coloured Scouts for tourists calling at that West African port. The shield was accepted on behalf of the Gambian Scouts by Mr. Ormsby Gore, Secretary of State for the Colonies. From time to time letters from tourists, especially women travelers, have told of the services rendered by the African Scouts at Bathurst and Freetown, and the fact that like Scouts elsewhere the boys refused to accept any reward.

A first aid station for motoring casualties has been established by British Rover Scouts at Bignell's Corner on the Barnet By-pass road near Barnet. The station, which cost $800 to equip, is manned every Saturday afternoon and evening and all day Sunday. Over 30 Barnet Boy Scouts qualified to wear the St. John Ambulance Association badge take turns on duty. The roads in the vicinity have been the scene of numerous accidents.

Leading Bankers Review Canada's Economic Outlook

BANK OF MONTREAL ANNUAL MEETING

Confidence Expressed in Country's Capacity for Recovery

An impressive record of strength and of expanding business in keeping with the marked improvement of trade and commerce throughout the Dominion during the past year was presented at the 120th annual meeting of the Bank of Montreal recently held in Montreal.

In viewing business conditions over the wide territory in which the bank operates, Sir Charles Gordon, the president, said that these had much improved and were a happy contrast with the conditions of but two years ago. The one really serious handicap was in those portions of the Prairie Provinces where drought caused total or partial loss of the crop.

Canada, he said, had been demonstrating in the past year a remarkable resiliency in productive enterprise.

As instances of this, he referred to the immense growth of gold production and of the output of industrial metals remarking that with the exception of iron, Canada was now the world's largest exporter of base metals.

Canada's Manufactures Worth Three Billions

He further pointed out that whereas Canada was until quite recently regarded as a country devoted almost entirely to agriculture, today agriculture provides 35% of the exports and other forms of industry the balance. Canada now employs 600,000 people in 30,000 workshops, mills and factories, and the annual value of its manufactured products amounts to more than $3,000,000,000.

In concluding his remarks, Sir Charles, while not attempting a forecast on the Canadian business outlook, expressed his confidence in Canada's "remarkable capacity for recovery," which, if not unduly affected by international disturbances, would, he felt, mean a continuance of the better times which Canadians had experienced during the past year.

Commercial Loans Show Increase

One of the most important features of the financial statement presented by Jackson Dodds, on behalf of himself and his fellow general manager, G. W. Spinney, was the increase shown in current loans in Canada of more than $23,000,000 to $182,500,000. For the year ended September 30th, the current loan of all the banks had increased by $75,500,000. While the increase was welcome, he said it was not commensurate with the growth in the volume of business and the improvement in commodity prices.

Bank's Assets 79.58% Liquid

The assets of the bank, standing at $829,600,000 were the highest since 1929. Of this amount $599,000,000 represented quickly available resources, equal to 79.58% of liabilities, to the public, amounting to $752,736,000.

Among other highlights, the statement presented by the general managers showed that deposits by the public had increased by $28,000,000 to $681,000,000. Commenting on this item, Mr. Dodds said: "Despite all that is written and said nowadays on the subject of 'loans creating deposits,' 'fountain pen money' and 'monetizing' assets, including what is described as 'our cultural heritage,' it is safe to say that not one of our customers, whose balances make up our total of deposits by the public, has any doubt whatsoever as to how his or her deposit came into being."

YOUNG PEOPLE'S MEETING

On Monday night, December 20th, the United Church Young People met. The Devotional Period was conducted by the President, Mr. Herb Hersom and Miss Verna Dowling.

Captains Edna Stephens and Norman Potts gave a report of their sides, which showed a very interesting competition.

The programme was in charge of Miss Elsie Temple, Convener of the Missionary Department. A reading entitled, "A Lesson of Service", was given by Miss Edna Stephens. Mr. Gordon Steen sang a solo and Miss Dorothy Durie contributed a piano solo.

Then a very interesting Missionary play entitled, "Ordered South", was put on by several of the members. The characters were, Norman Potts, Herb Hersom, Norman Workman, Jean Graydon, Elsie Temple and Hugh Lamb.

The Young People are entertaining the Cooksville Society at their next meeting on January 3rd. The programme is in charge of the Social Committee.

TRINITY CHURCH NOTES

The Comedy-Drama, "Home Ties", was presented by members of the A.Y.P.A. on Wednesday evening, Dec. 15th, to an audience of some 150 members of the Church and their friends, who braved the unpleasant weather to spend an amusing and entertaining evening. The cast was made up of: Misses Mildred Quennell, Dorothy Graydon, Hilda Haddon, Gladys Dadd, Margaret Quennell and Messrs. Emerson Wolfe, Lenvard Lee, Arthur Arch, and Jack Wright. Our grateful thanks are due to these players for their very creditable performance, and to all those whose hard work made the evening a success.

The Annual meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary was held on Wednesday afternoon, Dec. 15th, at the Rectory. The various reports were presented, showing a successful year had been completed, with all Pledges paid in full. The election of officers then took place, with the following being elected for office during the coming year: President, Miss Maud Peck; Vice-President, Mrs. A. G. Beck; Recording Secretary, Mrs. H. Wright; Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. Richard Dadd; Treasurer, Mrs. H. Culbert; Dorcas Secretary, Mrs. Wm. Lovatt; Literature Secretary, Mrs. H. Graydon. A hearty vote of thanks was tendered to the retiring executive, with particular reference to the work of Mrs. Beck in carrying on as Acting President for the past year. After the business had concluded, delightful refreshments were served by Mrs. E. S. Ottley.

The New Fleet of Highway Cruisers

The fleet of Highway Cruisers introduced in service today by Gray Coach Lines reveals a radical advance in motor coach design and a rare combination of beauty and utility.

Unusually effective streamlining has been achieved by placing the engine in the rear and the Cruisers present an air of graceful beauty entirely new in the motor coach field.

The interiors are completely rearranged and provide the most luxurious accommodation ever offered in a passenger moter vehicle. The driver sits well forward, close to the large windshield for a better view of the road. A curb-high step facilitates easy entry to the depressed aisle that permits tall passengers to walk erect without coming in contact with the roof.

Specially designed individual chairs are set on a deck one step higher than the aisle. The chairs are well upholstered and are easily adjustable to four restful positions. Adjustable rubber footrests are also available for every passenger. Wide observation windows give an unobstructed view of passing scenery. The windows are easily raised and are equipped with a sliding metal shade fashioned after a venetian blind to control the glare of strong sunlight. At night the illumination in the Cruisers is provided by a diffusion of soft light from frosted glass tubing arranged in the ceiling. A new forced air ventilating system and nine large hot water heaters assures a comfortable and healthy atmosphere at all seasons.

Convenient overhead racks accommodate purses, handbags, hats and parcels. All baggage is carried in weatherproof compartments in the body of the coach below the passenger deck. No baggage is carried on the exterior of the coach.

The Cruisers will seat 36 passengers but, due to advanced construction methods, are actually two tons lighter than former standard equipment, assuring greater flexibility and ease of handling as well as more economical operation.

As in all Gray Coach Lines equipment, special attention has been given to safety features. The Cruisers are equipped throughout with safety glass and have specially designed air brakes. The driver's new position provides a better view of the road and traffic. A lower centre of gravity and other improvements combine with these advantages to create an increased margin of safety for passengers.

The Highway Cruisers are in service on the main routes from Toronto to Buffalo, and from Toronto to North Bay. It is hoped that continued improvement in traffic will permit the extension of Cruiser luxury service to other routes.

UNITED CHURCH NOTES

The White Gift Services at the Streetsville United Church were very successful, dozens of gifts were brought in, nicely wrapped and labelled so that two large clothesbaskets overflowed with the offerings. Eden held a similar service and the total gifts were taken to the Fred Victor Mission, Jarvis street, Toronto, on Monday.

EDEN

The Eden United Church Sunday School Christmas Concert was a rich feast of good things. A good audience gathered to enjoy the program and everyone was delighted. The Young People, who put on the program, are to be congratulated upon their vision, skill and ability. It is hard to select special numbers as best when every item was so thoroughly prepared and so well done. Players of ability took care that the concert should have no weak spots. One number was extraordinary. June and Glenn Waite appeared as Amos and Andy with masks and overalls. June with an Auto Harp which she played with surprising ease to accompany the song the pair sang. Imagine children of 6 years of age staging a number like this, and the inevitable encore brought them back with a second piece. They also sang a duet, Glenn taking the air and June the alto. It was a choice number. Reta May is quite a reciter. Her masking of a selection was delightful. In delightful pantomime, action songs, solos, quartettes and then in a thrilling play, the program kept everybody interested to the end. Santa came, gifts were distributed and the company went to the basement to enjoy a real lunch served as Eden Church folk know how.

Programme

1. Joy to the World (1st Verse by all), Prayer by Mr. Jones; 2. Chorus, "Rejoice and Sing"; 3. Duet, June and Glenn Waite; 4. Quartette; 5. Recitation, Reta May; 6. Solo, Lois May; 7. "Gifts to the King; 8. Recitation, J. D. Cordingley; 9. Quartette; 10. Patriotic Number, "The Maple Leaf"; 11. Chairman's Address; 12. Solo, Ann Sinclair; 13. Clapping Song, by Juniors; 14. Pantomime; 15. Duet, "Amos and Andy"; 16. Chorus, Clock Song. . . . Intermission . . . 17. Play, "The Pampered Darling"; 18. Santa Claus; 19. God Save the King; 20 (Lunch served downstairs for everyone).

WHAT WILL THE NEW YEAR BRING?

NEW YEAR! New year!
Little spirit of the new year!
At my portal waiting near, so near
My trembling heart says if I speak
That you will hear, will hear.

New year, new year, what will you bring to me?
Joy on rainbow pinions wing to me.
Love, with voices sweet, to sing to me.
New year, new year, I beseech you,
Let my tender longing reach you!

New year, I fear not your morrowday
Sweetest joys may still strew sorrow's way.
In December I shall borrow May.
New year, smiling I shall meet you!
New year, welcoming I greet you!

New year, new year, you and God alone
Hear my heart thus speak in humble tone.
Grant me deeper life for living,
Give me greater love for giving.
—Mary Gow Walsworth.

A GREETING TO NEW YEAR.

We Can Live It but Once, So Let Us Spend It Worthily.

We are on the threshold of a new year. We do not know what the year holds for us, but we are not afraid of it. We have learned to look for kindness and goodness in all our paths, and so we go forward with glad hope and expectation.

It is always a serious thing to live. We can pass through any year but once. If we have lived negligently we cannot return to amend what we have slurred over. We cannot correct mistakes, fill up blank spaces, erase lines we may be ashamed of, cut out pages unworthily filed. The irrevocableness of life ought alone to be motive enough for incessant watchfulness and diligence. Not a word we write can be changed. Nothing we do can be canceled.

Another element of seriousness in living is the influence of our life on other lives. We do not pass through the year alone. We are tied up with others in our homes, our friendships, our companionships, our associations, our occupations. We are always touching others and leaving impressions on them. Human lives are like the photographer's sensitized plates, receiving upon them the image of whatever passes before them. Our careless words drop, and we think not where they fall, but the lightest of them lodges in some heart and leaves its blessing or its blight. All our acts, dispositions and moods do something in the shaping and coloring of other lives.

It is said that every word whispered into the air starts vibrations which will quiver on and on forever. The same is true also of influences which go out from our lives in the commonest days—they will go on forever. This should make us most careful what we do, what we say and what quality of life we give to the world. It would be sad, indeed, if we should set going unholy or hurtful influences, if we should touch even one life unwholesomely, if we should speak even a word which starts a soul toward death.—Rev. Dr. J. R. Miller.

"Dipping" on New Year's.

In the midland counties of England the "Sortes Sanctorum" obtained great credit on New Year's in the olden time. A Bible is obtained at random and the finger of a blindfolded person placed upon the page. The text so pointed out refers to events which will happen during the year. This is called "dipping." An old lady once "dipped" into the book of Job and avowed she had trouble to the 31st of December following. If the "dipping" is not done before 12 o'clock noon the charm will have no efficacy.

Two New Year's Days.

Lord Dundas, being wished a happy new year, replied, "It had need be happier than the last, for I never knew one happy day in it." Wilberforce said, "The last year has been the happiest of my life." Romaine's New Year's wish for his people was, "God grant that this may be a year famous for believing."

Community Club

The last meeting of the North Trafalgar Community Club was held at the home of Mrs. Jack Miller on Wed, Dec. 15th. The President opened the meeting with the song.

A few verses of scripture were read by Mrs. Dowling. After business was completed Mrs. Lundy gave an interesting talk on the new course of Study. Everyone enjoyed the Christmas Tree and each member received a useful gift. The hostess then served a dainty lunch.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Harold Beattie on Jan. 5th.

Student's Column

We were a little late with the news so it will have to wait until one week from to-day.

But as one of the boys put on the blackboard for the benefit of the teachers, "A Merry Xmas if you dont give us homework. If you do, worse luck in the coming year"

But, seriously, we wish you all "A Very Merry Christmas."

Veterans' Draw

The winners of the draw at the Veterans' Hall, December 18, 1937 were as follows :—

First Prize, Mr. T. Sharp (159) Streetsville, Ont

Second Prize, Mr. W.C. Arch (72) Streetsville, Ont.

Third Prize, Mr.G. S. Jordan (124) Streetsville, Ont.

A program was given by Toronto ... r...ners.

Thursday, Dec. 23, 1937
The Review office will be closed for business every Saturday afternoon.

Local Items

Mrs. R. A. Lundy is visiting with Toronto friends

Mr. Wix Atkinson's new house on Thomas St. is rapidly nearing completion, and will soon be ready for occupation. W. C. Arch and Co. are the contractors.

Mr. H. Q. Burns has a very attractive Xmas. display on his home, in the form of a Christmas Tree with colored lights on the verandah roof and a six-foot picture of SantaClaus on the roof of the house, on which a spot light is focused. This can be seen at quite a distance and is an original idea. It was erected there several days ago and has been viewed by numerous persons. Mr. Burns certainly believes in decorating for the Christmas season.

Mr.S. H. Foster announces that he will not be a candidate for Reeve ship for 1938.

Mr. Thomas Learmont left last Thursday for St. Petersburg, Florida where he will spend the winter in the sunny south.

River Park Masonic Lodge Streetsville will hold a special meeting, Tuesday, December 28th, for the exemplification of degrees

Port Credit Chapter, Royal Arch Masons. will hold their installation of officers on Friday, January 7th

Several members River Park Lodge A.F. and A.M. visited Tuscan and Kilwinning Lodges Friday, December 17th.

Miss Violet Bowie is holidaying with Mr. and Mrs. Hubbell, Chatham

Mr. Graydon Clipperton of Nakina is spending the holidays at his home here.

Be sure to listen to the broadcast by Gordon Graydon, M. P., on New Years Day at 2.00 p.m.

Our merchants have their windows nicely decorated for the Christmas Season and with the bright and colored lights, and the ground covered with snow, everything looks like a real old time Christmas.

Patronize the merchants who advertise in The Review. They have goods that will please you—and they will use you right.

Election Time

Next Monday will be nomination day for Streetsville for the municipal Council. Mr. S. H. Foster has given good service for five years as Reeve but is retiring definitely. Mr. Wm Potts has served several years as a Councillor and has his eye on the Reeveship, and there may be others. Councillors J. Bailey, C. Cantelon and C.C. Meredith will likely stand again and with one new member we could have the 1938 Council elected by acclamation and save the trouble and expense of an election.

In Toronto Township the Council has given good service and cut about $25.000 off the indebtedness. Reeve Maguire and Deputy Reeve Graham are almost sure to be returned by acclamation, but the seats of the Councillors are not so safe for that disturbing element from Lakview will likely try again to get some men from the south end elected. However we would like to see the present Council returned to power.

"SALADA" TEA

SKY GIRL

By NELLIE GRAF

Elinor Amee tries to escape the heartbreak of her postponed marriage to Dr. Norman Rogers by becoming an air stewardess. Dr. Rogers' mother approves an alliance between Norman and wealthy Francine Bayless. Norman is jealous of Jack Newton, the pilot who helped Elinor get her job. Another stewardess, Judith Blair, Jack's former sweetheart, is jealous of Elinor and sets out to ruin her career. Leola Rogers, Norman's sister, is in love with Jack Newton. Jack has quarreled with Leola, and Elinor plans a dinner to bring them together. Then —Norman arrives unexpectedly.

CHAPTER IV

Norman had not spoken a word in answer to Elinor's impulsive greeting. Instead, he stood there silent, staring at Jack. In one of her aprons, with an egg beater in his hand, Jack looked rather ludicrous. But Norman, regarding him, did not smile. Elinor became uneasy.

"We were getting dinner," she said hurriedly.

She took Norm's arm and drew him inside. His glance went to the festive table. Set for two!

"Sorry," he said tersely. "I didn't mean to intrude. I just got in. Flew here. Came to see Leola. Mother insists she come back with me."

"Leola," Elinor said listlessly. So Norm had come just to see his sister. "We're expecting her here for dinner."

"For dinner?" Again Norm looked at the table.

Then, Jack seemed to notice the table for the first time.

"Gosh, Elinor," he said, "you forgot to put the third plate on!"

"Yes, I . . ." Elinor stammered. She couldn't explain she was being a proxy for Cupid.

Both Jack and Norm looked at her queerly. Elinor wished she were alone in a dark room where she could scream and cry, do something to relieve what she saw in Norm's eyes. Distrust. He didn't believe her. He had always been jealous of Jack.

"I'll be going," he said. "Sorry I—er—interrupted."

Hours Tick By

Then he was gone. Jack and Elinor stood for a minute staring at each other, and then Elinor burst into tears. Jack put his arms about her. And because she was heart-broken and utterly weary of plans that went awry, Elinor lifted her arms and placed them about Jack's neck.

Meanwhile, Norm had gone down the hall, his mind whirling. So Elinor had been finding plenty of consolation since he left. Just as Francine Bayless had hinted, Elinor had deceived him. Fran had said things, but he hadn't believed her. Not about Elinor!

There must be some mistake. He couldn't leave like this. He turned and hurried back, stood in the doorway just as Elinor placed her arms about Jack's neck. Then, with a dazed expression, he stepped back and again hurried down the hall.

Had Norman stayed a second longer, he would have heard Elinor say, "I wonder why Leola doesn't come. Where can she be?"

Hours ticked by, and Leola did not come. The dinner chilled, was warmed over, and finally a few bites eaten. At nine o'clock the telephone jangled. Elinor answered, but there was only a clicking noise at her repeated "Hello."

Nothing told her of a frightened, white-faced girl in a drug store telephone booth, clutching a receiver and saying desperately, "I've got to get her." Nothing to indicate how two men had come up to the girl, jerked her from the booth and whisked her away in a car.

Long after Jack had left, Elinor sat staring into space. Norm. The look in his eyes. And what had happened to Leola? Elinor finally went wearily to bed.

"Don't Go Away"

She was awakened the next morning by the telephone.

Leola's voice greeted her—low and cautious. "Sorry about last night, Elinor. I must see you—at once. You and Jack—don't go on any more trips. I —Elinor—I can't say any more now. I'll be right over." There was a click.

As Elinor turned away with a puzzled frown, the telephone rang again.

"This is Sally, Elinor. I'm sending a taxi for you. Pack a grip at once. Kay Esterly is ill. I want you to go on her trip to Fort Worth."

Elinor scribbled a note for Leola: "Called away on sudden trip. See you when I return."

She didn't want to go. Norm might call or come again. She wanted, desperately, to see him. But duty—duty came first.

She met Jack at the airport. "Did you hear from Leola?" he asked.

Elinor told him of their brief conversation, and added, "Let's not blame her until we hear what she has to say. I've got to dash to the supply room now. Good-bye."

She almost bumped into Judith Blair as she entered the supply room. "Hello," Elinor said, but Judith acted as if she had not heard.

"How she hates me," Elinor mused. "Just because she thinks I'm in love with Jack. If she knew about Norm . . ." Elinor sighed. Was love always so complicated? Norm! He didn't care. He had imagined the worst. Fran would win him now.

Elinor began to check her medicine kit absent-mindedly. Everything was there. Now the supplies — headrest covers, towels, safety pins—on down the list.

Fatal Ointment

On the ship she noticed her load manifest showed nine passengers. Six men and three women.

The plane moved off the apron. The engine was gunned for the test before being turned into the wind. They moved — faster, faster, until the great bird took the air, circled the field and pointed its nose toward Fort Worth.

They had been flying about an hour when Elinor noticed that the light on the stewardess' board showed that the passenger in seat six desired service. One of the women.

"I've something in my eye," she explained. "It hurts."

Elinor examined the eye carefully. "I don't believe there's anything there," she said. "Possibly eye strain. I'll relieve that."

She hurried back to her medicine kit. Fingers slipped expertly through bottles.

She went back to the passenger and applied an ointment. A minute later, the passenger was screaming in pain.

"My eye! It's killing me! I can't stand it! I can't!"

Elinor gasped and ran back to the woman as a man arose.

"I'm a doctor. May I help?"

Elinor nodded as she pressed the button which summoned the co-pilot. The three relieved the woman, but she remained hysterical and insisted she be put off the plane.

"You'll stop! Land this minute!" she screamed, "I never heard of such an outrage!"

"Your eye will be all right now," the doctor informed her. "Landing will disrupt the schedule."

"I don't care. I won't ride another mile!" fumed the woman.

Elinor picked up the ointment, which had fallen to the floor. With a quick intake of breath, she began to examine the contents of her medicine kit. The terrible truth was there —revealed in all its stark ugliness. Some one had tampered with her medicines. And she—she hadn't noticed it!

Britain Expects Lindberghs Back

Fact Two Children Left Behind Is Taken As Indication

British newspapers broke their months of comparative silence on the doings of Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh, last week, in dispatches announcing their arrival in the United States.

Some of the newspapers expressed pride that the Lindberghs had found in England the peace and seclusion they had been "unable to find" in their native land.

Was Unobstrusive Host

They displayed prominently New York accounts asserting that "scenes of enthusiasm like those when Lindbergh returned after his Atlantic flight," marked the arrival of the Lone Eagle and his wife. These dispatches added that hundreds of automobiles blocked roads about Englewood, N.J., where the Lindberghs were staying, and that special police were posted about the Morrow estate.

There were confident predictions that the couple would return shortly to the country which had been their unobtrusive host for nearly two years in order to take up again their secluded life with their children.

Sons Left Behind

The fact that their two sons — Jon aged 5, and seven-months old Land Morrow — were left behind was taken as an indication that the surprise visit to their homeland would be a brief one.

The children were believed to be either at the Lindbergh estate, "Long Barn," near Sevenoaks, England, or in Wales, with Mrs. Lindbergh's sister, Mrs. Aubrey Niel Morgan.

Since the taciturn flier arrived in England, December 31st, 1935, he has had no cause to complain of his treatment by the British press and public. As he wished, the Lindbergh family has been left strictly alone.

A Milanese housewife bought a chicken, and while preparing it for table found inside it a 200-lire share in an electrical company, carefully folded and in perfect preservation. It had been one of a number of fowls stuffed with valuable securities, and had escaped in the confusion when its owner was caught by Customs agents.

Tasty Jelly Desserts

Turkey is not the only creature stuffed during the holiday season for most of mankind seems to be satisfied with fine, rich foods. The rich food was awfully good while it lasted but not easy on the digestion, and in many cases, has left people feeling a bit groggy and over-fed.

Now is the time to serve light, but tasty foods and give the family a chance to get back into the normal eating routine once again.

When it comes to desserts, there is nothing that will appeal to everyone more than jellies. These tasty, quivering colorful moulds are a pleasure to look at and a delight to eat. During the rush of the holiday season they are especially handy because the busy housewife can make one of these desserts in practically no time at all and the ingredients used can be just what you have on hand. plain fruit jelly powders, attractively moulded and served with cream or custard sauces, make a lovely finale to the meal. They are delicious when moulded with fruits in unusual flavor combinations.

Amber Russet

1 package quick-setting orange jelly powder.
4 tablespoons sugar
1½ cups warm prune juice.
Dash of salt
Juice of 1 lemon and maraschino cherry juice to make ½ cup.

Dissolve quick-setting jelly powder in 1½ cups prune juice which is slightly warmer than lukewarm. Add sugar, salt, and fruit juices. Turn into individual moulds. Chill until firm. Unmould and serve with whipped cream. Serves 6.

Cardinal Pear Mould

1 package quick-setting cherry jelly powder
⅓ tablespoon vinegar
⅛ teaspoon ginger
1⅓ cups warm water
⅓ cup juice from canned or cooked pears
⅛ teaspoon salt

Dissolve jelly powder in warm water, having water slightly above lukewarm in temperature. Add pear juice, vinegar, ginger, and salt. Turn into individual moulds. Chill until firm. Unmould. Serve garnished with sections of pears. Serves 6.

Here is a smooth Custard Sauce which can be served with plain jelly of any flavour.

Custard Sauce

2 tablespoons sugar
1 tablespoon flour.
Dash of salt
1 egg yolk, well beaten
1¼ cups milk, scalded.
½ teaspoon vanilla

Combine sugar, flour, salt and egg yolk. Add small amount of milk, stirring constantly. Cool, Add vanilla. Makes 1½ cups sauce.

Difference In Toy And Model Trains

Latter Is For the Man With Suppressed Desires

There is a big difference between a toy train and a model train. A model train is for the man whose suppressed desire is to be a railroad president or who secretly covets the job of being the engineer of a railway system. Building model systems often develops into a major hobby.

One store we know has the equipment, which consists of making miniatures of real railroads. Small copies of the locomotives and cars that pull out of terminals every day or carry freight and passengers all over the country on all the railway lines can be made with this equipment. There are parts for freight cars, oil tankers refrigerated cars and the latest passenger coaches.

Building any of these is almost as complicated as building the real thing. The whole family sometimes joins in this hobby when it comes to making scenery—towns, stations, mountains, trees, gardens and so on.

Claim Graduates Social Failures

Lacking Manners a New Course is Formed at Ohio University to Teach Rules of Etiquette.

Western Reserve University's downtown unit, Cleveland College, has a coufse in "the technique of social and business intercourse," adopted at the suggestion of Newton D. Baker, a university trustee.

The former secretary of war was said to have been amazed at the bad manners of college graduates. "He was astounded," explained Dr. A. Caswell Ellis of the college faculty, "when he saw a couple of them using the banjo grip on a fork at the dinner table."

Teach by Laboratory Methods

The laboratory method of teaching will be used in the course. Classes will give teas and dinners so students will have an opportunity to practice good manners.

Persons not studying in the college will be permitted to enroll.

"Full-time students are advised to select this course," Dr. Ellis said. "Not merely the rules of acceptable social procedure are discussed, but also the underlying philosophy and psychology which give meaning to the procedures followed by people of culture and refinement.

How to Lose Friends

"Among the topics to be studied are. "Correct forms of introduction under various circumstances, how to meet people easily and put them at ease, how to start and carry on interesting conversations, how to use the voice—quality, pitch, enunciation, inflection—posture, poise, detection and overcoming of unpleasant habits, getting away gracefully, the host and hostess in the home, the guest in another's home, conduct in public places and travelling, dress for different occasions, how to make friends, how to lose friends."

Women Spend More But Donate Less

Both Sexes Would Rather Will Money Than Bestow It While Living

American women possess more of the private wealth of the country but contribute less to private charity than men, a man and a woman speaker said last week at a meeting in New York of the National Committee for Religion and Welfare Recovery.

"Women do not give as generously as men nor do they give to as many types of organizations," said Miss Mary E. Hughes, director of the National Committee's women's division. "They have not as yet accepted the principle of stewardship, although the wealth of the country is rapidly getting into their hands.

Seven Times As Willing

"Women hold 60 per cent of bonds and savings and 80 per cent of insurance policies. They buy 85 per cent of all retail merchandise. They spend, but they do not give."

Dr. Guy E. Morrill, of the Presbyterian Church's Department of Missions, said that although women were richer, a survey showed that they gave away only one-half as much money as men. Miss Hughes said that women gave principally to churches and health groups, and comparatively seldom to education.

"Investigations have showed that both men and women are seven times as willing to give by will as they are to give when alive." Dr. Morrill revealed.

834 Cars of Food Sent To Prairies

TORONTO—The number of carloads of provision set for the relief of families in the dry regions of Western Canada has reached 834, according to an announcement by Rev. D. N. McLachlin, secretary of the Joint Committee of the Churches for Western Relief. The original objective was 500 carloads.

Ontario and Eastern Canada sent 382 carloads; Saskatchewan, six; Manitoba, 189; Alberta, 106; and British Columbia, 151.

Declares Girls Mature at Six

But Irish Author Believes Boys Require 40 Years to "Grow Up"

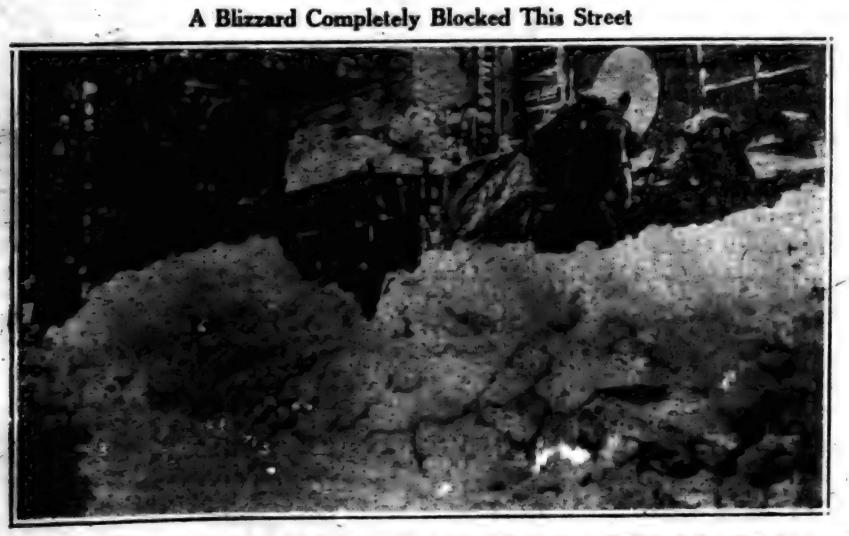
Girls mature at the age of six; boys not until they are 40 says Liam O'Flaherty, Irish author of "The Informer," and to this he attributes the tribulations of mankind.

The tall writer arrived on this continent last week, from Ireland, for a short visit before he heads south to "work."

"I am now 40 and have only just reached maturity," said O'Flaherty. "I have given up drinking, late hours and all that sort of thing. Like most young Irishmen, I have spent years wandering, dissatisfied. But now I can see that was only a phase.— I have grown up at last.

Get Fight Out of System

"Girls start in to play with dolls and dolls' houses in their infancy — playing then at what will later be their life's work — but boys never get seriously down to business."



"What about little boys who play with soldiers? Aren't they showing how they will fight their way in the world?" the author was asked.

"They are so, and isn't that just what I was tellin' yet," replied O'Flaherty. "The girls start to demonstrate their natural metiers first of all. You wouldn't call it a sign of maturity to start fighting. People only grow up when they get that out of their system."

11-year-old Josephine Villafino has given birth to a son in Buenos Aires She claims to be the world's youngest mother.

Issue No. 52—'37

O Holy Night!

A CHRISTMAS STORY by ELINORE COWAN STONE

The voices of the boy choir rose above the rich roll of the organ as John opened the door and slipped into the warm, shadowy depths of the church—piercing high and sweet:

O Holy night!
The stars are brightly shining—

What was it the music made him think of? Of course—the buoyant flight of a breath-takingly beautiful silver plane, lifting, dipping, soaring. And nothing could be more beautiful than that.

It was cozy and pleasant to sit here making pictures in your mind. But that wasn't the only reason John liked to come. He liked the music. What was more, he thought a little guiltily, he liked it because it was Christmas music.

Of course he knew now that it was nothing but a bourgeois fairy story—about the little Lord Jesus and the Star and the strange magnificent kings with their rich gifts of gems and myrrh and frankincense. Anton had explained all that to him.

If Anton knew he came here he would be hurt and angry, even though he only slipped in after delivering his papers for a warm place to stay till Anton came from the lunch room where he waited table from early morning till five. Anton disliked all churches with a bitterness that John only vaguely understood, but which, out of his adoration for this moody, tempestuous, but to him always gentle big brother, he loyally tried to emulate. For this particular church, Anton had a specially contemptuous name. He called it "old Spencer Morrow's fire escape."

When John asked him why, Anton's mouth twisted in that bitter, angry way it had lately as he replied, "Because the old pirate is fool enough to imagine the fortune he put into building that monument to superstition will save the mean, grasping little thing he calls his soul from the mythical place he calls hell."

When He Played The Violin

John hadn't asked any more questions, because if Anton got too much excited he would go on talking for hours instead of taking out his violin, tucking it tenderly under his chin, and playing there in their little room as only Anton could play.

And Anton must keep up his practice, because any day someone might send for him again to come and play, as they used to do before hard times. Then Anton would get out the black suit with tails he kept so carefully packed away, and his white shirt, and go off down the street, his slim, beautiful fingers caressing the instrument under his arm. Sometimes he took John with him.

On such occasions, John would have to hold his breath and grip the seat tightly to keep from bursting with excitement when Anton came forward—lithe and dark and handsome—lifted his head, and began to play, his face a little pale, his dark eyes alight, as if above the heads of the audience he were seeing things strange and beautiful beyond the ordinary ken.

. . . When Anton played his violin, he seemed to forget all about "monuments to superstition" and even "the totalitarian state."

It was only since Anton had had to work in the lunch room instead of playing that he had been so restless and bitter.

It had all been very different two years ago, while Mother was still alive. Then, on Christmas Eve, there would be wreaths in the windows, and candles everywhere; and when Anton came in from playing somewhere—a little pale, and with that wide, shining look his dark eyes always wore when he had played and played well, of having come slowly back from far places of enchantment—there would be cries of "Merry Christmas," and surprises for everyone. Afterward, Anton would play Christmas music—ending always with "O Holy Night!"

For a moment John remembered it all—the brightness, the warmth, the spicy evergreen smells, the music—and the surprises—with a wistful nostalgia which brought to his eyes tears he angrily wiped away on his worn coat sleeves.

No Surprise Expected

Well, there wouldn't be any surprises this year.

Last year he had bought Anton a surprise with some of his paper money—a truly splendid scarf pin in the shape of a tiny violin. That was when Anton had explained to him for the first time about the proletariat, and had talked about the necessity for "class loyalty," and the gross absurdity of "bourgeois sentimentality" about religion and Christmas.

No, John did not think he would try surprising Anton again this year. And he knew this time that there would be no surprise for him, either.

So he had made his own plan. It would not be quite the same as being surprised, of course. It would lack that breath-taking moment of almost unendurable happiness and suspense that came just before the gift was actually unwrapped. But the plan had its points.

The money he had managed to save from his paper route would buy the tools he needed to finish the model airplane he had been working on since last summer. It would be the most beautiful model ever built, and it would really fly. His fingers—no less magically supple and sensitive in their own way than Anton's, though John did not know this—itched to be at it.

He would wait till the day before Christmas, carry his parcel home, and put it away unopened until Christmas Eve. Then, when Anton had gone, he would get it out and open it just as if it had been a real surprise. He was still planning happily and jingling his money in his pocket as he left the church and turned through the park, when he saw the old man again.

Park Bench Sitters

The old man was sitting huddled on one of the iron benches in the park. His hat had slid off, the book he inevitably carried had slid from his grasp to the dead leaves at his feet, and his head drooped on his breast, its silky white hair fluttering in the faint breeze.

John saw that he was asleep again. It was the old man's deplorable habit of dropping to sleep at the most inopportune times that had first caught John's attention.

Park benches, John knew from shrewd observation, were not spots to sleep on with impunity. Yet the first time he had come upon the old man he had been serenely nodding while a ratlike youth expertly rifled his pockets.

At the sound of John's feet on the gravel, the old man had awakened with startling suddenness, and the pickpocket had fled. John was just about to lift a shrill cry for Larry, the park cop, when the old man caught his arm with a swift dart of a thin old hand and said, "Hey, son, let him go! He's welcome to anything he found in my pockets. Don't bring that confounded officer over here asking questions. Can't a man shut his eyes in peace for a minute without getting mixed up with the law?"

John considered this wisely. Child of the street as he had been these two years, it was not strange to his philosophy that park bench sitters often shrank modestly from the attention of Larry. It did seem a little strange that such a clean, guileless looking old gentleman should be at odds with the law, but you never coud tell.

A Situation Grasped

His suspicions were still further confirmed by an incident that occurred while he was talking with the old man several days later.

They were sitting together when, in the midst of a sentence, the old man glanced over his shoulder, started, scrambled to his feet, and with a finger warningly at his lips, scurried into the bushes that flanked the bench.

A man was hurrying down the walk from the avenue, looking sharply from left to right. John made his eyes very blank as the man approached.

"Have you," asked the man, "seen an old gentleman about here? He'd been wearing a gray overcoat and carrying a book."

"Sure, Mack. 'Bout 20 minutes ago. He took the Seventy-Three car, going south." John lied hardily.

"Have you—does he come here often?"

"Naw," said John. "And I'm around here every day sellin' my papers. He was—was just walkin' by."

When the man had disappeared, the old gentleman emerged cautiously from the bushes.

"Well," he said, and there was a friendly twinkle in his old blue eyes, "I guess we disposed of that busybody. Son, you show an aptness at grasping a situation and a finesse in action that should take you far."

"Don't Believe In Christmas"

Now, when John saw the nodding old figure on the bench, he felt a troubled sense of responsibility, as he so often did in the case of Anton.

"Say, listen, Gramps," he began as the old man started awake at his touch, blinked, and smiled up at him a little vaguely, "ain't I told you it ain't safe to go to sleep here? Look what happened the first time. Anyhow, it's too cold."

It was indeed cold. The first real frost of a late season was in the air and a few feathery flakes of snow were drifting down.

"Say," offered John, moving a step nearer, "I know a good place if you want one. It's warm in that church over there. I'll bet you could slip in and stay, and nobody would ever know. There are cushions too, and sometimes there's music."

"Ah!" said Gramps, and turned to view the church with sudden interest. "Now that's an idea! Put old Morrow's fire escape to a practical purpose, eh? Good joke on him!"

For by this time, of course, the old man knew all about Anton and the international brotherhood of man.

As John turned away, Gramps hastily added, as if he could not bear to be left alone, "Hey! You're not going, are you?"

John hesitated, jingling his money.

"You sound like a bloated capitalist," observed Gramps.

"Most five dollars," admitted John with a glow of pride. "And it will be five by to-morrow night."

"Imagine having that much money in one pocket," Gramps sighed. "I wonder if I'll ever feel that rich again. And I suppose you're planning to spend it all for Christmas presents."

"Heck! We don't believe in Christmas at our house."

John tried to speak with a calm superiority, as a good comrade should; but he choked up a little over the words.

Has To Be Shared

"No Christmas — but of course! The observation of the Christmas myth is the lowest form of bourgeois sentimentality, isn't it? And yet, unless my memory fails me, Christ was a carpenter, and He also believed in the brotherhood of man."

John considered this in startled silence. He wondered if Anton knew that.

"Then what, if you'll forgive my curiosity," asked Gramps, "are you going to do with all that wealth?"

So John told him, a little reluctantly, about the tools. The old man listened attentively. They had often talked of the model before. Gramps knew a lot about planes, for an old man.

"No doubt your decision is a sensible one," Gramps said slowly when he had finished. His voice sounded suddenly tired and flat. "Certainly there's no bourgeois sentimentality about it. Your brother should be proud of you—and after all, not believing in Christmas can't be a more forlorn business than not having anyone who really cares for you to share it with. To be really . . .

Christmas has to be shared. . . . Well, I must be getting along, and —" he smiled a wry little smile—"I think I shall take your very practical advice."

John watched him as he made his way a little stiffly across the park to the church, one of his shabby old books clutched under his arm, looking very old and tired and lonely.

In A Back Pew

John found Anton already at home, anxiously inspecting the fine black suit with tails that had hung so long unused. At last, it seemed, Anton was going out to play his violin again. A note had come to the restaurant that day. It was to be at someone's house, on Christmas Eve, and he was to have $50 for it. Anton was so happy that he was almost incoherent.

The next day was clear and bright; but a heavy snow mantled the ground and the trees bore nodding white plumes. It was too cold to linger in the park, but when John slipped into the church, he saw the old man, sitting there in a back pew, listening to the music.

John was glad they hadn't thrown him out. He looked so sad, however, as if he were thinking unhappy thoughts deep within himself, that John did not approach him, but slipped out again into the snow. And as he went, his hand involuntarily clutched at the precious money in his pocket as if he felt it slipping away from him.

For somehow, as he remembered that quiet old figure in the church, disturbing echoes of words crowded in upon him: "Christmas can't be happy unless it's shared." And the old man had no one who cared, to share Christmas with him. That meant that there would be no surprise for Gramps, either. And probably Gramps still liked surprises as well as anyone.

Gay Parcel

John fingered the money in his pocket and swallowed a monumental lump in his throat.

Well, suppose he did buy the old man a surprise, what should he choose? How could he possibly guess what Gramps really wanted, unless—but of course! A new book, a beautiful new book, so that he needn't carry around those shabby old ones any more.

John didn't know much about books, but after he had wandered about the book store, looking at covers until he was dizzy, he saw just the thing—a fine big book, richly bound in soft reddish leather with gold letters.

"That one," he said, pointing.

It was expensive—$5, the salesgirl pointed out. He could get the same book in a different binding, much cheaper.

"That one," said John firmly; and hurried out with the wrapped book under his arm before he should change his mind.

He went directly back to the church because he was afraid he might miss Gramps if he waited till tomorrow. Fortunately the old man was still there, his white head dropped on his chest. He woke instantly when John touched his shoulder.

"This is for you," said John, holding out his parcel, a little breathless with hurry and embarrassment. "But it's a surprise, and you musn't open it till Christmas Eve."

For a moment Gramps looked up at him as if hardly believing his ears. Then he took the parcel with the gay red and green ribbon the lady had wrapped it in, and looked at it.

"Thank you," he said at last. "Thank you. I—this is a surprise. You have made me very happy. I—I wonder if you will do something to make an old man even happier — spend a part of tomorow evening with me. We — we might have a snack to eat and manage a very pleasant time of it together."

"It's Christmas Eve"

Anton had already gone when John went out next evening. John was surprised when he found that the house at the address Gramps had given was so large and imposing.

Gramps couldn't really live here. But perhaps he was a janitor or something and lived behind. John rang the bell.

It was some time before anyone answered. John was about to go away when the door opened and a man turned on an overhead light and said, "Oh, yes. You are to come right in."

John, who had a street Arab's trained memory for faces, stared. But this was the man Gramps had run away from in the park. Then, right behind the man, was Gramps himself, smiling and holding out his hand.

"Oh, but, sir," cried the man, turning reproachingly, "you shouldn't be out here exposing yourself to the night air."

"Don't be an old maid, Hodges. It's Christmas Eve." Gramps didn't seem to be at all afraid now. "Aren't you satisfied with hounding me all the year long? Come in, comrade."

They went through a warm hallway into a great bright room where men were sitting and standing about. At once John felt at home, for they were all shabby men such as he had often seen lined up outside soup kitchens or employment agencies—men of all nationalities and complexions, but all strangely alike in their sullen, beaten look. Now they didn't look sullen or beaten, only expectant, and a little watchful perhaps.

In a few minutes there was dinner for everyone—an amazing dinner—with Gramps, in a rather rumpled suit, at the head of the long table, and to John's complete undoing, Anton, of all people, sitting at his right.

After everyone had eaten enormously, they went into another great room, and there were surprises for everyone from a tall, softly lighted tree. John had to pinch himself to believe that his own surprise was a set of delicate tools such as he had wanted with a longing that hurt, but finer than he had ever hoped to have.

Christmas Facts

During Shakespeare's Time Festivities Lasted for Twelve Days

Christmas has not always been a season for festivity, and when Oliver Cromwell was Protector all fun and feasting was forbidden at this time of the year.

There are a great many other things about Christmas which people do not know; the fact, for instance, that Norwegian farmers give their cattle tubs of home-brewed ale on Christmas Eve, or that at 12 midnight on the same day people in Madrid eat 12 grapes for good luck in the coming year. In Hungary they consider the needy, and all the richer citizens are levied so that the poor may have sufficient to eat and drink.

Now many know that there are 175 different kinds of holly, that during Shakespeare's time Christmas festivities lasted for 12 days, or that Christmas has been celebrated on more than 100 different days in various parts of the world? Our present holiday on December 25th we owe to Pope Julius I, who fixed the date in the year 851.

Smallest Churches Accommodate Six

A church in Guernsey, Channel Islands, has accommodation for six people, and is claimed to be the smallest in the world. It was built by a monk from stones, sea-shells, and home-made cement.

But it has some strong rivals. Hedge End Church, in Hampshire, Eng., holds only eight people and was built as a form of memorial to those who fell in the Great War.

Hackney, London, has a church, attached to some almhouses, which can only accommodate a congregation of 14; while the village of Grove in Buckinghamshire, has a church built for the benefit of the 16 inhabitants.

At Eldon, Hants, which has only nine inhabitants, the church has but one door, and, it is claimed, the smallest font in England.

The Great Surprise

Finally Gramps, whom everyone was calling "Mr. Morrow," took down the last parcel—square and bulky—and said, "Now this is my great surprise."

John recognized it by the ribbon. It was the book. His heart sank, for there were rows and rows of books about the room—some even more shabby than the one Gramps had carried, in a special case, carefully locked up.

And he had given the old man a book.

But Gramps' hand was on John's shoulder, and Gramps was saying heartily, "Why, I never in my life had one as fine as this!"

For the first time John remembered that in his haste yesterday he hadn't even looked at the title. Now he craned his neck to read it. The book was called "The Holy Bible."

Then everyone sat down, and Anton tucked his violin under his chin and played—German music, Italian music, Russian, Polish, and Hungarian music, and an Irish love song—something for everybody. And as he played, the faces—Polish, Irish, Italian, German, and Hungarian — were no longer even watchful, but soft and kind of shining.

When Anton had played a long time, he stopped and said to the old man, "Now I think we'll have a little real Christmas music."

He looked at John for a moment, and Anton's face, too, was soft and all shining as he began to play "O Holy Night!"

Netherlands Had "Early Christmas"

Night of Dec. 5th Was Observed As St. Nicholas Festival In Holland

AMSTERDAM—St. Nicholas paid a visit to good little children of The Netherlands on St. Nicholas' Eve.

With his Negro servant, Black Pete, the saint appeared astride his white horse, as is the custom of every Dec. 5.

At twilight, all the family are at home.

The doorbell rings, and there are St. Nicholas and Black Pete. The marvelously informed saint questions each child on his behavior, and presents are given to the whole family.

Goes Back To A.D. 345

There follow servings of "Bishop wine" for adults, chocolate milk for children. St. Nicholas songs are sung until late.

This "Early Christmas" goes back to December 6th, the year 345, when the Archbishop of Myra (St. Nicholas) died after being imprisoned by Diocletian and freed by Constantine. The prelate's surreptitious bestowal of dowries on three daughters of an impoverished citizen supposedly started the custom of presents on St. Nicholas' Eve—a custom later transferred to Christmas Day in many countries.

Once the Hollanders tried to abolish St. Nicholas' Day in favor of Christmas, but St. Nick and Black Pete were easy winners.

Glove Pledges

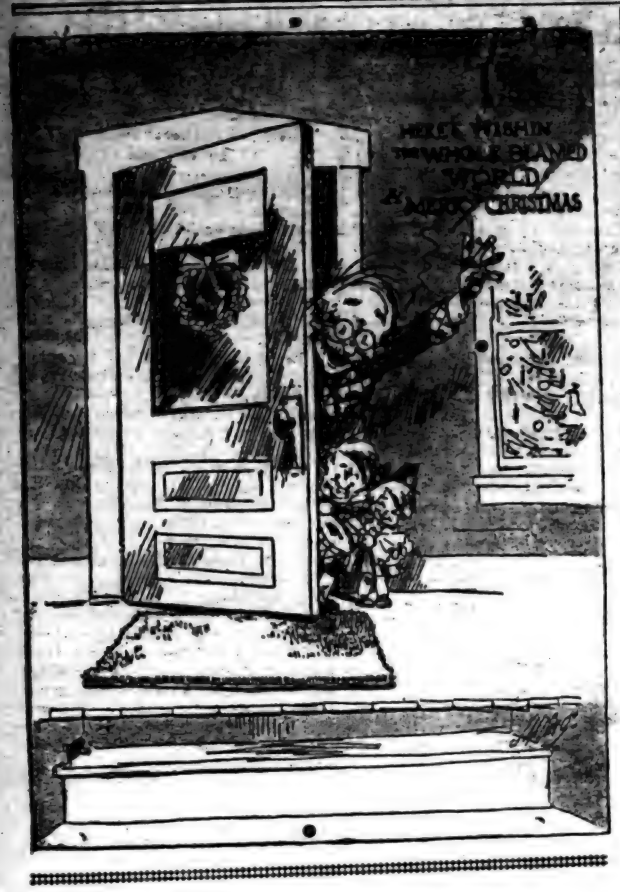
You may be unaware of it, but if this Christmas you send a pair of gloves as a present, you are making a symbolic gesture. In ancient times gloves were sent to mend broken ties, patch quarrels and cement friendships. They were supposed to represent the handshake of friendship; in the Middle Ages they were used as pledges of faith, and a king's glove was a guarantee of safe conduct in his territory.

Queer though it may seem, gloves were not first worn in cold countries, but in Egypt, where many fashions originated. The oldest pair in existence was found in the box of royal robes in King Tutankhamen's tomb. It was not until the eleventh century that Europe adopted the fashion, and in the thirteenth century the glovers of Perth founded their famous company.

Santa Claus Loses Pair of Reindeer

Santa Claus was anything but jolly — and all because of his reindeer.

Just before what was to have been Santa's triumphal entry into Bluffton, Indiana, one of his four reindeer broke a leg in trying to escape from a barn to the snow-covered countryside. Then a second deer broke away.



Santa finally got the other two harnessed to his sleigh, the smile back on his face and was off down Main St. in a cloud of snow to cheers and surprise of some 1,000 children, who thought he always drove four reindeer.

Peasants Forecast Christmas Weather

In some country districts of France a custom is observed which is supposed to enable people to forecast the weather on Christmas Day and throughout the coming year. Twelve onions are placed in a row and on each is placed a dab of salt. If by Epiphany the salt on any onion has melted, then the month represented by that particular onion will be wet. If the salt on the twelfth onion is dry, then Christmas Day, also, will be fine.

At Baux, in Provence, shepherds hold a watch-night service at which they pray for good weather. Each arrives carrying a lighted taper and a lamb and prays before a crib, as the shepherds did 2,000 years ago.

MERRY CHRISTMAS

The SPORTS BROADCAST

By Al Ryckman

A CHRISTMAS OVERTURE

What a day to try to work! Phones ringing with a special yuletide tinkle! People running around the office with turkeys under their arms. Evrybody full of happiness and greetings! It's Christmas the best time of all the year and once again we get that old feeling almost equal to the one when the maestro was just a nipper and it was our custom to get up early on the morning of the 25th and sneak downstairs to see what old man Claus had put on the tree.

Since we are older that merry old rush and roar has been crowded into two or three days, whereas in the days of yesteryear (there's a sixty-cent word) we used to get excited about four weeks in advance and slowly but surely work up that excitement to a fever when it came time for the reindeer to gallop on our house top.

So that is why little Willie Whopper was all agog over the situation and remarked, "Uncle Oscar why do you read that little red book every Christmas Eve?" To which Uncle Oscar replied, "Well little William, in this book which is called A Christmas Carol, I meet many old friends that I have known since I was smaller than any of Singer's midgets and walked like the Ritz brothers. Like for instance that picture on the cover of the three carol singers."

"Are they some of your old friends?" asked little William gazing at the cover.

"They are indeed," replied Uncle Oscar placing his chubby little nephew on his lap, "I can tell by the way they are swaying, especially the gent in the middle wearing a green jacket and whose toes are turned up, that he is taking high C in an old-fashioned version of a carol. But some people, not like you and I, give little thought to whether these lads are rendering 'Ye Merry Gentlemen' or the 'Merry-go-round Broke Down'. But I'll bet the Business Men's Cup the suite is that of 'Joy To The World'."

"Who is this funny old man?" laughed Willie as he opened Dickens' favourite book.

"That gent is Scrooge", answered Uncle Oscar. "He was a very cranky person—so cranky that I believe Henry got his idea from him for a Ford. He makes his clerk, Bob Cratchit, work very hard in a cold office with long hours."

"But who is Bob Cratchit?" inquired little Willie.

"Well", said Uncle Oscar, rustling over a few chapters until he came to another picture, "There is Bob Cratchit just entering his house on Christmas Eve. Look at Mrs. Cratchit and all the children waiting behind the door. They have been waiting there a long time now but they still are looking forward for Bob to enter. And look at the holly and candles in the windows. So——"

But before his uncle could finish, little William had turned the page and spied Tiny Tim on crutches.

"That is Tiny Tim", said Oscar Reckles, "the poor little chap has been a delicate sort of youngster. And each year when I see him I feel sorry that he'll never be able to play left wing for the Maroons or dash around the the Brampton lacrosse box. But often when a little cripple lad in the bleachers shouts as Tommy Oliver shags a fly in the outfield, I feel a certain glow deep down inside for truly here is a modern Tim thoroughly enjoying himself."

"And here is Marley's ghost," continued Uncle Oscar, "wearing a heavy chain not because the floor is slippery but so that he can't tear around and lay claim to the title of Galloping Ghost which Red Grange and Dave Sprague have already copyrighted."

But little Willie was starting to yawn now, so his beloved uncle carried him from the parlour into his nursery. His eyes were blinking and almost closed as Oscar placed him in his cot.

"You will never be an old meany Scrooge, Uncle Oscar," said Willie as Uncle Oscar tucked him in to bed, so that he might be ready for the morrow which was Christmas Day.

"That my little nephew is a very fine thing to say," replied Uncle Oscar. "And you wil never be a Tiny Tim, but grow up instead to be a star first sacker for the Port Credit team or an outside wing for the dear old Tigers".

And so it comes each year that Christmas feeling that you cannot buy, borrow or explain. But customers, may you never lose it when the Yuletide rolls around. So A Merry Christmas to you all!

COOKSVILLE

A. L. Molloy, Windermere avenue, Toronto, narrowly escaped death Saturday when his car crashed into a heavy truck owned by the Longworth Milling Co. of Toronto, and took fire.

The collision occurred within a few yards of the headquarters of the Cooksville fire department, and Jack Braithwaite, fire chief of the village, rushed to the damaged car with a chemical extinguisher and snuffed out the flames before they reached the gasoline feed line.

The fire was caused by a leakage of alcohol from the damaged radiator of the car, it was found.

George Hale, Toronto, driver of the truck, suffered minor cuts and bruises and Molloy, who was injured about the legs, was unable to get out of his light coach until assisted.

Jim Walterhouse, Cooksville, was injured in the left eye, Saturday, when a pellet from a shotgun entered the ball of the eye. Frank Walterhouse, the father, and another brother, Fred, rushed the injured youth to the office of Dr. Harold Sutton, Cooksville, where it was found that the sight could be saved. Frank Walterhouse was shooting at a rabbit when the accident occurred, and believed that his son was well out of the line of the fire.

"FIRST FOOTING"

Scotch New Year's Custom Was Formerly Popular in America.

ONCE highly popular New Year's custom in various parts of our own country, but one which is annually falling more and more into disuse, except in remote rural districts, is that of young men and women, often disguised by grotesque costumes and masks, going about from house to house on New Year's eve firing off guns, blowing horns, singing and partaking of any good cheer that may be offered them.

This is undoubtedly a modification of the old Scottish custom of "first footing," which was observed by large parties of men and women carrying a great bowl or flagon of drink as well as a plentiful supply of cakes, bread and cheese. Thus equipped, they went about from house to house at midnight on New Year's eve, and if in any of the dwellings visited they were the first to set foot after that hour they were called the "first footing" and were treated with the utmost consideration by the people of the house, who provided them with good cheer and partook in return of that which the "first footing" party brought with them.

THEY WENT ABOUT FROM HOUSE TO HOUSE

Among many other old superstitions associated with New Year's is a belief that if a lamp or candle be taken out of a house on that day some member of the family will die within a twelvemonth, while to throw out dirty water, ashes or anything whatever, no matter how worthless, is regarded as certain to bring ill luck during the whole of that year.

A NEW YEAR GAME.

All of the Months Play Their Parts in This Timely Pastime.

This game is played as a sort of "dumb crambo." There are an audience and thirteen actors, or a few months can be suggested, taking months containing notable holidays.

First comes before the audience the little New Year. She announces that her children are coming and to him who guesses the most names correctly will be given a prize.

Then comes January, with her hand full of slips of papers on which are written "good resolutions;" these she scatters to the audience and goes off. Of course the months must not follow her in succession.

Next may come May, fanning himself and perhaps snapping a firecracker or in some other way not so plain suggesting Empire Day.

Then September, working hard for Labor day or bearing a September flower or fruit.

November, with a suggestion of Thanksgiving, and so on. Birthdays of noted men may mark the months, the actor saying or doing something to recall the man.

The audience must write down who No. 1 is, 2, and so on to the end. Then comes the year, who gives the prize.

Ringing the Old Year Out.

Of all sounds of all bells, most solemn and touching is the peal which rings out the old year. I never hear it without a gathering up of my mind to a concentration of all the images that have diffused over the past twelvemonth, all I have done or suffered, performed or neglected, in that regretted time. I begin to know its worth when a friend dies. It takes a personal color, nor was it a poetical flight in a contemporary when he exclaimed, "I sat in the skirts of the departing year."—Charles Lamb.

New Year's Day.

Full knee deep lies the winter snow,
And the winter winds are wearily sighing;
Toll ye the church bells, sad and slow,
And tread softly and speak low,
For the old year lies a-dying.

• • • And let him in
That standeth there alone
And waiteth at the door.
There's a new foot on the floor, my friend,
And a new face at the door, my friend—
A new face at the door.

—Tennyson.

Snider's

The pupils and teacher (Miss A. Maxwell) of Snider's School staged a successful Christmas concert on Tuesday, Dec. 21st. "Aboard a Christmas Dream Ship," a Christmas play, was the final number on the program. The scholars were delighted with gifts from the tree presented by Santa Claus. Mr. Walter Royle chairman of the school board, presided. The program was closed by the singing of the National Anthem.

Mr. and Mrs. H. T. Post entertained recently in honour of the birthday of Mrs. Post's sister, Miss E. Telfer, of Milton.

Members of the Fish connection motored to Hatchley, near Norwich on Christmas Day where they were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Emory Sibbald and Misses Lillian and Barbara Sibbald

Mrs. Alpheus Fish and Mr. and Mrs. Roy Fish were among those who called on Mr. and Mrs. William Johnstone, Comely Bank Farm, to extend congratulations on the occasion of their 55th wedding anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Dunn and Misses R. and L. Dunn were Christmas Day guests of Mrs. G. Gillelan, Toronto.

Miss Betty Dunn, of Islington, visited on Sunday with Miss Roberta Dunn.

Veteran's Xmas Tree

Last evening, Streetsville Post No. 139, Canadian Legion held their Annual Christmas Tree and supper for the children, with a good attendance, of both adult and young people.

After a good hot supper Mr. James Lacey acted the role of Santa Claus and distributed gifts from the beautiful Xmas Tree, which delighted the children.

Popular songs were sung with Hec. Graydon presiding at the piano.

Mr. Geo. Riches, president, opened the proceedings and then handed the reins of office over to his successor, Dr. Montemurro, who will be president for 1938. Both these gentlemen gave addresses

A bountiful supply of nuts and candies were distributed and all the children had a real good time.

There was a song by Chief Elder field; guitar Solos by Mr Gay; quartettes etc.

Among those present were representatives from the Village Council the Clergy and the Press.

School Concert at No. Ten

On December 22nd, 1937, the old White School, S.S. No. 10, Trafalgar, was filled to its utmost capacity with an audience anxious to see what kind of material the section had to take up the work in this old historical section that had sent so many brilliant men and women once pupils in this school. Many of them had gone to lands far distant and with strangers made their home, and wherever they went were always pleased to say they were once pupils in School Section No. 10, and we are delighted to say were a credit to themselves and to the section.

As the interested audience listened to these young pupils in songs, recitations and dialogues, they felt that these young pupils, under the tutelage of Miss Oakes, the day teacher, and Miss Fox, music teacher, with their talents perfected, when in life's busy scene they take a part, will be a credit to themselves and the section in whatever calling they choose.

When we review the now and then
Of the boys and girls of Number Ten,
The present actors on life's stage
Deserve a place on history's page.

This being the first chapter in these young actors' lives when they performed at a public entertainment, instead of any comment on their ability as coming actors we will put the names of everyone of the pupils who took any part in the entertainment in the paper. Then in the future when we look over the history of these boys and girls we will see if they have fulfilled our sanguine expectations.

Then we'll think of that windy December night,
And the school entertainment that gave so much delight,
The welcome song, with the Christmas cheer,
That was such pleasant music to everyone's ear,
Then we will find in an old Streetsville Review
Some things we expected these scholars to do.
Everyone of the audience had that pleasant thought,
On the bright page of life they would not leave a blot.
We all are quite sure we never will find
A sting, or a jar they are leaving behind;
And will grow up noble women and men
And be a credit to our teachers of old Number Ten.

Mr. Will Cook, trustee and ex-pupil, made an ideal chairman, just what we would expect from any ex-pupil of S.S. No. 10. The following program was given to the delight and admiration of the large audience: Welcome song, Jr. singing, games, piano solo, dialogue, "A dose of his own medicine," drill, color fairies, community singing by children and audience led by Miss Fox, broadcast, carol, "Hark the Herald Angels Sing," play, recitation, vocal duet, hoboes, table and junior games, Humpty Dumpty, A Hunting We Will Go, I've a Little Dog, dancing song, mulbery bush. Names of pupils taking part are as follows: Ruth Hinan, Bob Hinan, Alan Giescke, Walter Giescke, Edith Giescke, John Bryant, Murray May, Elsie May, Billie Cook, Clifford Miller, Tommy Taylor, Velma Dowling, Betty Hamilton, Gerald Coulson, Irine Coulson, Ronald Bonham, Charlie Bonham, Dorothy Ellis, Roy Ellis, Bobby Ellis, Reta May, Wesley Miller.

Many would like to compliment Miss Fox on the bright ideas, training the boys to whistle and any girls who would care to practice. We have heard some girls whistling as sweet music as the birds. A whistling boy is always a happy boy. How we love to hear a boy whistling, taking home the cows or doing [illegible] of chores or following the plough, country boy who can whistle until his heart is content is monarch of all he surveys where there is no one to interfere with him or make him afraid. No one was ever heard whistling doing a wicked, mean or unkind act.

Short addresses were then given by Mrs. T. A. Leslie, a former teacher for five years (Miss Marian Giffin). Mrs. Leslie said it gave her great pleasure to be here tonight to meet so many old friends and former pupils, and she enjoyed the delightful entertainment that was given and wished all a happy Christmas and a long happy future for all the children.

Nat McCracken, the next speaker, said he always enjoyed a school entertainment. This was the thirty-fifth anniversary annually held in the White School. He had been present at nearly all of them and fully intended to be present at as many more if he was sure they would give as good an entertainment as this one was. After complimenting the teachers, Miss Oakes and Miss Fox, on their success as teachers, he hoped the young bachelors around would be kind enough to leave them with us for three or four years more. Then we would send out an army of boys and girls who would leave many bright marks on history's page.

George Bonham gave a splendid address. George was the man responsible for the wonderful school reunion held June 8th, 1929. We thought at one time we were going to lose George when his school days were over in Halton and he bought a farm in Peel, but he didn't go far into Peel, for he can see the White School from his farm house and he has no greater love for any place than he has for the old White School.

George, in his reminescences of the past school days, told how the Town Line Blasers used to chase the ninth line crowd home some nights. But he failed to tell how often Adam Bemish, a ninth line school champion, often escorted George right to his gate without any apparent effort to Adam, he being of war-like nature and very few had any desire to argue with him.

Mr. Fox, the music teacher's father, from Milton, once a farm boy near Omagh, said he had an interesting connection with No. 10 School. His first teacher in Omagh School was James McGregor, when he taught the Omagh School for two years. Mr. McGregor was an ex-pupil of No. 10 White School. Mr. Fox said he believed every pupil had something particular to remember that happened in his first days at school. This, he said, was what happened to him: He felt very shy and backward and some of the girls, full of mischief, would wink at him, so he went to the teacher and said, "Please, Master, the girls are winking at me." The teacher appeared very serious and asked him if they winked with both eyes. He said no, just one eye. Then the teacher said that wasn't so serious; when they wink with both eyes come and tell him. In after years, he said, they often lived that past scene in Omagh School together.

Then Santa distributed gifts off the Christmas tree to every one of the pupils and teachers. The seats were then packed on the platform and a few pleasant hours were spent dancing. Jim Urquart was floor manager. Mrs. May provided the music on the piano. After singing "God Save the King" another chapter in the old school's history was in the past.

Miss Mary Crago spent Christmas at her home in Orangeville.

The Rev. T. D. Jones, whose car figured in an accident last Friday afternoon, thinks that the law ought to provide that drivers who stop their cars to clean windshields or to effect repairs must go off the pavement completely where the shoulder permits and as far as possible where the shoulder is narrow, instead of stopping in the road to the endangering of traffic. The hazards of driving are tremendously increased when drivers can stop anywhere. Mr. Jones's car was bashed in badly, but the other car was scarcely touched, save that it collected the handles of the door and retained them so bedded that they could not be moved by the fingers. After moving bent fenders, etc., the car was able to proceed on its way and was taken in for repairs Monday.

Prize Winners in Drug Store Contest

The winners of the prize contest at S. B. MacPherson's Rexall Drug Store, Streetsville, which ended Christmas Eve, were as follows:

Boys—Gordon Bentley, H. Hollingshead, Jeff. Alvey, Roy Noble, Herb. Workman, Bogo Burns, Harold Lepofsky, Cecil Dudley

Girls—Flora Meredith, Joan McCarron, Beth Evans, Brenda Redick, Dene Precious, Rita Pavan, Leona Turney Baby Zardo.

Quite an interest was taken in the contest, and Mr. MacPherson says it was the best Christmas season's trade he has had in the past six years. The prizes were presented by the Reeve and members of the village council.

CHURCHVILLE

Resident of the district all his life, Harry Marshment died in Toronto in his 53rd year. Member of the United Church, Mr. Marshment was also well known in lodge circles being a member of the Oddfellows' Lodge and the Native Sons of Canada at Toronto. He was a Conservative. He is survived by his widow, two sons, Bert, Brampton, Lloyd, of Churchville; three daughters, Rita, Toronto, May and Jean, Churchville; two brothers, Bert, Detroit; Elmer, Churchville, and one sister, Mrs. M. Hall.

VILLAGE NOMINATIONS

The annual meeting to nominate candidates for Village Council, Public Utilities Commission and Public School Board was held in the Oddfellows' Hall Monday evening with Mr. J. W. Drennan, Village Clerk, presiding.

The following were nominated:

For Reeve—W. Potts, C. C. Meredith and C. H. Falconer.

For Councillors—C. E. Cantelon, J. E. Bailey, Chas. Godard, R. K. McMillan, L. M. Ramsay, John Moore, S. S. Rice, W Potts

For Public Utilities Commission—C. H. Falconer, M. M. Woodruff, H. W. Hope, W. C. Andrew.

For Public School Trustees—Jas. C. Rutledge, M. Donaldson, C. G. Quennell, G. S. Jourdan, S. S. Rice.

Short speeches were made by the nominees, but some of those nominated were not present.

The Open Column

And now, about the New Year of 1938. We intend to keep the jolly old custom induced by the Canadian conscience, and make a lot of very fine resolutions for the New Year. And then we intend to make one great, grand, magnificent resolution, a sort of blanket resolution, in fact, to bust all the other resolutions we made higher than a kite. There isn't, on the face of the globe, a more miserable, mean, unhappy mortal than the person fighting nobly to keep some fool resolve that they have inflicted on themselves in a fit of deluded contrition for some indefinable offence. The ravages of a sense of original sin are never more keenly felt by the populace at large than when some ordinarily good-hearted wight begins to resolve, and then goes about at large biting the ear off all and sundry because he or she doesn't want to keep the resolution, and doesn't want, at the same time, to admit being weak and spineless.

The safest resolution for the New Year, we believe, is to resolve to make no resolutions at all. If we have to quit smoking, then let's quit the best way we can, but without making a moral issue of the subject. If we've been tilting the jug too often, then we'll have to cut it out, but at least we don't have to make hypocrites of ourselves by making a colossal, gilt-edged resolution, and pretending we like it.

On the whole, 1937 wasn't a bad year for such of us as would let ourselves enjoy it. There were, of course, so many alarms and cries of "Wolf" that most of us were a bit jittery because of it all. But most of us ate our fill. Our personal waist-line has expanded, during the past year, some three or four inches. We all fooled ourselves that we had to gouge and chisel and scrimp to make a living, but we all knew that, if we failed, the Province of Ontario and the Dominion of Canada stood behind us to at least prevent our starving to death. Few of us were able to afford yachts or airplanes, but, after all, few of us know how to sail or fly, so it was probably just as well.

There is, perhaps, one resolution that could be made and kept with less pain and struggle than the majority of individual taboos with which we chain our instincts on the entry to a new year. We might, with good reason, exhibit a good deal more confidence in ourselves, in our neighbors, and in the country in which we live. We might, without hurting ourselves at all, relax our eternal vigilance against the hazy spectres of poverty and fraud and famine, and remind ourselves that we did well last year, that our neighbors did well last year, that, although perhaps our taxes are high, we enjoy comforts and even luxuries greater and more easily acceptable than could be obtained in any other age since the world began, and that we don't have to work so all-fired hard to obtain them, either. We thank you, and hope that your New Year will be a happy and prosperous one, and that you won't begin it with too severe a headache.

STUDENTS' COLUMN

Schoolboy Boxers of S.H.S.
(Some queer results of Examinations at the "High")

Mr. Buckle reported the day after he had marked the intelligent Ancient History papers of Middle School that a Pynn (which is really the meeting place of the Assembly for the ancient Greeks), was a stone image found in the desert.

We had our music exam. and one of the pupils wrote that diagrams (meaning diaphragm) are delicate things just below the ribs and above the stomach.

Miss Sheply said to Orville on the morning after an exam. "Orville, who told you Cleopatra was a flat-iron?" Orville (meekly), "Well, in my book, it says that Marc Anthony pressed his suit with Cleopatra."

It was written by a female British History student that "Columbus was a navigator who cursed about the Atlantic."

Here is a short intelligence test. See if you know the answers and calculate your own intelligence.

1. How much beard does a man grow in a year?
2. Can rabbits swim?
3. How did Christmas cards start?
4. How many eyes has a moth?
5. What is nestivation?
6. What is the longest word in the English language?

Francis Drake Biggest Pirate

Interpretation of Celebrated Seaman Slightly Different From Cut-and-Dried History.

Sir Francis Drake's disregard for the gallantry of Spain was lauded by Gordon L. Fraser, K.C. when he spoke to members of the Windsor Optimist Club last week, says the Windsor Star.

"I never thought much of it," remarked Mr. Fraser after telling how the famous English seaman had crumpled the gallantry of the Spaniards. "They are murdering each other now in Spain and maybe they should let them finish it," he added.

After referring to the recent piracy in the Mediterranean, he told of the one he considered to have been the greatest pirate in history, Sir Francis Drake.

Endorsed Him Privately

Mr. Fraser's interpretation of the career of Drake was far from the cut and dried school-history version, 'His clever and humorous tongue painted a word picture of the Elizabethan favorite to match his contention that Drake was one of the most colorful figures in the history of the world.

The speaker recalled in detail the series of expeditions conducted by Drake and his men, featuring the one that took them around the world.

Observing that while Queen Elizabeth told the world she did not endorse the actions of the British pirates against the Spaniards, she praised them privately, Mr. Fraser said, and even had an investment in the Drake main expedition which gave her a profit of more than a million dollars.

Loyalty of Men

Mr. Fraser emphasized the loyalty of Drake's men by maintaining that they would have even gone to hell with him for they knew if he took them there he could bring them back.

In closing, Mr. Fraser made brief mention of some other well-known buccaneers. He suggested that because of wireless and 40-knot boats, piracy today likely would not prove as prosperous a profession as it did in the 16th century.

Freak Fox Skins At Alberta Farm

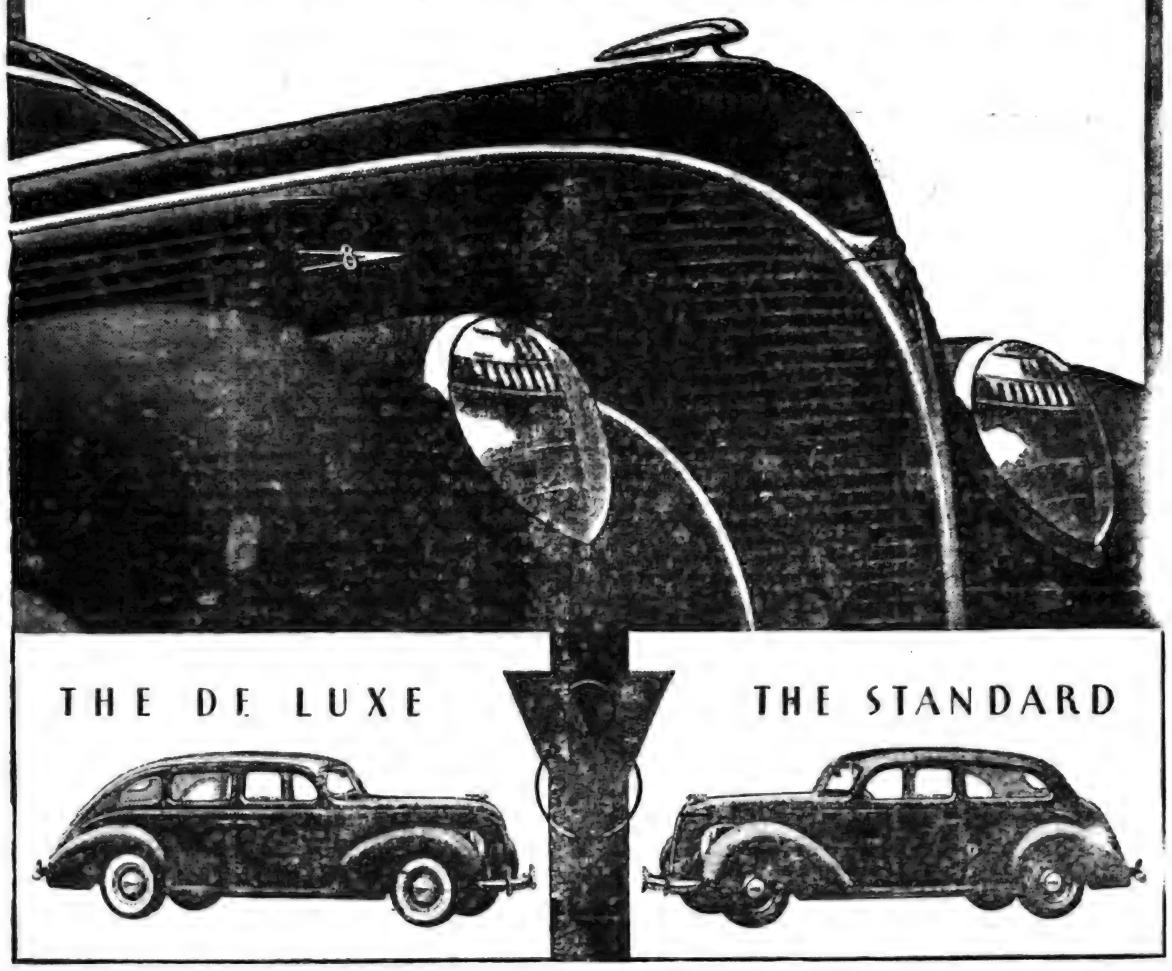
Golden-Silver Pelts to be Sent to Paris For Exhibition

Parisian women will decide whether the "golden-silver" pelts of two 'freak' foxes bred in Alberta are worthy of adoption as a new style for the smartly dressed woman.

The pelts were shown to members of the Alberta Silver Fox Breeders' Association at their annual meeting here. Called golden silvers by some experts, the pelts were exhibited by William Clarke Blackfalds, Alta., on whose farms they were raised.

The golden silvers were a mystery even to the owner who could not explain how the peculiar strain developed. The pelts will be sent to Paris for exhibition.

Three Ask Freedom From Same Wife



Three men asked legal freedom at Long Beach, Cal., last week—from the same wife.

In a divorce complaint, Richard Sorenson alleged Patricia L. Sorenson married him, Sam Paul Gaffney and Earl Vernon Holloway within 11 months.

Gaffney's annulment action said he was not of age when he went through a ceremony with Patricia.

Holloway's annulment suit said the defendant was not divorced when she became his bride.

Announcing
TWO NEW FORD V-8 CARS FOR 1938

FORD offers two new cars for 1938 — the Standard Ford V-8 and the De Luxe Ford V-8. They are different in appearance — but built to the same standard of mechanical excellence — on the same 112-inch wheelbase.

Because people liked our 1937 car so well, they bought more than of any other make. They liked its looks, its smooth performance, and the way it handled. We have improved on that car in the newly styled Standard Ford V-8.

But some folks wanted still more size and style, with the same fundamental Ford advantages. For them, we have designed a new De Luxe line.

The De Luxe Ford V-8 Sedans are longer with more room, larger luggage space, and finer appointments. De Luxe cars are equipped with the 85-horsepower Ford V-8 engine. They provide more motoring satisfaction at low Ford prices.

The Standard is even lower priced than the De Luxe. It is a brilliant, modern car. It has graceful new lines and well-tailored interiors. It gives you the same basic advantages of the 85-horsepower Ford V-8 engine.

Before Ford made V-type 8-cylinder engines available to every one, they were used only in expensive cars. Since then, four million Ford owners have learned the genuine enjoyment of driving an 8-cylinder car with all-round economy. The low prices of the De Luxe and Standard cars make it easy for you to step into the V-8 class.

FIT YOUR CAR TO YOUR NEEDS

With two distinct designs, two body sizes and two price ranges, you'll find a 1938 Ford car to fit your personal needs exactly. Whatever one you choose, you get time-proved Ford V-8 performance. Whatever price you pay, you get a car built soundly to serve you well. . . . That's the Ford way.

FOR LOW DELIVERED PRICES SEE YOUR LOCAL FORD DEALER

De Luxe Ford V-8 models are Coupe, Tudor Sedan, Fordor Sedan, Convertible Coupe, Club Coupe, Convertible Club Coupe, Phaeton and Convertible Sedan.

Standard Ford V-8 is available in three models: Coupe, Tudor Sedan and Fordor Sedan.

Ford sells a fully equipped car at the lowest possible price. The prices on De Luxe models include twin tail lights, two windshield wipers, two sun visors, twin electric horns, cigar lighter, de luxe steering wheel, glove compartment clock and lock, chrome wheel bands, in addition to front and rear bumpers and guards, spare wheel and tire and tube, tire lock, and headlight beam indicator.

Prices on Standard models include front and rear bumpers and guards, spare wheel and tire and tube, tire lock, one tail light, one windshield wiper, one sun visor, cigar lighter, headlight beam indicator, and two horns.

MAKE YOUR LIVER Produce its bile

Your liver has a big job to do. Make it do what it is supposed to. Its job is to produce 18 to 36 fluid ounces of bile every day and send it through the system. If it fails down on its job you suffer. "HOW?" The most effective stimulant for the liver known to medical science is calomel which in small doses is one of the highest use in constipative conditions, especially those due to over-eating, over indulgence in alcohol, lack of exercise, etc. Tanol Tablets contain a certain proportion of calomel, blended with carcara and other medicines. They are mild and harmless. But your liver understands and takes the hint. For sale at all druggists, 50c. (B)

Pretty Seller — "What about this cigarette case?"
Young Man — "I don't smoke."
Pretty Seller — "This pen wiper."
Young Man — "I never have any use for them because I never write."
Pretty Seller — "This package of candy?"
Young Man — "I never eat candy?"
Pretty Seller — "Then what about this cake of soap?"
The young man bought it.

This is the end of 1937:
Don't be fooled by the calendar.
There are only as many days in the year as you make use of.
One man may get only a month's value out of an entire year,
While another will get a full year's value out of a month.
It's the use you make of your time that counts.

Boss — "Hi, there, you; didn't you tell me you never got tired?"
Negro — "Dat's right, boss, ah all jus stops an' rests befo' ah gets tired.

Read it or not:
Frost does not cause the leaves of trees to turn yellow and red in the autumn.

Percy — Mr. Pennington, your daughter has promised to marry me."
Mr. Pennington — 'She said she would get even with you for not giving her an English bull pup for Christmas."

Play fair even with the Devil. Don't yell "get behind me Satan," and then continue to hang onto him with both hands.

Hired Hand — "Well, now, what time do I have to get to work mornings?"
Farmer — "Any time you like, just so's it ain't later than half-past four."

THE JOY OF WORK

Don't pity the man who hustles all the whole day through —
But pity the other fellow who hasn't a thing to do.
Condole with the chap who's idle, who has no "row to hoe,"
With no one depending on him, and nothing to make him grow.
He misses the best of living, the joy of work well done.
The thrill of high achievement and victories nobly won.
And the man who "digs in" daily, and whose bread and butter depends
On his doing his very utmost, and who earns all he spends —
Is the one who finds completeness in every well-spent day —
Whose life is filled with sweetness in work as well as play.
His joy is in providing — through his own brawn and brain
For those whose love inspires him to hustle with might and main.
The man will keep on climbing, and nothing can make him stop;
For with such power behind him he's sure to reach the top.
So envy the man who hustles, and needs to hustle too;
And from your heart be thankful if that man should be — YOU!

Farmer Brown — What did your son learn at state college?"
Farmer Hicks — "Well, he hadn't been home three days before he showed me how to open a bottle with a half-dollar."

Don't get the idea that everybody is working against you; many of them don't even know that you are around.

"The time has come when even the strongest democracies in the world must be prepared to resist inroads upon their liberties by totalitarian states."—Harold L. Ickes.

Meets Death In Search of Sleep

Twenty-three-year-old Mary Nainby, of Clarence street, Seaton Sluice, England, met her death while trying to cure herself of insomnia.

This was revealed at an inquest on Miss Nainby, whose body was found jammed among the sharp rocks at the foot of the 40-foot cliffs at Collywell Bay.

Part of the medical treatment towards her cure, it was stated, was a walk each evening before retiring. Her usual practice was to walk around the crag at the top of the cliffs, where the footpath is only three inches from the edge.

It was slightly foggy at the time of her fall.

Medical evidence was that the girl had a fractured skull and broken neck.

WEAR SMART STYLES AT 45

Retain An Attractive Figure

Disfiguring extra pounds that make it difficult to dress as you wish are often due to sluggishness of your liver. When the great cleanser of blood and distributor of energy is inactive or overworked, sugars and carbohydrates which should be stored in the liver develop into fatty tissue. Middle aged and older women with attractive figures invariably possess healthy livers. Fruit-a-tives fruit liver tablets put your liver in good condition, and keep it healthy. You feel better, skin clearer, eyes brighter, are more likely to retain your graceful figure—wear smart young styles. Thousands of women use Fruit-a-tives for this reason. New Era in Canadian Broadcasting

Giant Hornby Transmitter Last Word In Modernity

Tower 647 Feet High Is Hub of Station CBL's Broadcasting Equipment—Another Link In Magic Chain of "Canada Calling".

Thirty-five miles from Toronto, in the midst of a typical rural Ontario scene of pastoral beauty stands a giant instrument of modern service. Six hundred and forty-seven feet of structural steel pierce the clouds like a slender lead pencil, painted white and orange. This is the new Canadian Broadcasting Corporation transmitter known as CBL which began operation Christmas Day. By day, the tower looms in skeleton form striking at the clouds, by night its aviation beacon cuts through the atmosphere to warn nocturnal birdmen. All around lie fields, red barns and haystacks and beyond, the million radio listeners whose sets will be tuned to this wonder instrument of the Twentieth Century.

Lines of Transmission

A small, compact building of modern construction in white concrete and glass brick, houses the actual transmitting equipment. The tower is 500 feet away. Between the two, runs the transmission line, carrying the power generated in the transmitter building to the tower, or radiator. The transmission lines are mounted three feet above the ground. They are encased in copper tubing, wrapped in asbestos and supported at intervals of a few feet in such a way that it may expand or contract under the changing weather conditions. Beneath the ground, radiating from the tower are nineteen miles of wire which can be described as the spokes of a wheel with the tower as its hub.

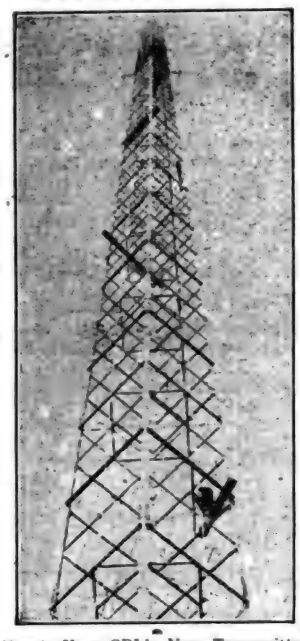
Will Stand 120-Mile Gale

The tower stands upon a ten foot square concrete base but the construction is not as simple as it appears. At the base of the steel tower is a steel plate, below this a porcelain cup superimposed on a steel ball all resting on the saucer shaped top of the concrete base. This resembles a ball and socket design. Running at right angles from the four corners of the ten foot square shaft, about three hundred feet from the ground are the four guys, one and three-eighth inch wire rope, specially designed and tested to hold the tower against a 120 mile gale. These guys are anchored in the ground 650 feet from their point of contact with the tower and they bear the extra weight of four insulators, each weighing 200 pounds.

At historic Vercheres, in Quebec, an identical construction is under way. These are the most powerful transmitters in Canada, and each will also serve not only the province in which it is located but neighboring provinces and states as well.

An Intricate Network

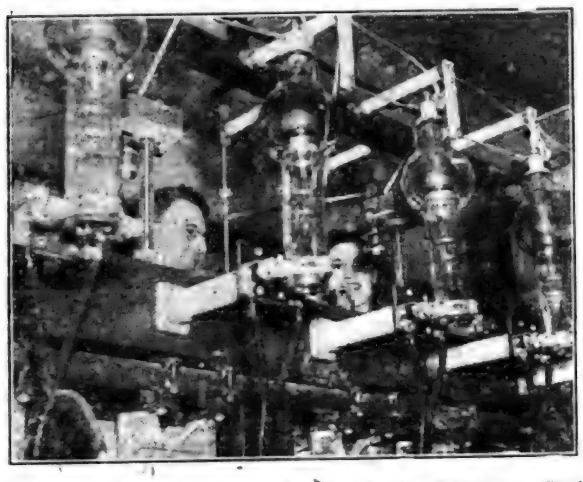
But how does a program, originating in the CBC studios at Toronto, get to the Hornby transmitter and into the homes of the listeners? Music, drama or comedy, lectures, news and songs, all travel the same way over specially designed telephone wires to the transmitter building where they are electrically amplified and broadcast from the tower or antenna in the form of radio frequency energy.



The transmitter is an intricate network of electric circuits with many miles of wire connecting its various units, but it is so compact that one technician can sit at a control console in the centre of the transmitter room, with an audience standing in the visitors' gallery, and control all operations by just pressing buttons with his fingertips.

Last Word in Modernity

Radio equipment is one of the marvels of the age. Canadians are soon to have an opportunity of seeing the last word in this form of modern communication. And before many more harvests are reaped from the pleasant farmlands surrounding Hornby, the Dominion will have added still other links to this magic chain, "Canada Calling," which has its imposing beginning in the two 50,000 watt stations, CBL and CBF, in Ontario and Quebec.



Now that the transmitter has made its formal bow on the airwaves, visitors are welcome to the new headquarters of CBL.

Johnson Sees Start on Air Service In West Early In 1938

Philip G. Johnson, vice-president in charge of operations for Trans-Canada Airlines, last week said the western circuit of the Trans-Canada route might be started earlier than originally expected. He refused, however, to name any starting date.

(Hon. C. D. Howe, minister of transport recently stated the western air route of Trans-Canada Airlines would start operations by February 1.)

Sooner Than Expected

"We planned our program to start the western service sometime in 1938," Mr. Johnson said. "The starting date depends on too many factors—how soon pilots complete their training period and how soon our equipment is ready—to make predictions yet. But there is a good possibility that we will be able to start sooner than we expected."

In commenting on personnel Mr. Johnson said the airlines' policy has been to hire Canadian-born pilots in preference to British-born ones. He also said only six United States experts were employed, none having permanent contracts.

Blind Witness "Saw" Murder

Is the Only Man Who Provided Clue to Slaying

A slaying "witnessed" only by a blind man gave Philadelphia police last week a new angle on crime.

Detective John McEnroe said Frank Reynolds, 69, sightless former circus performer, related a tale of two men rushing silently into the Reynolds rooming house and shooting a man identified through fingerprints as Samuel Goldstein, 41.

Reynolds, who became blind 10 years ago, said he knew Goldstein as "Samuel Fuhrman" and that he "sometimes would drop in for a talk." Reynolds said he and Goldstein were sitting in the kitchen last night when the doorbell rang.

"He was going to answer for me, but I told him I would go," the blind man said.

"I turned the latch of the door and whoever was on the steps pushed right in and another man followed him."

Reynolds said he closed the door and was returning to the kitchen when he heard a shot. Then, he said, the pair elbowed him aside and fled from the house without saying a word.

Detective McEnroe said the fingerprints of Goldstein identified him as a man with a record of arrests dating back to 1910.

Around The Dial

RADIO HEADLINERS OF THE WEEK

Six months as master of ceremonies of the Chase and Sanborn Hour has revealed Don Ameche as the "man of a thousand voices." He has the light touch necessary to an M.C. and he runs through the gallery of characters in almost any dramatic library without difficulty. One Sunday, in the broadcast over the NBC-Red Network at 8 p.m. E.S.T., he is a growling racketeer, the next he is Henry VIII, or an Italian peanut vendor, or a French painter, or a fisherman, or a doctor. Yet they all sound different, none of them is Ameche himself. He can project himself into an almost infinite number of personalities, but his own is probably best revealed in the competent manner in which he runs the show as master of ceremonies. As a co-worker of Charlie McCarthy, he is perfectly willing to submerge himself as straight man for a ventriloquist's dummy.

Up-to-date Farm Comment

To our rural friends we might suggest listening to Farm Comment, broadcast every Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday from 12:45 to 1, noon, over CRCT. The commentator, Norman Hogg, tells us that eleven prizes, totalling to one ton of feed, are offered to listeners for letters giving personal opinions of the programs and suggestions. Mr. Hogg discusses questions of general interest to farmers and gives up-to-the-minute prices and quotations.

From CKCL comes news of a mammoth Christmas party to be held over the air for the shut-ins. The broadcast will take place on Thursday, December 23rd from 2:15 until 5. On this program will be heard many of your favourites of the air. We tried to get several names for you, but apparently it is all to be a secret but definite asurance is given that it will be something worth listening to.

Modern Symphony Orchestra

Among the leading musical programs produced from the CBC studios will be Streamline, originating in Toronto, and heard on Thursday, December 30th, at nine p.m. Percy Faith will direct the modern symphonic orchestra in his own specially arranged selections. Dorothy Ault, popular young songstress, and the Fashionaires, a novelty trio, will be the guest artists.

Those two young sophisticates of the piano, Lou Snyder and Murray Ross, appear on the commission's first scheduled spring program. They are now heard every Thursday at 8:15 p.m. over the commission net-States. The last reports home that Reginald Stewart is negotiating with work in Canada and the Mutual Broadcasting System in the United the boys for an appearance on one of the Promenade Symphony Concerts. To give you an idea of what the boys do in their spare time, Murray has become an exceptionally fine organist, and Lou has been spending his time blowing away at a sax.

An all star Varsity show will be heard New Year's Eve over the NBC Blue-Network at nine o'clock. Undergrads from several eastern American Universities will participate to make the program a hundred per cent. Collegiate. This should prove an interesting feature. All the performers who will appear will be students, and information regarding them and what they will do is being kept quiet. We take it anything can happen, and probably will.

Happy New Year

And so as this will be the last column to appear in 1937, on behalf of the publishers, the advertisers, and yours sincerely, we wish you joy and happiness no end through the years to come.

Editor and Proprietor

Letter from Manitoba

285 Langside St.,
Winnipeg, Man.,
Dec. 20th, 1937.

Dear Editor:—

I will have to get a hurry on, if I am to get a letter to your paper in 1937, and I wish all your readers a very prosperous New Year. For the last two months, I have been rather busy. The latter part of October Mr. Shaver was taken sick with heart trouble, and was taken to the General Hospital. He was there for over three weeks and came home. Was not really fit to come home, so after two weeks at home he had to go back again, and he is still there. I go up every day to see him; he is improving, but the doctors don't know whether he will be able to come home for Xmas or not. I take the bus up to the hospital; then sometimes walk home if the day is fine. Today there has been a blizzard on all day, so it was not very nice. I think there are five hundred and twenty patients, coming and going all the time. It is very wonderful the system they have; every one so busy, and everything so spotless, so clean; such kindly nurses and doctors, but I don't think I should like to be a patient. I don't know why, unless it is as Mr. Shaver says, never having been in one, you get terribly lonesome.

Yesterday was Xmas Sunday in all the churches in the city. Dr. Sales Harrison from Australia was the minister who spoke in Elim Chapel; there was a splendid turn out, and the music was wonderful. The city is being decorated to look just like fairy land; hundreds of trees along the streets decorated with bulbs, and the stores inside just a dream. Still so many poor who are not able to have a Xmas dinner, unless provided for them. Elim Chapel is providing eighty hampers. We have had the most beautiful fall I ever remember; only very few cold days right up to the present. Today is the roughest day this winter. Out west they have had some cold weather. A friend was telling me today she has just returned from a visit to Regina. And some place out there, where children are a good ways from school, one wild day a boy, fifteen years of age, went to bring a younger brother home on horse back. The teacher would not let the boy go, the storm was so bad, and when the brother did not return his parents concluded the teacher had kept him, too. That was on a Wednesday. He did not come back Thursday. Friday enquiries were made for him, and when they were told he had not stayed at all, but had returned home, search was made for him. He was found in a snowbank frozen to death. Just his arm was raised out of the drift, and he had gone in the wrong direction. They found his horse not very far from him, but my friend does not know whether the horse was dead or not. Whenever there is a blizzard, I am always wondering if some of my grandchildren are out in it, for some of them had six miles to go to school. At present some of the roads out in the country are blocked with snow.

Mrs. Carter, a neighbor at home, has gone to California for the winter to visit two of her daughters. She writes she is having a wonderful time. She went by bus. She said they were so kind, when they passed through cities, which had some sights worth looking at, they would drive them around to see them. Xmas is very close, and I do hope every one will have a happy time.

UNITED CHURCH NEWS

The Sunday School Anniversary Services of the United Church were held Sunday last with the pastor delivering the sermons. The Rev. R. H. M. Kerr assisted in the evening service by reading a lesson and offering prayer. His presence was greatly appreciated. The choir, under the leadership of Mrs. W. N. Atkinson and with Mr. Herb. Falconer presiding at the organ, did very well with two beautiful Christmas anthems, in which solo parts were taken by Mrs. J. H. Hare and Mr. Buckle and Mr. Graydon Clipperton.

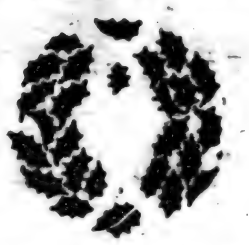
Election Next Monday

Next Monday is Election Day in Streetsville. There will be two polling booths, one for the North End, at the Town Hall, and that for the South half, at the Public Library. Polling hours are from nine a.m. to five p.m. Vote early and as often as the officers will let you (!). And — be sure to vote right. Any of the candidates will make good councillors. Four are to be elected—so one must stay at home. But he can try again.



The nomination meeting was not very largely attended, but we know the Streetsville people like to have an election—so be sure to come out and exercise your franchise.

The Reeve for 1938 will be Mr. C.H. Falconer, elected by acclamation. He has been Reeve several times before and knows the duties well.

One member of the Public Utilities Commission and the Public School Trustees have been elected by acclamation.

Acclamation in Toronto Township

Toronto Township Council has been re-elected by acclamation for 1938, with the same members as 1937, which shows that the ratepayers are pretty well satisfied with their work. They are: E. Maguire Reeve; Tom Graham, Deputy, and H. Hazard, Tom Leslie and Percy Syme, Councillors.

GOOD RESOLUTIONS

I WILL try to be a lifter, not a leaner; an encourager, never a discourager; lighten and share other people's sorrows; start songs and rejoicings, not complainings; make the world a little sweeter place to live in; keep in mind the will of God; make sunshine in life's shady places; see the bright side of everything; be clean in mind and body, working patiently, industriously and honestly for a living; extend a spotless character, so that I can look up, not down, and meet death's coming with a fearless smile; endeavor not to run away from my weaknesses, but bravely fight them out; be glad of life; have hope and faith in everybody; try to live without hate, jealousy, temper and envy; avoid speaking critically and bitterly, repeating only the good I hear; love because I must, give because I cannot keep; doing for the joy of it; cheerful in disappointments, charitable toward the erring and fallen; protect helpless animals; do as I would be done by; smile more and frown less and do every day something beautiful, some kindness that will cheer and strengthen another.

SIMPLE HOSPITALITY.

It Marked the Old Time New Year's Ways With Guests.

No longer are families at home to friends during New Year's day in Canada in the manner of old, when every lady expected to receive unless illness, death or untoward circumstances intervened. Wealth was not needed. Indeed, there was little of what is called wealth today to discourage modest folk from hospitality.

The house was still gay with Christmas greens, so no florist had to be considered. There were stone jars filled to the brim with sand tarts and gingersnaps and nut cakes, to say nothing of a marvelous fruit cake, in the pantry, so no caterer need be engaged. A modest punch, or, if the family's temperance principles were at stake, a fruit lemonade, was easily brewed. The silver card basket was placed conspicuously on the hall rack, and the second maid, in cap and apron, or the delightful old darky who was the family's nearest approach to a butler was stationed near the door, and at 1 precisely mother and daughters stood under lighted chandeliers, the one modern touch about the festivity, and waited for the callers to arrive.

Giggling youngsters peering from upstairs windows watched a procession of frock coated, top hatted figures swinging jaunty walking sticks as they went from door to door and speculated which would stop for a minute at their own front stoop.

On occasional doorknobs hung tiny baskets gay with red ribbon bows. Pass by, young gentlemen, brave in your unaccustomed toggery. The ladies are not at home there. But you may pause long enough to drop a pasteboard into the basket, thus expressing the greetings of the season and your personal interest in the household.

If the girl debutante made her bow to society at a formal reception or "leaked out," as one wit phrased it, minus the formality of a function the youth won his social spurs on the foughten field of New Year's calling. Rowdy pagehood and hobbledehoy squiring were left behind what time he donned the habiliments and outward symbols of a knight of the carpet and sallied forth to social conquests on behalf of fair ladies in company of elder and doughty warriors.

Frock coat, top hat and cane were shield and helmet and sword to him, and his first awkward bow to the line of damsels under the pendent crystal chandelier took all the courage required for the first breaking of lances on the jousting field.

New Year Nonsense.

A great many things are done in the name of New Year which no doubt cause the fine old day to blush when it contemplates them.

Some people have a regular practice of making New Year resolutions, generally shattering them before January has hidden its cold head out of sight. Resolves, in order to be of any use, should be made every day in the year and, if necessary, every hour in the day.

Some men go around calling upon their lady friends, drink everything that is offered them on the way, from cider to sherry, and make their last call of the day upon their wives and families, carrying with them a pronounced case of inebriation. Thus is an anciently hospitable practice often turned into a shameful bit of traveling dissipation.

Some men do not take the pains to travel and collect the different drinks that are to make beasts of them, but go directly to the saloons and carouse all day with equally wretched companions.

It is one of the characteristics of our dear, old wicked, whimsical, now and then idiotic, human race that it is perfectly competent to spoil anything in the world; that it can make almost anything into a curse when it sets out. —Will Carleton's Magazine.

Facing the New Year.

A happy year will it be to those who through every path of trial or up every hill of difficulty or over every sunny height march on in closest fellowship with Jesus and who will determine that, come what may, they have Christ every day.—Theodore L. Cuyler, D. D.

It's so much easier to shop by TELEPHONE..

On wet days and snowy days, on days when there is so much housework to be done, on days when you aren't feeling up to scratch yourself or when one of the youngsters is ailing, it's great to be able to shop by telephone. And on fine days too, and when everything else is going right, it saves you an endless amount of tiresome traipsing around. Make the telephone your market basket.

SKY GIRL

By NELLIE GRAF

Elinor Ames tries to escape the heartbreak of her postponed marriage to Dr. Norman Rogers by becoming an air stewardess. Dr. Rogers' mother approves an alliance between Norman and wealthy Francine Bayless. Norman is jealous of Jack Newton, the pilot who helped Elinor get her job. Another stewardess, Judith Blair, Jack's former sweetheart, is jealous of Elinor and sets out to ruin her career. Leola Rogers, Norman's sister, is in love with Jack Newton. Jack has quarreled with Leola, and Elinor plans a dinner to bring them together. Norman arrives unexpectedly and is jealously angry when he finds Elinor alone with Jack. Leola does not arrive for the dinner. Next morning, Elinor takes off for Fort Worth. A passenger needs medical attention and Elinor applies an ointment, failing to notice that someone has tampered with her supplies.

CHAPTER V

Elinor trembled as the plane circled over an emergency landing field. The co-pilot came back to her.

"We're going to land. Say, what's the matter? You look ghastly."

Elinor told him about the supplies.

"Whew! That's serious. But no one needs to know. We'll buy some new ones in Forth Worth. The doctor says there's nothing wrong with that woman. He'll stick by us. But what will we report about this landing?"

"I—I don't know."

"We'll just say, 'Woman ill—forced landing'."

The co-pilot started back toward his compartment. Presently, Elinor could hear his voice making a radio report. "Number ninety-two. Landing two hundred and twenty miles east of Fort Worth. Illness on board."

The co-pilot was trying to protect her. Even as a glow of gratitude went through Elinor, the sickening thought came back—someone had tampered with her supplies and she hadn't noticed!

Looks Very Bad

The plane was on the ground now. It taxied to a stop. Elinor gave the woman her possessions, and started to assist her from the plane.

"Humph!" The woman glanced out the window. I'm not going to get off in this cow pasture."

"It's an emergency landing field," Elinor explained patiently. "I'm terribly sorry about all this."

"Huh! I should think you would be." The woman settled more firmly in her seat.

"Please hurry up." The co-pilot stuck his head in. "We made this landing for you, so don't decide to take a nap."

The other passengers tittered. The woman flushed with anger. "I said I wasn't getting off here," she stated. "First you put my eye out and then you try to eject me in a cow pasture. I'm going to Fort Worth. When I get there, I'll have plenty to say to your officials."

The co-pilot shrugged, banged the door, and signaled for the pilot to take off.

The woman settled down into resentful silence which exploded into action when they reached Fort Worth.

She insisted that Elinor go with her at once to an official. The co-pilot accompanied them and put in several corrections to the passenger's colorful account of the incident.

"Would a check for your fare reimburse you for the inconvenience?" the official asked.

"Why—yes, I guess so. But I do think this young lady and co-pilot should be punished."

"Of course," the official responded, as he presented the woman with a check.

She looked at it a second and then, before their astonished eyes, tore it into pieces.

"On second thought," she said, "I think I'll consult my lawyer. I may decide to sue."

The official rose. "Very well, madam." He opened the door.

After the woman had gone, he listened to Elinor's story.

"That's bad," he commented coldly. "Very bad".

On Probation

When she returned to the home airport, her experience was humiliating. There was a long session with the station manager, after which he grudgingly granted Sally Nelson's request that Elinor remain, but on probation. Pilots who had always been friendly now looked askance at Elinor. The other stewardesses gathered in corners away from her. When she approached, their words hushed to whispers or ceased entirely. Judith Blair was sneeringly triumphant.

Sally Nelson came up to Elinor and spoke in a low tone. "You had better go home and rest. You look terrible. I'm going past your apartment en route to Kay Esterly's. She's very ill now, seriously so. I'll drop you off on the way. Don't try to work for a week or two. From now on you must make a perfect record."

Unjust though she felt circumstances to have been, Elinor vowed to herself that she would try her best to make a perfect record. Once more, as when first she embarked on her career as a sky girl, she saw before her visions of service, of heroism, that would atone for the unenviable record she had made. She saw herself alone with some passenger made mad by drugs, about to attack the unsuspecting pilot. She was fighting off the maniac. The pilot came to her rescue just in time to save her from death at the madman's hands about her throat. Silly, of course, such notions! But Elinor was hurt. She must do something to atone. She felt somehow that she had let Sally down.

A Moment Lost

When she reached her apartment, she walked into it with unseeing eyes. She sank down in a crumpled heap, sobs shaking her.

"Elinor, darling!" It was an illusion. It couldn't be Norm's voice. "Elinor!"

She didn't move. Then — she felt arms about her, pulling her up, carrying her to the davenport. Her trembling hand caressed a face.

"Norm—it's really you?" Their lips met in a kiss that held.

Then, Norm suddenly drew away.

"Don't!" Elinor clung to him. "Don't go, Norm! Ever!"

Norm seized her then, fiercely. "Darling!" His voice shook. "We'll be married at once. You'll go back to Atlantic City with me. Right after we find Leola. Honey, what's happened to Leola? I got the craziest wire from her. Look."

Elinor stared at the telegram before her, read dazedly:

COME AT ONCE. ELINOR IN DANGER. MUST NOT GO ON ANOTHER TRIP.—LEOLA.

"Now I can't find her," Norm continued. "She's disappeared. We'll be married, and then . . ."

"But, Norm," Elinor interrupted, "we can't. I'm in terrible trouble at the airport. And you must find Leola right away. We must wait—"

"Wait!" Norm spoke impatiently. "We won't. We'll find Leola and—"

"We can't, Norm. Not until I clear myself with Modern Airways. Jack Newton helped me get that job. I can't let Jack down."

"Oh, it's Jack Newton you're thinking of." Norm jumped up. "My feelings don't matter. Francine was right."

"Francine!" Elinor flared. "Norm, you've been making a fool of yourself over her. You—"

"Is that so? Well, what about you and Jack Newton?"

They glared at each other. These two who, a moment ago, were in each other's arms. Elinor shivered. She must do something. Recapture those golden moments.

She could not know of the scene in Norm's mind. The scene when he had come back to the apartment the evening Leola was supposed to have come.

She only knew that he did not look at her as he took his hat and moved toward the door.

(TO BE CONTINUED)

Do you know the best way of unknotting a difficult knot? Use a steel crochet hook, and you won't get broken finger nails or frayed tempers. This hint applies to every sort of knot (except in fine cotton)—knots in shoelaces or string or anything else.

Convalescent Dishes

How often have you been faced with the necessity of preparing food for some ailing member of the family and at the same time, trying to give those who are whole and hearty, the food they need? That often is the case when so many youngsters have their tonsils out at this time of the year or one of them has the 'flu. The sick member needs something special to tempt the appetite and the busy housewife often finds herself in quite a dither trying to prepare two separate and different menus.

In a case like this there is a compromise which isn't difficult. It's perfectly possible to plan a light, easy-to-digest meal, with the invalid first in mind, and then serve the same dishes to the able-bodies. Barley soup with vegetables is just the thing for the patient but the whole family will go for it if you make enough to go around.

The same thing applies to desserts and here are some special ones which you mustn't think of making for the invalid alone because the rest of the family will probably feel very hurt and envious.

Minted Orange Cream

1-3 cup quick-cooking tapioca
½ cup sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
1 or 2 egg yolks
4 cups milk
1 or 2 egg whites, stiffly beaten
½ teaspoon orange extract
½ cup cream, whipped.

Combine quick-cooking tapioca, sugar, salt, egg yolk, and milk in top of double boiler and stir enough to break egg yolk. Place over rapidly boiling water, bring to scalding point (allow 5 to 7 minutes), and cook 5 minutes, stirring frequently. Remove from boiling water. Fold a small amount into egg white; add to remaining tapioca mixture and blend. Cool—mixture thickens as it cools. When slightly cool, add flavoring; chill. Fold in whipped cream and serve in sherbet glasses garnished with sections of orange free from membrane and cubes of mint jelly.

Another grand variation of this dessert is to serve it with Butterscotch Sauce, substituting vanilla for orange extract.

Butterscotch Sauce

3 egg yolks
2 tablespoons butter
¼ cup brown sugar, firmly packed
1-8 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon water

Combine ingredients in top of double boiler and cook over hot water until sugar is dissolved, stirring constantly. Chill. Beat well before serving. Makes three-quarters cup sauce.

Everybody is fond of those lovely chocolate peppermint patties — the big round ones with peppermint fondant inside and rich chocolate coating. Those candies were the inspiration for this dessert which combines the same flavors, tangy, pink-tinted peppermint and bittersweet chocolate. Real peppermint candy, the long red and white sticks which are used to decorate Christmas trees, are used to give this dessert its flavour and delicate color.

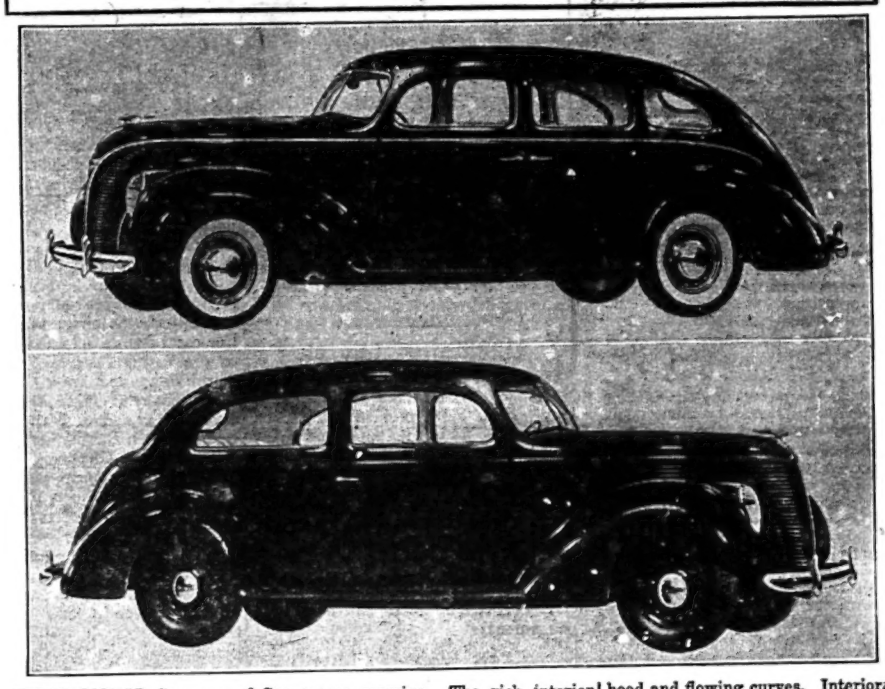
Peppermint Tapioca Cream

1-3 cup quick-cooking tapioca
¼ teaspoon salt
4 cups milk, scalded
2-3 cup peppermint candy, crushed
1 egg yolk, slightly beaten
1 egg white, stiffly beaten.

Add quick-cooking tapioca and salt to milk, and cook in double boiler 15 minutes, or until tapioca is clear, stirring frequently. Add peppermint candy. Pour small amount of tapioca mixture over egg yolk, stirring vigorously. Return to double boiler and cook until thickened. Remove from fire and fold in egg white. Chill. Serve in sherbet glasses with chocolate sauce. Serves 8.

Chocolate Sauce

1 square unsweetened chocolate, cut in pieces
3 tablespoons water
4 tablespoons sugar
Dash of salt
1½ tablespoons melted butter
Few drops vanilla



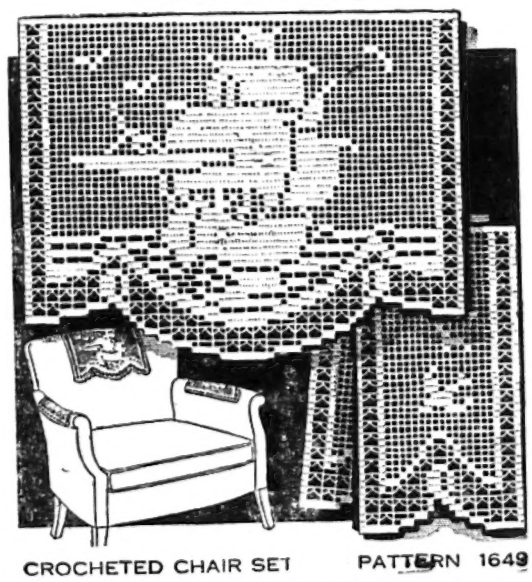
Combine chocolate, water, sugar, and salt in double boiler. Heat and blend. Add butter and vanilla. Beat well. Makes 2-3 cups sauce.

Spinach Soup

1½ cups cooked spinach
2 cups milk, scalded
2 cups boiling water
3 Oxo cubes
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons flour
1 teaspoon salt
Dash of pepper
1½ teaspoons scraped onion.

Chop spinach and force through sieve. Add to milk, water, and Oxo cubes in double boiler. Melt butter, add flour and seasonings, and stir well. Add a small amount of hot liquid and stir until smooth. Return to double boiler and cook until slightly thickened, stirring constantly.

Two New Ford V-8 Cars for 1938



FORD MOTOR Company of Canada, Limited, announces the new Ford V-8 cars for 1938. For the first time Ford presents two distinct lines, the De Luxe Ford V-8—a big luxury car—and the newly styled Standard Ford V-8.

The De Luxe Ford V-8 car is entirely new in appearance, longer, roomier and more streamlined. The front design is modern and distinctive. Fenders are deeper and more massive. The rich interior appointments of the car match its outward beauty. Longer bodies provide more room and comfort and there is larger luggage space in all models. The De Luxe car is powered with the proved 85 horsepower V-8 engine. Shown above (top photograph) is the De Luxe Fordor Sedan.

The Standard Ford V-8 for 1938 brings new styling with a longer hood and flowing curves. Interiors are spacious and neatly appointed. New instrument panels have knobs recessed for safety. The radiator grille louvres continue back into the hood to present smooth flowing body lines from bumper to bumper. It is built on the same 112-inch wheelbase as the new De Luxe and has the famous Ford V-8 engine. The new Standard Tudor Sedan is shown above (lower photograph).

Free Kisses

More ancient customs prevail in the West Country than in any other part of England. One that goes back to Saxon times is still observed at Okehampton, Devon. The "Giglet Market" is held on the Sunday after Christmas, at which a man may speak to or kiss any girl who takes his fancy. Nor is mistletoe needed to establish this right.

At Street, Somerset, a bonfire is made on top of a nearby hill on Boxing day, and people journey from afar to toast sausages on the end of hazel sticks, sing, play games and make merry. On the same day the poor, too, are remembered at the village of Cam, for according to the will of a former citizen, Margaret Trotman, any parishioner is entitled to the gift of a loaf of bread, and the first fifty widows who apply are given money.

[illegible] Launch Implacable Drive

If Sir Kingsley Wood, British Minister for Health, answers all his Christmas well-wishers, he will be busier than Santa Claus.

Mailmen inundated his office with cards uniformly inscribed: "Wishing you the compliments of the season. Hoping you will be thinking of the spinsters as the spinsters are thinking of you."

The greetings were a novel method of campaigning employed by the thousands of organized British spinsters who are pressing for state pensions at the age of 55.

Asthma May Be Blamed On Love

Scientists Link Colds to Man's Quarrels With Mother-in-Law

CHICAGO, — That annoying case of asthma may be due to love and that stubborn cold probably was caused by a row with your mother-in-law, the Chicago Institute for Psychoanalysis declared last week.

The report, covering five years of investigation of the influence of physiological factors upon physical disturbances, said:

"The fact that asthma attacks can be demonstrated to be allergic reactions has tended to distract attention from many recorded instances of asthma attacks precipitated by acute emotional conflicts."

"Asthma attacks regularly occur in reaction to temptation situations that seem to threaten the patient with loss of some person upon whom he is emotionally dependent."

Britain's balloon anti-aircraft barrage project is being actively developed, according to Lieut.-Col. Muder, Secretary for Air.

Woman Stages Amazing Hoax

23-Year-Old Wife Attends English School as 11-Year-Old Pupil

One of the most amazing hoaxes ever played in England was revealed when a 23-year-old woman, married and a mother, was discovered to be attending a school in Woodwich as an 11-year-old pupil.

The discovery was made when the headmistress of the school decided to move her to a higher class. The work would have been harder, so she did not go to school. That brought the school attendance officers to her home.

Her husband, Edward Cohen, 28-year-old radio salesman, explaining the impersonation, said his wife went to school in a short gymnasium suit, tunic and skirt with her dolls and she played with her 10-year-old schoolmates. One of the dolls was her husband's wedding present to her.

Husband's "Sister"

"At school she was known as my 11-year-old sister. When she did not attend, the school board inspector came and asked me why my sister had stopped going. I did not know what to tell him, and now I have received a notice from the London county council that legal action may be taken if she does not go back."

Mrs. Cohen explained that she had always loved being with young children.

Plays All the Games

"I will never change," she said. "I have always worn the same clothes as when I came to London. When I go to school, I take part in all the school games and lessons and no one has ever queried my age. When I go home I do the housework, and cooking, though I don't like it, and live like any normal wife."

Mrs. Cohen, however, has one of the habits of grown-ups — she does smoke.

FYNNON SALT is booming
Because it Helps Relieve
RHEUMATIC PAINS

In less than a year FYNNON SALT has sailed into first place in England as the outstanding remedy for Rheumatic Pains, Sciatica, Lumbago, Rheumatoid, Arthritis, etc. There are ten times as many people now taking a daily glass of Fynnon Salt as there were only twelve short months ago.

Is it any wonder, when you realize what happens when a new remedy makes its appearance and turns out to be just the thing for jaded, tortured sufferers have been looking for? Naturally, such good news is passed on. And now Fynnon Salt is available in Canada. Fynnon Salt booms into popularity. You hear of it everywhere. You see it in every drug store. Try it for your rheumatic symptoms, for your sciatica or lumbago, for the heavy dull sensation that prevents you looking and feeling your best. There's no need to go on suffering now that Fynnon Salt has come to relieve you. Only 75c a large package. Ask your druggist for Fynnon Salt. If you have any difficulty getting supplies, write: Laurentian Agencies, St. Gabriel Street, Montreal.

Sunday School Lesson

LESSON I.
The Gospel of Mark—Mark 10:35-45
Printed Text Mark 10:44.

THE LESSON IN ITS SETTING

Time.—The teaching of Jesus recorded in the portion of Mark's Gospel assigned to this lesson was given during March of A.D. 30. The Gospel of Mark itself was written approximately 50 A.D., twenty years after our Lord's ascension.

Place.—The teaching of our Lord which is found in the passage of Mark's Gospel assigned to this lesson was given in Peraea, that territory which lay on the eastern side of the Jordan River, beyond the Dead Sea, extending north to the Sea of Galilee. We do not know where the Gospel of Mark itself was written.

Mark is sometimes called simply Mark, which was his Roman name, and sometimes he is called John, or John Mark, John being his Hebrew name. His name first appears in the book of Acts (though he himself does not personally appear in the events recorded), at the time of the persecution under Herod Agrippa I, when, after the martyrdom of James, Peter was imprisoned, and, after a miraculous deliverance by an angel of the Lord, "came to the house of Mary, the mother of John whose surname was Mark."

Professor A. T. Robertson has very finely said: "Mark is a comfort to many a young man who has made a serious blunder in life.

Written for Gentiles

While the Gospel of Matthew was written for Jews, it is clearly evident that the Gospel of Mark was written for Gentiles, and especially Roman Gentiles. The very brevity of the Gospel would point to this in the first place; the Gentile sections, especially those found in chapters six to eight, would indicate Mark's intention of writing his Gospel for the great Gentile world; the law is not even mentioned in the second Gospel; and, while it is true that there are many quotations from the Old Testament to be found here, yet only one of them is in Mark's own narrative (others occurring in speeches which Mark records).

Mark's Gospel is the briefest of all the four, containing six hundred and seventy-eight verses, as compared with Matthew, which has one thousand and seventy-one verses, and Luke, eleven hundred and fifty-one verses, and John, eight hundred and seventy-nine verses.

The entire narrative is written in a quick, nervous, energetic style such as none of the other Gospel writers reveal. Mark records nineteen miracles and only half a dozen parables.

Mark's narrative is full of realistic, vivid, minute details, which are omitted in many cases by all the other Gospel writers, many of which details could have been supplied only by an eye-witness: Thus, in describing the actions of our Lord, he speaks of his arms, his hands, his eyes, and often he vividly reveals actually how Jesus looked upon different groups, and notes various gestures which our Lord made.

As we have said above, there is very little in Mark's Gospel which Peter could not have orally communicated to Mark. It is very interesting to note that, while Matthew gives Jesus commendation of Peter's confession, Mark gives only the rebuke (8:33). The only long paragraph in Mark about Peter is the record of his denial (14:66-72).

Portrait of Christ

Mark himself, as we have seen, was an attendant, not a great leader, but one with gifts for service; and it is very significant that the Gospel which he wrote presents the Lord Jesus Christ as the Servant of God. The key verse is Mark 10:45. "For the Son of man also came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many." This is the Gospel in which the human emotions of Jesus are so vividly depicted, his compassion (1:41), his anger (3:5), his indignation (10:14), his grief (7:34; 8:17). In this Gospel we find the human limitations of Christ clearly set forth, as, e.g., in 1:45; 6:5; 7:24; and 13:32. There is no record of his miraculous birth, no account of the Sermon on the Mount, no long discourses, no reference to his coming to judge the world, no attending legions of angels. The Gospel gives a picture "of the Son of God with power, moving among men with his gift of miracles and making the things of nature the servants of his grace.

35. And there come near unto him James and John, the sons of Zebedee, saying unto him, Teacher, we would that thou shouldest do for us whatsoever we shall ask of thee. 36. And he said unto them, What would ye that I should do for you? 37. And they said unto him, Grant unto us that we may sit, one on thy right hand, and one on thy left hand, in thy glory. 38. But Jesus said unto them, Ye know not what ye ask. Are ye able to drink the cup that I drink? or to be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with? 39. And they said unto him, We are able. And Jesus said unto them, The cup that I drink ye shall drink; and with the baptism that I am baptized withal shall ye be baptized. 40. But to sit on my right hand or on my left hand is not mine to give; but it is for them for whom it hath been prepared. 41. And when the ten heard it, they began to be moved with indignation concerning James and John. 42. And Jesus called them to him, and saith unto them, Ye know that they who are accounted to rule over the Gentiles lord it over them; and their great ones exercise authority over them. 43. But it is not so among you: but whosoever would become great among you, shall be your minister. 44. And whosoever would be first among you, shall be servant of all.

Care To Minister

45. For the Son of man also came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many. These two disciples, James and John, had just heard the Lord talk about the cross and about his suffering (vs. 33, 34), but these men are so incapable of entering into the significance of Jesus' words that, utterly ignoring the terrible death which is soon to be the experience of their Master, they begin to ask him for positions of prominence for themselves at his right hand and at his left hand in the earthly kingdom which they expected him to set up soon. The baptism of which Jesus here speaks that he is soon to be baptized with is, of course, his death. Christ wisely tells them that positions of honor will be occupied by those who win them, that he will not arbitrarily distribute honors to his disciples, and that the prize will go, not to the one who asks for it, but to the one who wins it. Then our Lord proceeds to tell them that greatness with his disciples is not to be measured in the way the world measures greatness. "Jesus teaches that to serve is to reign, and that to bestow is to be blessed. This was at that time an entirely new and revolutionary idea, and is one which the world does not yet understand, nor the church yet practice. We are great, not as we get, but as we give, not by being lords, but by being servants, not by winning crowns, but by wearing crosses and by washing feet."

Our Lord then proceeds to illustrate more powerfully what he is saying by presenting himself as the perfect incarnation of this lofty and heavenly ideal, namely, that he himself came for no other purpose than to minister unto men.

This passage may be called the very center of the theme of Mark's Gospel, namely, Christ as the Servant of all, and in this passage are phrases that definitely belong to the life and work of the author, Mark.

September 5, 1893, was the date fixed for the wedding of Miss Stillwaggon and Mr. Sieberger. But a fortnight before the wedding day they had a violent quarrel, parted, and found other life partners.

Recently, they met again, this time as widow and widower, and on September 5, 1937, the wedding bells pealed out for them—44 years after. And—would you believe it—they cannot even remember what the old quarrel was about.

Affairs of Heart Aid to Prosperity

This Business of Love Boosts a Dozen Trades

"Yesterday the engagement of our third daughter was announced, to the surprise of none of the invited guests," says a writer in Atlantic Monthly. "The match had been in the making for years. The whole countryside watched it burgeon and could find no manner of fault with the prospect. Certainly I could not. As an experienced father of daughters I judge the young man to be excellent husband material.

We could usually tell which way the winds were blowing by studying the monthly statements of the telephone company. If we found a $3 charge to a point where the standard rate for three minutes is less than a dollar, the mater and I concluded something serious was under way in that direction. One of our girls apparently was encouraging a young man to talk about himself expansively and expensively.

Economic Consequences

After getting the returns on some extraordinary flights of long-distance conversation, I began to make calculations on the economic consequences of love. All over this great country, I reflected, young men and women are telephoning to each other at so much a minute. The sun does not set upon these long-winded and long-distance approaches toward destiny.

Two young persons in a melting condition somewhat thwarted by intervening space can range all around a delicate but unimportant subject for an indefinite period. From the standpoint of American Telephone and Telegraph, this is juicy business indeed. I suspect that, while commerce carries the costs and overhead of that notable company, love generates its profits and guarantees 9 per cent. dividends.

Flowers, Clothes, Movie Industry

Consider the trade in flowers. In untold thousands of country greenhouses millions of plants are seeded and tended until the time when their blossoms can be sold off to shops whose best customer is the young man palpitant.

What else but love keeps the clothing industry squirming with novelty?

One shudders to think what would happen to movie stocks except for the love interest on the screen and in the audience, and to motor and oil stocks if all journeys were practical and prosaic.

Medico Advocates Health Insurance

Dr. T. H. Leggett, president of the Canadian Medical Association, told the University Club of Ottawa last week that "if we have not the foresight, the courage and the initiative to inaugurate health insurance, state medicine will come of itself through force of circumstances."

Dr. Leggett declared fruits of great advances made in recent years by scientific medicine had not been brought to the bedsides of patients at reasonable cost.

Ready For Emergency Expense

"The head of a family a comparatively few years ago," he said, "needed to budget in his contingency account for only the meagre fees of his family physician, with perhaps a small drug account—rarely for specialist services, nursing services and hospital accounts.

"But today science has placed at the disposal of the physician innumerable aids to more perfect diagnosis and countless methods for more efficient treatment of disease.

"The public demands the fruits of our great scientific advance but they find these fruits cannot be brought to the bedside of their families at reasonable cost. Thus we realize that we have not been able to secure efficient economic management over the distribution of these blessings. And now we realize rather acutely that the responsibility of this efficient economic management has not been accepted in any quarter."

Dr. Leggett advocated health insurance as a means of protection against ill health and its cost.

Frozen Octopus Pleases Greeks

Six Thousand Cases From the Mediterranean Make Christmas Glad For Them

Greek residents of Windsor who like octopus were gladdened by the news that a large shipment of frozen fish had reached New York, with Detroit getting its share for Christmas season trade, says the Windsor Daily Star.

To the average Canadian, octopus conjures something repulsive, but octopus to Greeks is as desirable as a juicy steak to the average native of this country.

Octopus-eating in the border district is not as general as in some American centres, poinnts out Peter Bourdganis, proprietor of the Ouellette avenue restaurant which bears his name. He explains that most of the Greeks in this area come from inland towns and they haven't been brought up with octopus like those who lived near the sea.

Served Up In Stew

The fish is usually smoked or salted, says the restaurateur, and the popular way of serving it is in a stew. It has a coarse taste, with a flavor akin to that of sturgeon.

Six thousand cases of frozen octopus have reached New York from the Mediterranean, and octopus-eating centres of the United States have placed orders for nearly the entire shipment, according to press despatches.

Greek merchants along Monroe Ave. in Detroit placed special orders for the fish, and they expected to clear their shelves within ten days. There are thousands of persons in Detroit whose ancestors came from Southern Europe or Northern Africa, and octopus is usually seen on their tables a couple of times a week.

New Beach Togs Modest In Style

Designers Bow to Conventions of Grandmother's Day—But Only Slightly

Designers of the beach clothes to be worn at winter resorts this year have made a bow to the modesty of grandmother's day but not so deep a bow that there won't be plenty of sun-tanned epidermis around to decorate the cabanas.

A score of pretty models bared (as it were) the new creations last week at the photographers' jamboree at the Surf Club, Miami, Florida, arranged annually by the city publicity bureau and a leading department store.

Prim With Shorts

Typical of the new mode combining demureness with daring was a beige sharkskin playsuit having a bodiced top with puffed sleeves—all very prim so far, but worn with shorts.

Another indication of the trend was the length of the shorts, falling lower than formerly but still shorts—pajama-shorts, the new outfits were called.

Even a revealing halter outfit named "strip tease" had its covering, of a sort. It consisted of a halter and a separate skirt, shirred about the hip, both of which came off to reveal a matching bathing suit of halter and shorts underneath.

Quebec's Own Fascist Leaders

Urge Boycott of Japanese Silks and Toys

Pickets carrying banners protesting Japan's military activities parade in front of the Japanese Consulate in New York. The signs urge a boycott of Japanese silk and toys. The illustrations call attention to the havoc being wrought by bombs.

Horse and Buggy Wired for Sound and Light

If farmers and buggy drivers would take a leaf out of Frank Dyer's book there would be far fewer accidents. Just because Frank, of Whitewater, Wis., prefers his horse and buggy to an auto, you needn't think he's old-fashion. His rig uses more electricity than an auto does. Reading from left to right, he has two harness lights in place of bells on the horse, four spoke lights on each wheel, a spot-light and horn on the dashboard, a radio, a light on the whip-socket, port and starboard lights beside the seat, loud speakers on both sides (one can be seen between the spokes of the rear wheel), and big tail-light with "Howdy" painted on it. Five batteries at the rear furnish current. He says that sometimes when autoists meet him on the road at night they pull up at the side because they don't know what's coming.

The Stars And You

By A. R. WEIR

What the Stars foretell for those born on Dec. 31, Jan. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5 and 6.

★★★

If the date of your birth is listed above, you were born when the sun was in Capricornus—the 10th sign of the Zodiac. This makes you determined and, when your mind is made up, very consistent and cautious. You prefer to live quietly, rather shirking responsibilities and you are not at all demonstrative in your affections.

YOUR OWN BIRTHDATE:

DECEMBER 31: This should be a fortunate year for you—brilliant financially and excellent socially. Your health should be good and relatives should benefit you. You should not allow yourself to become melancholy and should cultivate more faith.

JANUARY 1: There should be a slow and steady improvement in your financial income this year bringing you both prosperity and happiness. Elderly friends will also help you. Saturday is the most favorable day in the week for you. Your family means a great deal to you.

JANUARY 2: You will rise in life through your own efforts. Those born under Capricornus usually acquire wealth by their steady and patient industry. Many journeys are indicated this year also excellent prospects socially and financially.

JANUARY 3: The inner meaning of your sign—Capricornus—is SERVICE and you try to be a true servant of humanity. Try not to live so much in the past—keep pace with progress around you. Money should come to you this year in many small ways.

JANUARY 4: Many changes are indicated for you this year—promotion, new work, journeys though the year is mixed for social affairs. You do not care to take advice and prefer to work things out for yourself. Your friends and family are anxious to help you if you will give them this pleasure.

JANUARY 5: You are sincere, cautious and thrifty. Be careful, however, that you do not become mean and over careful. The coming year should be excellent for you especially in dealing with the opposite sex and many visits to places of amusement are indicated.

JANUARY 6: Although the coming year may be somewhat unsettled, happiness is shown in social and love affairs. Complications may arise through correspondence and a woman may help you in your business affairs. Three is your lucky number. Those born on this date usually make excellent parents.

If you birth date is not listed above and you would like a horoscope for any birth date in the year, or if you would like a complete personal horoscope for any date listed above, send 10c to A. R. Weir, 73 Adelaide St. W., Toronto. Please print your name, address and birth date plainly.

The SPORTS BROADCAST

By Al Ryckman

Snoring Sam was late getting in this morning, but reported they had such a crowd for Christmas dinner that they had to make ground rules.

Meanwhile (since the sporting world is at a standstill, due to the holiday week and the downtown exchange departments), we guess it would be a good idea to catch up with the mail. So here goes. Firstly we find a postcard, which reads:—

"The biggest disappointments in 1937 in my opinion were, the Montreal rugby club, the Cleveland baseball team, the C.N.E. marathon swims, etc., etc." In fact it goes on and on, practically using all available space on the card, except where the stamp is placed. It is not signed, but we guess the gent who wrote it has the right slant on the situation.

Next we have from W.W. a brief letter which refers to hockey games, especially the Saturday night Leaf fixtures, and also a bit of information such as: "Goal tenders should practice watching the play behind them in the corners of the rink by turning the head—not the body. Keep the body in the nets facing out to be ready for a quick pass out from the corner." The letter continues: "On a face-off, a centre ice player will find the trick of running his left skate up alongside the puck while holding his stick hard on the ice, a remarkable method of making sure he gets the puck back to his own wing player."

A movie fan kindly informs us that Sonja Henie, the figure skating star and a favourite of ours (ask the Port Credit News editor), will make a personal appearance at the Maple Leaf Gardens early in the new year. Hurrah! Hurrah!

M.B.S. brings up the argument again that since Port Credit people fail to support their teams (unless they are sure-fire winners) why have any at all. My dear friend, we even suggested a sewing circle for that community when things looked pretty dull during this past summer in the sailor town, but somehow or other that fell through too. Said gentleman also inquires concerning the maestro's girls' softball team.

To tell the truth we don't know just how we stand down at the Motor Park. But next week and the week after, the master minds of the team will be getting together on the old maestro's doorstep for some serious thinking regarding next year's activities and then we will know whether we still have a team for '38 or not. These softball gals amaze an old manager like us. When we meet them in spring practices and enquire where they have been all winter, they casually remark that they were attending high school or college, or that they were working in downtown departmental stores, or looking after some broker's office, or helping mother with the housework, or doing down the preserves or some such lively sport. As we have hardly ever done the dishes or hung out the washing, these winter doings of our infielders and outfielders rather surprise us and we really do think the exercise some of our players indulge in, during the off season, is a bit terrific—eh, what!

IN CONCLUSION

The rest seems to be miscellaneous. A group of youngsters (all over eighteen years of age) drops us an invitation to a North Toronto New Year's Eve party. So naturally we're happy about the whole thing, like the Stroud boys. So put on another drum-stick pals, we will be there. And just before the old year rolls away, we would like to thank all the lads and lassies who sent us Christmas cards.

With the Rose Bowl game in California and the punch bowl in the living room, we guess that we will be listening with our New Year's dinner to the shindig between Alabama and California. So Happy New Year friends, and we do mean you.

Letters from the Dolbys

Lawrence Dolby, a Streetsville boy, and his wife, write about their work on the dark continent. They are working under Rev. Mr. Near a brother-in-law of Mr. J. Percy Fellowes, Streetsville (North).

LATEST NEWS FROM AFRICA

Our readers will remember that Mr. Dolby, returning from Kitwit after seeking dental aid, was stranded at a Mission Station called Kafumba, eighty miles north of Kandale, for some days before he could be conveyed home. This is an independent station of the Mennonite Brethren, founded by Mr. and Mrs. Janzen twenty-five years ago. He had sweet fellowship with them while there, but Mrs. Janzen was ill with fever, and passed away about a week after Mr. Dolby had left them.

After the dedication of the new Kandale Church, Mr. and Mrs. Dolby went to visit Mr. Janzen in his sorrow, in order to comfort him. He writes—

"We had services all along the way, and had a blessed time. We arrived here about three weeks after the death of Mrs. Janzen. We were the first white people to visit them since their great sorrow. How glad they were. We planned at first to stay about two or three weeks, but Mr. Janzen wanted us to come and live with him, and open up his house, and carry on as if his dear helpmate was still with him. We feel it is our duty to try and brighten his path of life in the small way we are able to.

We are free to come and go as we wish. We can leave whenever we have word from the Government, or otherwise, to go forward. We are free to go on our evangelistic trips into the tribe we are interested in, or any tribe."

Mrs. Dolby writes—

"Here we are about eighty miles from Kandale. We left there with a caravan of about 31 men, and as it had been raining in the early morning it was nearly 10 a.m. before all our porters arrived, as a group of them came from a village a couple of hours away, but as soon as they were assigned to either a tipoi or box we were on our way, Mr. Chambers coming (on bicycle) a little distance with us. During our four days' travel we covered hills and plain with excellent weather, with two of the days being a little cloudy, which were a help to the porters in travelling. The last place we slept was quite a large place, which was just before we crossed the Lutshima River. The country is beautiful along the Lutshima! Laurence put up the tent early in the afternoon and there was a large crowd around all the time. As I was preparing supper the kiddies flocked around and later when we washed, combed our hair, etc., they sure were amused. During this time we were entertained by the music of two women fighting, and could they talk—you have never heard anything like it, and this continued for some time. They then continued in another section of the village, and no doubt they came to blows, which is nothing unusual, and they sometimes use their teeth and nails.

At sundown and before we had our supper, our organ was carried into the center of the village and a good crowd attended, including native police. They all listened attentively, and if someone did talk another would hush him up. There were a group of kiddies there that used to have a native teacher, and they knew the hymns we were singing in the Kikongo, so we let them go ahead and sing for us, and they did real well. Many times when one prays these non-Christians (native) think its a big joke, to talk with our eyes closed, but our house boy believes in prayer and he didn't hesitate any time, and most of them were reverent. We know the Lord will water the seed which has been sown, if we are faithful in sowing it. With love to all,

Dorothy.

P.S. We have just received an assignment here—Laurence to teach the S.S. lesson to the teachers and I'm to have three Bible Classes a week with the younger girls, and one class a week with the older ones. Pray for wisdom and memory in the language study. Laurence is also working on a new house here, and I'm cook for the three of us—Mr. Janzen and ourselves.

What the New Year Should Mean to You

It does not seem a very long time ago that we were talking about the coming of a new year, with its necessity for the balancing of all accounts, that we might learn just how we stood with regard to the profits and losses of the twelve months that were about to be filed away in the archives of life as ancient history. And now that that "new" year, too, has gone we are face to face with another New Year's day—face to face with the same old problems.

To many of us the year that has passed has not been particularly pleasant. To some of us, in fact, it may have brought so many frustrated hopes, so many disappointments, that we are more than usually glad to bid it godspeed that we may hail with joy the advent of a new and, as we fondly hope, a better opportunity. Yet, as a matter of fact, if we stop for a moment to look back over the twelve months that are now so rapidly drawing to a close, there are but few of us who will not find that the old year has been a pretty good year after all.

CELEBRATION UNIVERSAL.

Methods Differ Greatly, but New Year's Is Observed Everywhere.

The commencement of a new year has been held in veneration by every nation of antiquity. Notwithstanding the diversity of opinion as to what is really the beginning of another year, all agree in celebrating some day of joy and festivity.

The ancient Greeks began their year about the summer solstice, June 21; the Persians also in June, the Chinese in March, and the Abyssinians begin their year in August. Among the ancient Mexicans the beginning of the new year was in February.

The new year's day of the Romans previous to the age of Julius Caesar was vague and uncertain and was held generally in March or April. Caesar sent to Egypt for the celebrated astronomer, Sosigenes, by whose assistance the Julian calendar was regulated.

The last day of the old year and the first day of the new were consecrated to the god Janus by these old Romans; hence he is usually represented with two faces (looking backward and forward).

The ceremony of wishing one another a happy new year originated with the Romans, as did the custom of presenting new year gifts.

In northern Europe the druids went into the woods on the last night of the year and cut the mistletoe with a golden instrument. This was afterward distributed among the people, who preserved it about their persons as an amulet against the dangers of battle.

In Scotland New Year's eve is called Hogmenay or Singin een, because in certain parts of the country the young men are in the habit of going about the country singing a long song suitable to the season and begging meals and money, which are generally distributed among the poor.

JANUS.

'Tis mine to guard the portal of the year,
To close or open to the seasons four
And to the importuning throng of days.
Sometimes I hear the tread of stormy feet,
Hoarse trumpet blasts and loud assaulting blows
And threats to pull my ancient fortress down,
But other times they come with flatteries smooth,
Entreating, "Janus, Janus, let us in!"
I watchful stand; I will not turn the key
Until my glass and fingered dial stern
Declare—the moment ripe. Two ways I look;
Two faces I present—one seamed with old
And gray with looking on the frozen past,
One fresh as morn and fronting days to be.
* * * * * * *
Now, while the surging, deep toned bells lament
The passed year, e'er fickle, they shall change
Their solemn burden for a round of joy,
Chiming the praises of the year new crowned.

—Edith Thomas in "New Year's Masque."

Some Lucky New Year Ways.

Throughout Europe many delightful New Year customs prevail. In Scandinavia a feast is always prepared for the little birds, which might otherwise go hungry on account of the deep snows.

In Holland, as in Scotland, the wind is noted with care, because the luck of the year will be determined by the direction whence it blows. The south wind brings heat and fertility, the west wind milk and fish, the north wind cold and storm and the east wind a fruitful season.

In Italy the New Year is a day of greeting and good will and special feasting. Sicilian peasants take advantage of the fete to drive to town in their gay carts, so that the country roads are merry with the music of tinkling bells.

And Swiss folk, practical, industrious, stop their work for the nonce to visit friends, even when they have to carry their babies down the mountain slopes in cradles on their heads.

Adorning the Temples.

Trimmyng of the Temples with hangynges, floures, boughs and garlands (at New Year) was taken of the Heathens people whiche decked their idoles and houses with such arraye.—Fifteenth Century Writer.

The New Year and the Old Year.

The old year and the new year meet,
And one goes back to God again,
And one stays on for joy or pain.
